

Ford, Carter ready lines for debate of their lives

PRESIDENT FORD

by United Press International

President Ford rehearsed his lines all over the White House Wednesday and Jimmy Carter pored over briefing books against that moment Thursday when they meet on a Philadelphia theater stage, take seats that look like bar stools and begin the argument of their lives.

The first of three 1976 presidential campaign debates — direct descendant of the 1960 Nixon-Kennedy clashes — opens under stark television lights at 8:30 p.m. CDT on the stripped-bare stage of the old Walnut Theater.

There, for 90 minutes, three reporters will fire questions alternately at Ford and Carter before a television audience of scores of millions — including countless uncommitted voters — in a pressure-cooker ordeal likely to have a major, if not decisive, impact on the election.

Thursday's debate will be confined to domestic and economic issues. The Oct. 6 followup will cover foreign and defense policy and the Oct. 22 finale will be a free-for-all open to questions on any subject.

In Washington, the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals denied independent candidate Eugene McCarthy's request that it block the debate until formal argument of his demand to be included. The ruling dashed McCarthy's hopes for getting a piece of the first debate action.

With the political stakes as high as they can be, the Republican and Democratic nominees rested and studied intensively on the eve of Round One.

Beyond the standard campaign isues, this year's debates held great potential for personal bombshell questions hard to rehearse and already controversial: What about Carter's sally comments on adultery in that Playboy interview? What about reports Ford's congressional campaign finances are under investigation? Where would Carter, and Ford, set the level for increased income taxation?

White House spokesmen quit ducking questions about Ford's training schedule and told reporters he is rehearsing his answers to every conceivable question. He has been doing so for four or five days. He plans to do so even after he arrives in Philadelphia Thursday.

Press secretary Ron Nessen said Ford's aides, himself included, pop questions at Ford wherever the President may be — in the White House family theater, in the Oval Office, in his private inner office, in the family living quarters.

He confirmed speech consultant Don Penny, the man who prepped Ford for his Republican convention speech, is coaching him again, but denied knowledge of whether Ford is using a videotape camera to check the instant-replay of his rehearsals.

Nessen said Ford watched a re-run of the first debate between John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon in 1960 as part of his preparation.

In Plains, Ga., Carter's advisers declined to be so detailed on the preparations. They said he was honing up on the issues, which have been summarized for him in two, thick briefing books, and discussing the debate with

50% reduction urged

Parking requirement cut asked for downtown

The Arlington Heights village administration Wednesday night recommended to the plan commission that parking requirements in the village's central business district be reduced by 50 per cent or more.

Trustee August Bettman, chairman of the village board's special downtown improvements committee, and Village Planner Joseph Kessler told the plan commission that the rigid parking requirements have been the major causes for the lack of development in downtown Arlington Heights.

"The reason we have a stagnant downtown is that we have unreasonable parking requirements. No one could ever provide the parking required by our code," Kessler said.

"It (the parking ordinance) kills everything economically before you get it off the drawing board. I don't know what the village board was thinking when this was passed, but they absolutely killed the downtown," Bettman said.

THE PARKING requirements for the central business district were passed in 1963.

In recent years, several major developments have been proposed but were eventually withdrawn because of the stringent parking requirements, Kessler said.

The proposed changes to the downtown parking ordinance are specially designed to encourage high-rise development.

"If we're going to grow, we must do so vertically," Kessler said.

Bettman said he favors the recommendation of his committee that the parking requirements be removed entirely for a limited period of time to encourage quick development in the downtown shopping area.

"I'M WILLING TO accept a compromise plan, but the parking requirements must be dramatically reduced. I think most of the downtown land will be developed in two or three years if there's a parking garage built and the parking ordinance is reduced," Bettman said.

Several plan commissioners agreed with Bettman that the parking requirements should be reduced by more than 50 per cent.

The commission will meet Wednesday to further discuss the proposed changes.

Parks referendum OK to increase tax bill $12

Arlington Heights homeowners could be billed $12.03 more next year if the park district-sponsored Oct. 2 referendum passes, commissioners say.

At a public meeting on the referendum Wednesday night attended by seven residents, commissioners said the average Arlington Heights home, valued at $68,658, would be assessed $5.60 more annually if the $1.3 million park development item is approved and $6.43 more if the golf course proposal is supported.

"These figures are to pay for general obligation bonds and are based on 22 per cent of the fair market value," Wayne Benjamin, park district financial consultant, said.

IF THE REFERENDUM passes, the 18-hole golf course will be built on (Continued on page 6)

Missing Glueckert girl seen in Texas

by DANN GIRE

Barbara Glueckert, a 14-year-old Mount Prospect girl missing since Aug. 21, and fugitive Thomas Urlacher, 24, have been identified by a Chicago man as the persons who gave him a ride while hitchhiking in Texas.

Van Guy, 9350 Dobson St., told police Miss Glueckert, Urlacher and an unidentified man with blond hair, picked him up Aug. 28 in Lubbock, Tex. Guy told police he rode in a white 1960 Mustang with the trio about 10 hours before being dropped off in El Paso, about 400 miles west of Lubbock.

The Herald also learned the following developments in the case:

• Lubbock police today will issue a local bulletin on Miss Glueckert and Urlacher.

• A Barrington Hills man has told police Urlacher borrowed $1,000 from him two days after Miss Glueckert's disappearance.

• It is believed Miss Glueckert and her companion are headed for Flagstaff, Ariz., where Urlacher reportedly has friends.

MOUNT PROSPECT Det. Sgt. Patrick Hallihan said Wednesday that Guy had been traveling through Texas and was unaware police were seeking the girl and Urlacher until he returned to Chicago Sept. 3 and read local newspapers. "He came to us before the reward ($5,000) was announced," Hallihan said.

Guy told police he rode in the back seat of the car next to the teen-age girl he later identified as Miss Glueckert. The two men rode in the front seat, Guy said.

During conversation, Guy said he asked the girl where she was from.

Miss Glueckert replied "Mount Prospect." The blond man then turned around and told the girl to "shut up," Hallihan said.

Guy told police the blond man occasionally referred to the dark-haired man, (later identified as Urlacher) as "Tom."

After Guy was dropped off in El Paso, he reported the travelers told him they were headed toward Flagstaff, Ariz.

DET. JACK GNIOT said Guy's story of the car ride is officially classified as "unconfirmed."

But Robert Glueckert, Barbara's father, is optimistic that Guy's story,

"is probably most credible in relation to other stories of people seeing her."

Glueckert said Wednesday he "hopes the story is correct. I don't really know. If it is a very credible story I would hope that it would be thoroughly investigated so that it would either be discounted or lead to the return of Barbara."

"All I'm worried about at this time is getting her home," he said. "There may have been some sort of mental change in her, but we can't worry about that now. If she's safe and alive, that's important."

LUBBOCK POLICE Capt. William Cox of juvenile division said a local bulletin on Urlacher and Miss Glueckert is being issued today.

Lubbock police so far have not been officially involved in the search for the pair, last seen Aug. 21 at a rock concert in Huntley, Ill.

In a related incident Wednesday, Mount Prospect police said a Barrington Hills man admitted he loaned Urlacher $1,000 just before Urlacher left the Chicago area.

David Reiter, 19, of Rte. 2 County Line Rd., told police he gave Urlacher the money Aug. 23 and is still waiting to be repaid.

Det. Richard Pascoe said Reiter has been in the habit of loaning Url-cher sums of money on a short term basis "with hundreds of dollars in interest." Until now, police said, Urlacher had always repaid the loans.

THE HERALD obtained a copy of a letter police said Reiter sent Urlacher Aug. 28. It is unknown if Urlacher read the letter.

"I know what kind of trouble that you're in. But that's no excuse for not calling me at all," the letter reads. "There is no way I can take that loss. No way."

The letter, signed by Reiter, stated that if Urlacher did not contact Reiter by Sept. 3, Reiter would go to the police.

Dodds trial set for Oct. 14

The trial of Bruce H. Dodds, vice president of the First Arlington National Bank under federal indictment on charges of embezzlement and misapplication of funds, has been set for Oct. 14. U. S. District Court Judge Alfred Y. Kirkland set the date Wednesday during a preliminary hearing. Dodds, 30, faces a four-count federal indictment in connection with charges that he embezzled and misapplied $18,000 in bank funds between April 22, 1971, and July 12, 1971, while he served as bank auditor. Dodds' indictment returned by a federal grand jury April 15, came after disclosures by The Herald that the bank was the target of a federal directive to reorganize loan policies and that the bank had been named as a defendant in several multimillion dollar lawsuits involving alleged mismanagement.

Stricter day-care laws urged

Des Plaines officials are preparing an ordinance which would impose stricter zoning regulations on church day-care centers wishing to operate in residential areas. City Atty. Charles Hug was ordered to prepare the ordinance after the city council rejected a zoning board of appeals recommendation against the stringent regulations. Day-care centers operating in church buildings and residential buildings currently are exempt from zoning laws governing other day-care centers. If the proposal passes, new church day-care centers wishing to operate in residential areas would be required to obtain a special use permit and meet the same standards imposed on commercial and nonprofit centers. Existing centers would not be affected.

Strikers picket Osco

Clerks on strike against Osco Drug Stores Wednesday picketed the firm's distribution center at 2401 Lunt Ave., Elk Grove Village, and an Osco store at 1400 Lee St., Des Plaines. A meeting Wednesday with federal mediators failed to end the three-day old strike, said Ed Jablonski, vice president, communications for the United Retail Workers union. The strike affects about 2,200 clerks at the 77 Chicago-area Osco stores. Pharmacists are not affected. Major issues in the strike are wages, Sunday overtime pay, employee discounts and length of contract, Jablonski said.

$1,000 fine against developer

A Cook County Circuit Court judge Wednesday levied a $1,000 fine against the developer of the uncompleted Arlington Square apartment complex for 20 health and safety violations. The fine was levied by Judge Myron T. Gombert against developer Plato Foutas & Co. The development was the target of a two-pronged village attack aimed at forcing a cleanup of the financially troubled project at Rand Road and Ill. Rte. 53. The project was declared a public nuisance by the village because of open stairwells, and elevator shafts, collapsed walls, basements filled with water, weeds and general construction debris.

Train sparks brush fires

A westbound Milwaukee Road train sparked brush fires alongside its track near Rodenburg Road on the southern fringe of Schaumburg late Wednesday night. Firefighters from Schaumburg, Hanover Park and Roselle responded to the fires, first reported by a passerby at 10:38 p.m. Wednesday north of the railroad tracks near the Schaumburg Airport. The fires reportedly were ignited by sparks thrown off by a jammed brake on a passing train. No property damage or injuries were reported in the fires.

Hospital to offer rescue course

A basic rescue course in cardio-pulmonary resuscitation will be offered at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, at 7 p.m. on the first Monday and Tuesday of each month, beginning Oct. 4 and 5. Reservations are required.

Persons attending both sessions and meeting the standards set by the American Heart Assn. will receive certification as CPR basic rescuers.

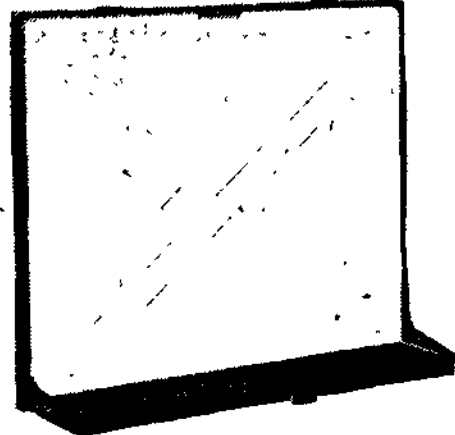

A one-night noncertification training program at the hospital will continue at 7:30 p.m. on the third Friday of every month.

For more information on either course, or to make a reservation, call 259-1000, ext. 210, weekdays between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Ford, Carter clash on TV tonight

advisers. Carter's spokesmen, however, insisted he was not rehearsing the debate format with those aides.

Setting for the first clash is a stage so bare there is, literally, no place to hide: Two unadorned podiums set seven or eight feet apart for the candidates, a pair of tall, backed swivel chairs like fancy bar stools, a table for the three panelists and the moderator, NBC's Edwin Newman. An oval platform for the podiums. No drops. No special decorations.

The panelists will question the candidates alternately. Three minutes is allotted to answer the main question, two minutes to answer a followup question and two for comment by the other man. Each candidate will get three minutes to sum up at the end, but no opening statement.

An audience of about 500 — half journalists, half guests of the sponsoring League of Women voters — will occupy the balcony and mezzanine, but not the orchestra seats. It has been cautioned to maintain respectful silence and the networks have been forbidden to televise audience reaction.

A lawyer for groups that wanted to picket the theater said the Secret Service had informed him a four square-block area around the place will be off limits for "national security reasons."

In Urbana, meantime, University of Illinois historian Robert W. Johannsen said the Carter-Ford debates probably will be pretty dull compared with the Lincoln-Douglas clashes of 1858.

Part of the reason is that the issues are not as clearly defined this year as they were then, Johannsen said. He also cited the lack of a live, unscreened audience as a factor.

Each of the seven Lincoln-Douglas debates was "geared to the audience and the geographic area of the state," Johannsen said.

"This lent a dramatic and exciting character to the debates. Spontaneous interaction with the audience also added excitement. Hecklers, for example, had to be squelched and unexpected questions had to be answered," he said.

"The debaters in 1858 had clearly opposing opinions on national issues which divided the country. These included slavery and states' rights versus federal power. Ford and Carter don't have such sharply defined issues to argue," Johannsen said.

"Their debate, I think, probably will be a carefully planned TV entertainment instead of the unpredictable and lively exchange between Lincoln and Douglas."

Lincoln's campaign for the Senate in 1858, including the debates, helped catapult him to national prominence and his party's presidential nomination two years later.

Ford signs $104.3 billion defense bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford Thursday signed the biggest military appropriations bill in U. S. history — $104.3 billion — promising that higher requests would follow.

"I'm convinced that this new pattern must and will be sustained in future years, and I am personally, fully committed to it," Ford said, asking Congress to pass even more money for shipbuilding before it adjourns.

"After eight years of decline, we are providing for real growth in our national defense efforts. This bill reflects a new awareness that this country can no longer shortchange our national defense," he said in an East Room ceremony attended by members of Congress, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and military and veterans organizations.

Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld says the Pentagon probably would seek more than the $111.4 billion in appropriations Ford said in February would be required for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, 1977.

But Rumsfeld told a White House news conference that Congress action this year, even cutting $3.7 billion from Ford's original $108 billion request, was a step in the right direction.

The bill contains more than $1 billion for the new B1 bomber, but Congress restricted expenditures to $87 million a month until Feb. 1, after the next president takes office. Jimmy Carter questions whether the B1 is needed.

The measure contains $6.1 billion for new ships, but the administration says $1.1 billion more is needed for four frigates and a nuclear-powered strike cruiser. That measure has passed a House subcommittee, but is unlikely to be passed by the Congress, which adjourns Oct. 2.

"The shipbuilding program is of critical importance to our ability to control the seas in the event of a conflict," the President said. "I urgently call upon this Congress to approve this program before adjournment."

"This bill will put the United States on a path of providing annual, real increases to our defense establishment," Rumsfeld said. "We're not going to allow ourselves to slide down that trend line to a position of inferiority."

Aides distributed a paper saying the Soviet Union increased its military expenditures while the United States had not provided real growth-spending did not keep up with inflation.

These statistics, with intelligence material on Soviet capabilities, were used in meetings with members of Congress, including some at the White House. Although Rumsfeld said he promised Ford to stay out of politics, he has made this same case across the country against Jimmy Carter.

Rumsfeld said the Democratic presidential candidate's contention that $5.7 billion in waste could be cut from the Pentagon budget carried "the implication . . . the American people can have a strong national defense on the cheap and it's just plain not true."

Japan warned of 'Foxbat' consequences by Soviets

TOKYO (UPI) — Soviet officials filed a protest with the Foreign Ministry Wednesday warning Japan of "grave consequences" for failing to return a defecting Russian pilot and the jet fighter in which he made his escape.

It was the second protest note filed by Dmitri Polyansky, Soviet ambassador to Japan, since Air Force

Lt. Viktor Belenko flew a supersonic MiG25, known as the "Foxbat," to northern Japan on Sept. 6 in a bid for asylum in the United States.

In his latest statement, Polyansky said Japan "chose to strain the Japan-Soviet relations" by ignoring a demand for immediate return of the plane and its pilot and warned that Japan's "unfriendly acts will bring grave consequences."

The protest note did not specify what was meant by "grave consequences."

Deputy Foreign Minister Katsuke Arita said the protest would be conveyed to Foreign Minister Zenaro Katsuka but maintained that "some points in the statement are unacceptable."

He said Japan is handling the plane incident entirely in accordance with international law.

Polyansky also charged that Belenko, who has since been allowed asylum in the United States last week, was drugged during an interview with a Soviet official prior to being handed over to American authorities.

The ambassador said the interview was held while Belenko was surrounded by Japanese police, an indication that the pilot was under the influence of "narcotics."

The MiG25, called an "intelligence windfall" by U.S. officials, has been partly dismantled and examined by Japanese and American experts at Hakodate airport, 500 miles north of Tokyo, where it landed.

Japanese officials have said they will return the plane to the Soviets following the examination. They maintain the right to hold the plane temporarily because it invaded Japan's air space without permission.

The MiG was scheduled to be flown aboard a U. S. Air Force Galaxy transport to Hyakuri Air Force Base, about 55 miles northeast of Tokyo, late Wednesday for further examination.

However, officials said the transfer may be delayed until Friday because residents fear the community will be invaded by leftwing Japanese supporting the Soviets.

Greyhound hits school bus; 26 hurt

MIAMI (UPI) — A Greyhound bus Wednesday skidded into the rear of a school bus which had halted to unload children, injuring at least 26 persons.

The Florida Highway Patrol said there were no fatalities nor critical injuries. Five of the injured were on the school bus.

"Most of the people in the Greyhound seemed to have suffered minor injuries like broken teeth or bloody noses," a highway patrol spokesman said.

The accident occurred on busy U.S. 1 in south Dade County during a light rain.

Trooper John J. Rondone said the yellow school bus, carrying five special education students and two drivers from Cutler Ridge Junior High, stopped in the right lane of the divided, four-lane highway to unload children. Its special stop lights were flashing, he said.

A large truck, following the school bus, swerved into the left lane and passed to avoid collision. Rondone said the Greyhound bus, south bound from Miami to the Florida Keys with 30 passengers aboard, was following the truck.

"The Greyhound driver didn't see the school bus until he was up close," Rondone said. "The road was wet and when he put on the brakes, the Greyhound skidded and slammed into the back of the school bus."

A small panel truck following the Greyhound bus swerved into the left lane and clipped the passenger bus slightly. No one in the panel truck was hurt.

Water ice composes Mars polar cap

Viking project scientists reported with considerable excitement Wednesday they have discovered two new gases in the atmosphere of Mars and have determined the northern polar cap of the red planet is composed of water ice rather than carbon dioxide. Despite the new knowledge gleaned from an instrument package landed on Mars from the Viking 2 spacecraft, the scientists declined at a news briefing at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory to say whether the discoveries increased the chances of some form of life on Mars.

Bill denying pay hikes to Ford

Congress Wednesday passed and sent to the White House a bill that would deny a proposed 5 per cent pay increase to members of Congress, judges and other high government officials. The one-year pay freeze, which would affect top officials from Vice President Nelson Rockefeller on down, was contained in a compromise $943.3 million appropriations bill needed to run congressional operations for the new fiscal year.

FBI investigations cut back: Kelley

Director Clarence Kelley reported Tuesday the FBI has cut back its investigations of domestic security threats from 21,414 cases in 1975 to 626. "As of Sept. 20, 1976," Kelley told the Senate's new intelligence oversight committee, "this figure has been further reduced to 626. This includes investigations of 78 organizations, and 548 individuals." He declined to specify individuals or groups, but indicated they advocate the overthrow of the U.S. government and are violence-prone.

Three American-made Hawk anti-aircraft missiles exploded on a launching pad Wednesday night, killing two West German soldiers and injuring three others, the defense ministry announced. ## Africa 'peaceful solution' endorsements grow NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger Wednesday picked up another key endorsement from a black African leader for his plan to bring black rule to Rhodesia by negotiation rather than war.

Kissinger then flew to Kenya, one of America's strongest allies in black Africa, to brief President Jomo Kenyatta on his shuttle to try to avoid a bloodbath in southern Africa.

U. S. officials said Kissinger would fly to Kenyatta's country headquarters in Nakuru Thursday morning, then leave for London and Manchester for final consultations with British Foreign Minister Anthony Crosland and Prime Minister James Callaghan before returning to Washington.

Earlier in Kinshasa, President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire said that Kissinger "had convinced the Africans of the need for a peaceful solution to southern Africa."

"Until June, we were convinced that there had to be an armed solution. But in the three months that have passed, we have been persuaded of his conditions for a peaceful solution," Mobutu said.

At the end of two hours of talks with Mobutu, Kissinger said he left with the impression that he had "the strong encouragement of President Mobutu" for the package on bringing black majority rule to Rhodesia that he negotiated during his 10-day shuttle.

The only question which still remained was whether Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith will make the necessary formal public acceptance of black majority rule in Rhodesia.

(In Salisbury, the Rhodesian cabinet discussed the proposals for a second day and Smith said they had reached a "consensus" but would not say what the consensus was.)

Kissinger — as well as Nyerere and Mobutu — said they expected Smith to make the required statement on Friday, and then a constitutional conference for Rhodesia can be called by Great Britain. U. S. officials think such a conference could begin within two months.

Mobutu, after his talks with the Secretary, said it depends on Britain whether it will be late this year or early next year.

House panel decides against Schorr punitive action

The House Ethics Committee decided Wednesday to take no punitive action against CBS reporter Daniel Schorr for refusing to divulge the source of a leaked intelligence report. In a series of climax votes that avoided a constitutional confrontation over free press issues, the panel also lifted its subpoena against Schorr and left him free to resume covering Congress if he and CBS wants. In effect, the panel conceded defeat in its five-month, $150,000 effort to discover who gave Schorr a copy of the secret House Intelligence Committee report he had published in the Village Voice newspaper in February. There was laughter in the hearing room when Chairman John Flynt cautioned members the report is "the property of the committee and the House and can not be released to unauthorized persons." One panel member turned to reporters and asked jokingly: "Where's Schorr?"

Hearst, will be arraigned Thursday in Berkeley, Calif. on charges they participated in the newspaper heiress' kidnapping. Miss Hearst testified during her bank robbery trial that William Harris bound and gagged her before she was dragged half naked Feb. 4, 1974, from her Berkeley apartment. She said Mrs. Harris drove the getaway car. The Harrises contend Miss Hearst was brainwashed in jail and has been consistently lying in hope of getting light sentences for herself. Miss Hearst is scheduled to be sentenced Friday on a San Francisco bank robbery conviction in U.S. district court. Kidnap, and assault charges against her are still pending in state court in Los Angeles.

Country music star Tommy Wynette, married for the fourth time two months ago, filed for divorce Tuesday charging her husband, John Michael Tomlin, with "cruel and inhuman treatment." Miss Wynette, 34, charged in the divorce petition that Tomlin is "guilty of such cruel and inhuman treatment as to render further cohabitation unsafe and improper."

Chip Carter, son of the Democratic presidential nominee, does not think his father's comments in an interview with Playboy Magazine are far from the mark. "I think most people, including myself, have mentally lusted after women," said young Carter. He added his family does not subscribe to the magazine.

Retiring Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., is following in the footsteps of other Americans now touring the People's Republic of China. Japanese newspapers quoted a spokesman for the American Liaison Office in Peking as saying Mansfield will remain in the Chinese capital until mid-October.

Lawyers rule 12 judges unqualified

The Chicago Council of Lawyers said Wednesday 12 of the Cook County Circuit Court judges seeking reelection are unqualified. The council, which has 1,100 members, said it based its judgments on legal competence, judicial temperament, character and respect for the law.

Among those found unqualified were Judges Joseph Power and Donald O'Brien, both of whom are considered close to Mayor Richard J. Daley's Democratic organization. Also found unqualified were Judges L. Sheldon Brown, Paul Elward, Harry Isehnitz, Nicholas Machala, Nicholas Matkovic, Benjamin Nelson, Edith Sampson, Chester Strzalka, Wayne Olson and Joseph Wosik.

'Porno film king knew his killer'

Paul Gonsky, the kingpin of Chicago's pornographic movie theaters, apparently knew his killer and knew he was a "hit" target before he was shot down with seven bullets in the Old Town nightclub district, police said Wednesday. Gonsky, 34, who started as a promoter of "art" movies and wound up running the city's biggest string of "skin houses," was killed Tuesday as he locked the door of his expensive foreign car close by the Bijou, a theater specializing in homosexual films which he controlled.

Homicide Commander Joseph Di Leonardi said: "We believe he knew his killer. We believe he knew he was a target. The man was carrying a pistol so he surely felt his life was in danger. It's all an assumption, but apparently he knew the man who shot him."

Medics seek firm employees

Medical investigators are hunting for former employees of a West Chicago chemical firm to see if radioactive dust they inhaled at the plant has caused cancer or other diseases. Dr. Robert Rowland, director of Argonne National Laboratory's Center for Human Radiobiology, said Wednesday he has a staff of 50 trying to track down persons who worked for the Lindsay Light and Chemical Co. from the mid-1930s until it closed three years ago. Though the total number of employees during the period was around 4,800, Rowland said, investigators have concentrated efforts on 580 employees who stood the greatest chance of inhaling a radioactive dust called thorium. Thorium, which was used in the manufacture of mantles for kerosene and gasoline lamps at the plant, is known to cause lung cancer and other breathing and lung disorders.

Quick school penalty ruling urged

Comptroller George Lindberg said Wednesday he hopes the Illinois Supreme Court will rule quickly on his appeal of a lower court decision that Chicago does not have to pay a $53.2 million school-aid penalty. Both Lindberg and State Schools Supt. Joseph Cronin filed the request for an appeal Tuesday. It asks that the Supreme Court reverse Cook County Circuit Court Judge Arthur Dunne's decision that the statute under which the penalty was levied is unconstitutional. Lindberg's attorney, Wayne Anderson, said he intends to file a motion with the Supreme Court Thursday, asking that Dunne's ruling be stayed until the Supreme Court has a chance to rule on the matter.

Illinois briefs

School-aid, tax bill scaled down

The Illinois Senate, meeting late in a special session marked by partisan bickering, Wednesday passed a Democratic amendment which would scale down Gov. Daniel Walker's tax acceleration, then killed a GOP version. The Senate went into caucuses after the action, as they had done most of the day, while both sides of the aisle discussed strategy on bills to be acted on.

The controversy of the session centers around how much of Gov. Daniel Walker's $95 million tax acceleration plan to pass and how much of that money to give to schools in additional aid for this fiscal year. Most of the legislators agree that schools should receive an additional $50 million for this fiscal year. Also in question is a bill which would make major changes in the way money is distributed to schools.

By a 33-17 vote, the Senate passed an amendment to the Walker package which would immediately raise $20 million through acceleration of the rate at which large businesses turn in their sales tax receipts to the state. The amendment, sponsored by Sen. Dawn Clerk Netsch, D-Chicago, would involve about 500 of the state's largest retailers immediately. The amendment provides that another $14 million would be brought in to the state because another 1,000 retailers would be included in the acceleration plan.

The bill as it now stands would accelerate a total of $65 million immediately. Senate Republican leader William Harris said he could not support the Netsch amendment, saying it would not adequately fund changes in the formula change bill.

Illinois key to victory: Mondale

Democratic vice-presidential nominee Walter Mondale told the state AFL-CIO convention Wednesday if he and Jimmy Carter can carry Illinois, "in all likelihood we'll win" the White House. Urging the Springfield crowd to work for a huge labor turnout Nov. 2, Mondale said sheer numbers can spell defeat for President Ford. "There's a lot more of us than there are of them," Mondale said. "Illinois is crucial to the campaign. If we carry Illinois, in all likelihood we'll win. It's a tough fight but you can make the difference."

Mondale then referred to his running-mate's candid remarks about sex. "My staff doesn't want me to say this, but we are a healthier, sexier lot and we have more kids."

In Chicago, Mondale's wife, Joan, said she is sure her husband had "committed adultery in his heart," too. She said it with a smile. The wife of the Democratic vice-presidential nominee, getting her first national campaign exposure, was asked whether she suspected her husband, had "committed adultery" in his heart as his running mate, Jimmy Carter, has said he did.

"Oh, sure," she shrugged. She added she saw nothing wrong in Carter's admission to Playboy Magazine that he occasionally had lustful thoughts about women not his wife.

Strikes keep 15,000 out of school

More than 15,000 students were affected by teachers' strikes in Illinois schools Wednesday. Most of them missed classes completely. There were no signs that any of the strikes in four school districts — three in the Chicago area and one in Canton — would be resolved in time for schools to reopen today. Instead there may be more trouble today in Oak Park where a two-week court order banning a strike by the district's 340 teachers expired Wednesday.

New strikes began Wednesday in Canton and in Midlothian's school district 143. In Canton, 160 of the 178 teachers stayed away from work after a failure Tuesday night to reach a new contract agreement. In Midlothian, 123 teachers went on strike Wednesday morning closing down the district's four elementary schools, which have 2,500 students.

Niles North, East and West high schools were closed Wednesday for the second day and the board of education announced they would remain closed today. The 450 teachers in the Niles district went out on strike at midnight Monday, closing schools for about 7,000 students.

Panel gets retirement village plans

Preliminary plans for a retirement village north of the Lutheran Home and Service for the Aged, 800 W. Oakton St., Arlington Heights, have been presented to the village's plan and subdivision committee.

Plans presented Tuesday call for cottages and apartments for 1,200 persons to be built on the 50-acre site north of the present health care facility.

The development will be called Luther Village. Lutheran Home officials say they hope construction of the first phase will begin next spring and will be ready for occupancy in late 1977.

THE SITE, WHICH is now a cornfield, is bordered by Kennicott, Thomas and Ridge Avenues.

Paul A. Hauer, executive secretary of the Lutheran Home and Service for the Aged, said the entire project should be completed in five years.

"We will develop it as the need goes. We haven't really gone out to sell it yet, but 200 persons have shown a positive, direct interest," Hauer said.

Preliminary architectural plans call for single-story cottages and apartment buildings ranging in height from three to five stories. The cottages will be clustered to form 15 to 20 "mini-neighborhoods." Six apartment buildings also are planned.

AN INTERNAL LOOP road will connect the clusters of cottages, said David Whiteman, an architect for Hoffman Partnership Inc. of St. Louis.

The neighborhood concept is designed so elderly persons can get a sense of identity for elderly residents, Hauer said.

The retirement village will be designed so elderly persons can get a life-long lease for a cottage, but then be able to move to an apartment or to the existing nursing home as they require additional care, Hauer said.

The average age of residents of the retirement village probably will be about 70, he said.

THE APARTMENT buildings will not have an institutional look and plans call for each cluster of cottages to have its own character, Whiteman said.

The plans have been shown to some residents in the area and no objections have been raised, Hauer said. All neighboring homeowner associations will be given a chance to review the plans eventually, he said.

Trial Oct. 14 for banker Dodds

by TONI GINETTI

The trial of Bruce H. Dodds, vice president of the First Arlington National Bank under federal indictment on charges of embezzlement and misapplication of funds, will begin Oct. 14.

U.S. District Judge Alfred Y. Kirkland Wednesday set the date during preliminary court proceedings.

However, Dodds' attorney, Jack Micheletto Wednesday said the trial could be delayed if several other criminal cases pending before Judge Kirkland are not completed by the October date.

DODDS, 30, FACES a four-count federal indictment in connection with charges he embezzled and misapplied $10,000 in bank funds between April 22, 1971, and July 12, 1971, while he was the bank's auditor.

Dodds, son of bank Pres. Douglas Dodds, is on leave from the bank.

Dodds' indictment, returned by a federal grand jury April 15, followed disclosures by The Herald that the bank was the target of a federal directive to reorganize loan policies and that the bank had been named a defendant in several multimillion dollar lawsuits involving alleged mismanagement.

The disclosures also connected Dodds as an officer of a restaurant which received a loan from the bank in 1974.

IN A RELATED matter, action is expected Oct. 20 in federal district court in Houston, Tex., on one of the suits involving the bank.

Barney Kogen, owner of the former Barney's Boots store, Palatine, has charged the bank violated a federal bankruptcy protective order when it allegedly removed some $1.6 million in boots from the store Feb. 21.

The bank is among creditors of the booting firm which filed a federal bankruptcy petition last year.

Larry Evans, attorney for Kogen, said depositions have been taken from Dodds and bank officers Edward J. Silha Jr. and Robert Lawler in connection with the case.

Parks referendum OK to increase tax bill $12

the former Nike base site at Central and Wilke roads and improvements will be made at 22 village parks.

Richard Nelson of 2318 Burke Drive, said the low turnout Wednesday indicates voter apathy toward the referendum.

"I think it's mostly disinterest. As a matter of fact, my wife even asked me why I was coming over," he said.

Nelson said he is interested in the referendum because he golfs.

Park district officials weren't concerned about the lack of public response at the meeting, however.

"REFERENDA OF this type usually generate a low voter turnout," Ed

Murnane, public relations consultant to the park district, said, "but we're confident it's going to pass."

Wednesday's meeting was at Camelot Park. Two public hearings on the referendum are scheduled next week at other sites.

Tuesday at Pioneer Park and Wednesday at Heritage Park commissioners will meet residents to explain the proposals and answer questions. Both meetings will be at 8 p.m.

Developer fined for violations

The developer of the uncompleted Arlington Square apartment development Wednesday was fined $1,000 in Cook County Circuit Court for 20 health and safety violations.

The fines against Plato Fofas & Co. were levied by Associate Circuit Court Judge Myron T. Gomberg.

The violations were issued by Daniel Tarry, the village's environmental health officer, during the first three weeks of September as part of a two-pronged attack by the village to force a cleanup at the financially-troubled development at Rand Road and Ill. Rte. 53.

ON AUG. 13 Circuit Court Judge Richard A. Jozak ordered Fofas to cleanup the Arlington Square site within 10 days. Arlington Heights officials testified that the project was hazardous and unsanitary because of open stairwells and elevator shafts, collapsed walls, basements filled with water, weeds and general construction debris.

Village Prosecutor Ernest Blomquist said all improvements ordered by Jozak have not been completed, but the village has not asked for contempt of court charges against Fofas because the developer is in the process of making the improvements.

The village board has declared the Arlington Square project a public nuisance and has instituted condemnation proceedings.

Work on the $13 million project began in 1974 but was halted about a year ago when Fofas ran into financial problems.

Five juveniles arrested for theft of autos

Arlington Heights police have arrested five juveniles who allegedly stole a car in the village and another in Rolling Meadows and license plates from a third auto in Buffalo Grove.

Police said they arrested two 13-year-olds, two 15-year-olds and a 16-year-old, all of Arlington Heights, after staking out the stolen Rolling Meadows car the youths allegedly left in the parking lot of Northwest Community Hospital.

The youths were arrested at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday by five detectives after the youths returned for the car.

Police said the youths first stole a car from the parking lot of Pioneer Park in Arlington Heights at 10 a.m. Sunday and parked it on Hicks Road in northern Rolling Meadows, where they stole another car from the parking lot of an office Monday afternoon.

The youths reportedly stole license plates from a Buffalo Grove auto and put it on the Arlington Heights auto Tuesday.

Police charged all five youths with auto theft in a petition of delinquency to be submitted to Juvenile Division of Cook County Circuit Court and turned the youths over to their parents.

Homecoming starts Monday at Hersey

Hersey High School homecoming activities begin Monday when students will decorate school halls from 2:30 to 5 p.m.

A powderpuff football game will be at 8 p.m. Tuesday. Students will vote on the homecoming king and queen candidates during lunch Wednesday with the coronation scheduled at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

Friday's activities begin with a pep assembly at 2 p.m. A car rally begins at 3:30 p.m.

The homecoming football game begins at 8 p.m. when Hersey plays Arlington High School, at the Hersey stadium, 1000 E. Thomas Ave., Arlington Heights.

The homecoming dance will be at 8 p.m. Saturday with the "Penny Royal" band performing.

Harper alumni grade point outranks average: Lucas

by JOHN N. FRANK

Harper College students who have transferred to state schools are doing better academically than the average Illinois community college transfer student, Harper officials said.

John A. Lucas, Harper's director of planning and research, said that information supplied by Eastern Illinois University, Charleston; Illinois State, Normal; University of Illinois, Champaign; Southern Illinois, Carbondale; and the University of Illinois Circle Campus, Chicago, shows Harper students achieving higher grade point averages than the average community college transfer student and in some cases higher than students who began their studies at those schools.

Guerin A. Fischer, vice president for student services, said that the latest information supplied by the five state schools is consistent with information regarding past performance by Harper students who transfer to four-year institutions.

LUCAS SAID HE recently received the following information:

- As of this summer, 24 Harper alumni who transferred to Eastern had an average grade point of 3.05 on a 4 scale compared to a 2.90 average for all community college transfer students.
- Harper alumni attending Illinois State last spring had an average grade point of 2.84 on a 4 scale compared to a 2.72 average for all community transfer students, a 2.88 average for students who transferred from other four-year colleges and a 2.78 average for students who began their higher education there.
- The 45 to 50 Harper alumni at the University of Illinois, Champaign, had an average grade point of 3.71 on a 5 scale in 1975 compared to a 3.59 average for all community college transfer students, a 3.89 for students transferring from other four-year institutions and a 4.02 for students who began as freshmen at Illinois.
- The 221 Harper alumni at Southern Illinois achieved a 2.72 average on a 4 scale for the 1975-76 school year compared to a 2.62 for all community college transfer students and a 2.52 for students who began at Southern.
- Harper students at the University of Illinois Circle Campus ranked fourth as a group compared to all other community college transfer students, with an average of 3.77 on a 5 scale. That study also showed that 78 per cent of the Harper students who transfer there were still there one year later.

Lucas said that since each university uses a somewhat different format in reporting such data to Harper and since Northern Illinois, DeKalb, where the greatest number of Harper alumni are, is reluctant to release any such information, Harper also conducts studies of its own to see what happens to students after they finish their studies at Harper.

One such study conducted last year showed that "Harper alumni average .17 of a grade-point higher at their new institution than their grade point average at Harper."

FISCHER SAID much of the credit for the high level of achievement by Harper alumni must go to area elementary and high schools which students attend before coming to Harper.

"We think our high schools and elementary schools are excellent," Fischer said.

Lucas said the studies regarding how Harper alumni do at other schools are used to review Harper's own curriculum and update or revise programs.

"Otherwise you go along and continue turning out a product and you don't know what you're turning out," Lucas said.

New blood supplies still needed

An areawide blood shortage is starting to show some signs of easing, but blood supplies still are very tight, the North Suburban Blood Center reported Wednesday.

Dan Connor, director of the blood center, said several open heart operations have had to be rescheduled because of blood shortages. Use of blood at the 11 North and Northwest suburban hospitals supplied by the center has been up 25 to 30 per cent over a year ago, he said.

"It's not that people aren't giving, or are giving any less than they have in the past. But we have been using more blood all summer long," Connor said.

Type A blood is in particularly short supply right now, he said.

THE BLOOD SUPPLY picture is expected to improve this fall as schools and churches resume their regularly scheduled blood drives, Connor said.

"We're starting to see the end of the line. It's going to get better. Already supplies are not as low as a week ago," he said.

The blood center's new frozen blood program is operating "fairly well," Connor said. But the summer's shortages have not allowed the center to build up reserves of frozen blood.

"Over the fall and winter we will be freezing more blood and this should help us out next summer," Connor said.

Persons who are interested in donating a pint of blood can call the North Suburban Blood Center, Northbrook, 490-9040, or the community hospital near their home.

Death finds Oscar, a loner in life, sitting by himself

His name was Oscar Maegli. He lived a simple life, or at least it appeared that way. Oscar never bothered anyone nor did he ask for charity. He loved to watch the eight cats and kittens who were his only companions on the quiet, dormant farm. Oscar called them all "Kitty."

The telephone rang late Tuesday afternoon. A man identified himself as investigator Philip Bettiker of the Cook County Sheriff's Police. He asked whether I knew a man named Oscar Maegli.

Sure I knew Oscar. He lived alone in the converted garage apartment on a defunct 10-acre Schoenbeck Road farm in rural Wheeling.

That apartment had been Oscar's home since April 1, 1958. And the old carpenter was allowed to remain even after ownership passed from the late Roy Lichter's estate to the Wheeling Park District.

MORE STORIES about Oscar were passed along. Then I said that Oscar might be hospitalized now. That was one rumor. And Oscar had been very ill with congestive heart failure just this past spring.

That rumor was wrong, Bettiker said.

Oscar had died. Slowed to a crawl by ill health during his final months, Oscar might have expired as much as three weeks ago. Nobody is positive when Oscar passed away.

THEY DO KNOW Oscar died while sitting in his bedroom chair, listening to his radio. That is how Dave Phillips found Oscar Monday morning.

Phillips, the park district superintendent, kept close surveillance on Oscar. Everybody knew that Oscar was not well. He seemed old beyond 63 years. But this was a very proud man. Oscar wanted to be dependent upon no one.

He was hospitalized more than two years ago. Oscar needed medical attention during May, June and July when he suffered congestive heart failure.

His condition improved, but Oscar never again would be cured. Even on his best days, Oscar walked in pain. His feet would swell and they always hurt. Oscar had to take it slow because he could not breathe well.

Today

Mike Klein's people

But complain? Not Oscar. You'd ask Oscar how he felt today. The little man would look up from beneath the cap he always wore. "Pretty fair," he'd say.

PHILLIPS HAD a telephone installed inside the main house at the old Lichter farm. He told Oscar to call whenever he needed help. No call was ever received. Oscar did not answer the telephone when it rang.

Phillips let a few days pass. Then he knocked on the old storm door at Oscar's apartment. But nobody answered. This happened many times the past three weeks.

"Then last Friday I noticed a couple windows were broken in the door on his garage. The glass hadn't been picked up," Phillips said. "And one of the windows in his storm door was broken."

Phillips knocked again Friday. Oscar did not answer.

"IF HE DIDN'T answer the door Monday, I'd try to get in there myself or call the police," Phillips decided on Friday. "But I didn't want to cause a false alarm."

Phillips and two park district employees arrived at Oscar's apartment at 10:30 a.m., Monday. Phillips knocked. Oscar did not answer.

He reached inside and unlatched Oscar's front door. Phillips heard the radio. Then he found Oscar, still sitting in his bedroom chair.

Oscar was removed to the Cook County Morgue. An autopsy performed Wednesday indicated Oscar died from natural causes, probably a heart attack.

I LIKED HIM from that very first day, a cold January afternoon when Oscar showed me around the old farm and told all its stories.

Oscar's best friends were the eight cats. "They're comical guys," Oscar said that first day we visited. "They jump up and down those trees like little squirrels. I used to sit by those trees. They'd all come and sit around me."

Oscar knew every tree and bush on the old farm. He remembered when the orchard produced better fruit. And Oscar knew that when lilacs bloomed, that was the best time to go white bass fishing in the Fox Lake.

He could tell you everything about the main house, the garden where he and Roy Lichter planted vegetables, the two skunks who visited most nights and an occasional raccoon.

OSCAR SEEMED to be feeling good in April. He had traded his old blue car for an old brown car. Three new kittens lived beneath the shed near his apartment.

"I just call 'em all 'Kitty,'" Oscar said. "Don't know one from another."

I always wondered what might become of Oscar. "Don't need nobody around to help me," he would insist. "Don't like to be dependent on nobody." That was Oscar's pride.

Oscar never said much about his personal life. He mentioned family in Milwaukee as a passing thought once. But Oscar said that was years ago. When you asked, he always said that he had no family.

But once Oscar did mention that his mother still lived in Milwaukee. He never said it again.

ARTHUR MAEGLI answered his telephone Tuesday night in Milwaukee. Yes, Arthur said, his cousin Oscar lived in Wheeling, Ill.

I told Arthur that Oscar had died. The family did not know. In fact, there had been very little contact with Oscar all these years.

Oscar's mother is Stella Maegli of Cudahy, Wis. She's 88. Now her husband, and both sons are dead.

George Sr. died about nine years ago. George Jr. was killed during World War II. Now Oscar has passed away.

Oscar is going home. Stella Maegli wants her son buried in the family plot at Wanderers Rest Cemetery on West Burling Street in Milwaukee.

Nobody will ever know what Oscar thought all those years that he lived alone, proud and private.

But it's possible that Oscar died as he might have spent many nights and days — sitting in his bedroom chair, listening to his radio.

Tonight's debate for you

American voters will have an opportunity to witness a unique occurrence Thursday evening when President Gerald R. Ford and Democratic challenger Jimmy Carter settle down for the first of three debates.

Not since the confrontation between the late John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon in 1960 have presidential candidates debated each other before a national audience.

Both Ford and Carter deserve praise for agreeing to participate. Politicians nowadays often seem bent on wholly orchestrated appearances. And despite restrictions placed on television networks during the actual debates, the Ford-Carter confrontations will be a refreshing departure from the more common, stage-managed events.

The League of Women Voters should be commended for bringing the candidates together.

Voters will be able to see the candidates exchange views on a variety of issues over the next few weeks.

They should listen to what both the candidates have to say. The opportunity to hear the largely unfiltered remarks of the candidates is a valuable occasion which should not be missed.

Viewers should pay particular attention to what the men are saying rather than details of appearance or wardrobe. A great deal of attention was given to Nixon's makeup problems in 1960. And while the way a candidate reacts under pressure is important, the positions on the issues are equally important.

Perceptive viewers will be able to learn firsthand about the candidates' views and bearing.

While newspapers, magazines and the electronic media can provide a wealth of information about the candidates, there is really no better way to get an impression of the candidate than an extended period of hearing them debate.

The Herald, like other newspapers and news magazines, will report major aspects of the debates and the reaction to them of citizens and politicians. We will add unique coverage of this reaction from Northwest suburban voters.

But the televised debates themselves offer voters the best means of forming intelligent decisions about the merits of the two candidates.

Keeping gates of patronage open

You have to admire the Illinois Tollway Authority for sheer creativity in playing the old game of patronage.

The Tollway Authority set out recently, its news releases said, to save the people of Illinois $2 million a year. That is the amount cheaters have been taking from the public pocket by driving through automatic lanes without paying, the authority reasons.

How to stop the cheaters? Why install little gates that won't let a car pass without the proper toll being paid.

Quick and simple. A little mechanical conscience that will whack your car if you drive through. Won't even delay traffic, this marvel.

Applause for the Illinois Tollway Authority!

But wait, there's a price that somehow went unnoticed in the advance billing.

Under the old-fashioned system, motorists used to be alerted to a malfunction in an automatic lane by a red light overhead and a gate swung across the lane by one of the toll booth attendants. It worked pretty well.

But to keep the new mechanical wonders in line, a small army of new employees is necessary. Thirty guards are suddenly on duty, wearing nice policeman-looking uniforms.

They clump around the machines looking for something to do. And when puzzled motorists ask if there's been an accident, they look . . . well, sort of away.

When all the toll gates now planned are installed, there will be 50 guards. They are paid $4.55 an hour. For 40 hours, that comes to $182.00 a week or $9,464 a year. Times 50, that's $473,200 without counting payroll taxes and fringes. Now add the cost of the gates, the cost of installation, the cost of maintenance. And undoubtedly there will be administrative expenses.

Oh well, easy come, easy go.

Remember '60?

Television brought politics into the living rooms of America where everyone watched a young senator defeat an incumbent vice-president before their very eyes

by EVERETT R. IRWIN

CHICAGO (UPI) — For one hour on the night of Sept. 28, 1960, John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon — presidential campaigners used to crowds — were two of the loneliest men in the world.

An estimated 70 million to 80 million persons were somewhere out there watching and listening to them on television.

But the friendly, cheering campaign throngs that had greeted them in city after city were missing.

The hordes of newsmen that had followed them for weeks were out of sight, monitoring them on television screens in distant rooms.

Even their huge entourages of advisers were out of touch — where they could lend no help or signal an encouraging "thumbs-up" — behind the glass windows of control rooms in the darkness beyond the glaring lights.

Kennedy and Nixon were strictly on their own, waging the first face-to-face debate in modern political history between two major contenders for the White House.

Four debates were held between the Democratic and Republican candidates in the span of less than a month in September and October, 1960. Many political observers and historians said the clashes — particularly the first one — gave Kennedy an important "leg up" on his ride to the Camelot White House.

Nixon later predicted that joint television appearances of presidential candidates were "here to stay." But his forecast failed to come true in the campaigns of 1964, 1968 and 1972.

The Gerald Ford-Jimmy Carter debate in Philadelphia, tonight, will be the first resumption of eyeball-to-eyeball TV clashes.

The first 1960 debate was held in CBS-TV's Studio One, a cavernous room constructed in an arena once used for horseback riding, ice shows and, in early World War II days, "America First" meetings that rang to the oratory of Burton K. Wheeler and the clamor of antiwar protesters.

Nixon and Kennedy heard only the guiding voice of moderator Howard K. Smith, then of CBS News, the inquiring voices of a panel of TV interviewers, the squeak of a microphone boom, the occasional click of a camera.

They saw only the moderator and panel, three blinking TV cameras, long two-armed booms, the shadowy forms of the crews that operated the equipment and banks of brilliant lights.

There was not even a teleprompter to turn to for a catchy phrase or eloquent words. Where teleprompters usually stood before political speakers, panels of green, yellow and red lights led the candidates through their remarks, signalling "one minute," "30 seconds" and "cut."

Both candidates showed nervousness — Nixon more than Kennedy.

Nixon stumbled and bumped a previously injured knee as he arrived at the studio. As he was being briefed on procedures, the vice president jumped up to greet the arriving Kennedy and bumped his head on a dangling microphone.

Nixon repeatedly wet his lips and dabbed at his mouth with his handkerchief off camera. He gripped the arm of his chair tightly as Kennedy launched into his opening remarks.

Kennedy, in haste to rebut a Nixon point, forgot to stand up to the lectern and began talking from his chair. Cameramen scrambled to focus on the Massachusetts senator. Nixon leaned forward and made a "stand up, Jack" gesture. Kennedy recovered, leaped to his feet and stepped to the mike.

The subject of the first debate was domestic policy, but the nation Nixon and Kennedy wanted to lead was still absorbed by the Cold War. Kennedy, speaking first by virtue of the flip of a coin, mixed domestic and foreign policy and went to the attack immediately. He questioned whether the Republican administration of Pres. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Nixon was taking the United States ahead fast enough to meet the threat of Communist Russia.

Paraphrasing an Abraham Lincoln remark in the famed debate between Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas, Kennedy asked:

"Are we doing as much as we can do — are we as strong as we can be?"

And he answered himself: "I think we are not doing enough. I am not satisfied with the progress we are making."

Nixon, thrown on the defensive, disputed the charge that the United States had been standing still under the Republican regime. He agreed, "We can't stand still. We're in the deadliest competition." He said the country was ahead of the Soviets and had enjoyed greater progress under Eisenhower than under President Truman, the Democrat who preceded him.

So it went through the hour, in which each candidate gave an eight-minute opening statement, the two took turns at answering panelists' questions, and each made a summing up.

Kennedy, an outsider looking in, repeatedly attacked the GOP administration's policies — on the economy, social welfare, agriculture, other issues. He appeared to be talking to the nation.

Nixon, as a part of the administration, was on the defensive much of the time. Many newsmen said he seemed to be concentrating on Kennedy so hard he neglected to talk to those who mattered most — the voters.

The rivals shook hands twice when the hour was over. Nixon commented, "The time went awfully fast." Kennedy wiped his brow and nodded.

Then they hurried away to check with their advisers and family members on how they had looked and sounded.

Kennedy was cheered by what he heard. But reports flooded in to the Nixon camp that the vice president, who had been ill a few days earlier, looked "pale" and "tired" on TV. A flap developed over his makeup.

It developed that Nixon, who had a dark beard, wore no makeup under the bright lights — permitting only a light coating of "beard stick" powder to help cover his perpetual "5-o'clock shadow." The light suit he wore did not help his appearance.

Kennedy, already tanned from a round of open-air campaign dates in California, allowed experts to apply theatrical makeup. He wore a contrasty dark suit and, on advice of studio personnel, ordered a blue shirt rushed to the studio at the last minute to replace the white one he had originally selected.

Three other debates followed — on Oct. 7 in Washington, on Oct. 13 with Nixon in Los Angeles and Kennedy in New York, and on Oct. 21 in New York. Their formats varied. The second debate was on foreign policy, the third a scattershot question-and-answer session, the fourth largely a repetition of ground covered in the others.

Nixon switched to theatrical makeup for the three and, according to many newsmen, fared better in his arguments than in the first. None of the last three drew as large an audience as the first debate. NBC and CBS estimated that from 115 million to 120 million persons viewed one or all the four debates.

Nixon, writing later in his "Six Crises," admitted Kennedy had taken the offensive in the first debate. He termed it "a setback — but not a disaster."

"Looking back now on all four of them," he wrote, "there can be no question but that Kennedy had gained more from the debates than I."

Kennedy, propelled from underdog to frontrunner, won the election by a slim 112,000 popular votes, and 303 electoral votes to Nixon's 219.

A few days after the election, Kennedy reportedly told an associate: "It was TV more than anything else that turned the tide."

Decision needed for guards or gates at Illinois toll plazas

On Aug. 5, 1976, The Herald published an article entitled "Fast acting gates add 'crunch' to paying toll." Richard E. Blakely, executive director of the tollway authority, is credited with making the statements that prospects of faultless operation of the gates were "excellent," and that all 102 automated lanes at mainline/tollway plazas will have gates. The system is expected to recover $2 million a year in tolls previously lost, Blakely said.

Simple arithmetic tells us that $54 per 24-hour period per gate is lost, that breaks down to $2.25 per hour at one deadbeat every eight minutes. Now I don't think we should just forget about these thieves, but Blakely's cure is worse than the curse.

Blakely says in the Sept. 15 Herald that "we can't just leave people at the mercy of the machines," so guards at $4.55 per hour are "a permanent part of the system." How much money are we going to spend to recover $2.25 per hour per gate? Blakely says the present 30 guards will soon swell to 50, what will the ultimate number be?

OBVIOUSLY, MANY questions should be answered before we taxpayers pour more money into this ill-conceived program. What is the cost per man hour to keep these guards on the job, including fringe benefits, shift premium, overtime, administrative cost — everything? How many guard hours per gate per day will be required? How much has revenue actually increased at those gates where guards are also present? What is the total cost of this program?

Blakely also says that cost of the guards was included in the 1.2 million cost of installing the gates, which I don't buy. Installation is one thing, operating cost quite another. It seems to me that this is an elementary principle.

If we really need guards, we don't need the gates. And if Blakely is satisfied with manually controlled automatic gates, he must think they are now malfunctioning properly. Either way, the public loses.

Polo next sport in line for boost from business

by LEA TONKIN
Business sponsorship helped to vault tennis into the national limelight and increased popularity, said William "Bill" Ylvisaker, chairman of Rolling Meadows-based Gould, Inc. As president of the Polo Corp. of the Americas, Ylvisaker sees polo as the next sport in line to benefit from a business boost. He's among the enthusiastic sponsors of a recent $25,000 all-star professional polo match at the Oak Brook Polo Club, Oak Brook.

The winning team at the Gould Cup Professional Polo Match took home $14,000, and the right to challenge Argentina's championship team for the cup in 1977. A major portion of the proceeds was donated to the DuPage Area Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

Dow declines in heavy trading as rally sours

NEW YORK (UPI) — A strong rally turned sour Wednesday when the government reported crucial capital spending was not picking up and prices closed irregularly lower in the heaviest trading in seven months on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average, ahead seven points at one time, lost 0.74 to 1,014.05 in selling that followed the Commerce Dept.'s report that August durable goods orders fell 2.2 per cent and nondefense capital orders plunged 11.7 per cent.

Analysts said the market was susceptible to profit taking because the closely watched Dow average had risen a total of 35.38 points in less than a week. Many investors cashed in on those profits.

THE DOW'S 20.28-point gain Tuesday, the best in a year, had pushed the blue-chip average to its highest level in 44 months. Throughout the year, analysts have maintained the blue-chip average would challenge its all-time high of 1,051.70 set on Jan. 11, 1973.

On a broader scale, the NYSE common stock index lost 0.16 to 87.35 and the average price of a common share decreased by 9 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, which includes some over-the-counter stocks, lost 0.37 to 107.46. Advances edged declines, 753 to 706, among the 1,917 issues crossing the tape.

The volume of 32,970,000 shares, up from the 33,300,000 traded Tuesday, was the heaviest since 34,320,440 were traded Feb. 26. The first-hour volume of 9,690,000 was the ninth heaviest in Big Board history and had the NYSE high-speed transaction tape running six minutes late.

Analysts said the Commerce Dept.'s nondefense order decline, the first in eight months, and the slide in durable goods killed the rally because it painted a gloomy picture of capital spending which is needed to sustain the economic recovery.

THE REPORT ALSO showed why steel and other industries have laid off thousands of workers lately and have had to trim their earnings expectations for the year.

Caterpillar Tractor topped the Big Board's active list, falling 1.5 to 55-5/8 on 454,000 shares, including a block of 250,000 shares at 56. Deere & Co., another equipment company, was the second most active issue, off 1-3/8 to 32-5/8 on 385,300 shares, including a block of 240,000 shares at 32.

Deere has been picked as the target company in negotiations with the United Auto Workers.

Allegheny Power was the third most active issue, up three-quarters to 21 1/2 on 382,100 shares, including a block of 135,000 shares at 21 1/2.

Prices closed lower in active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share decreased by 2 cents. Volume totaled 3,030,000 shares, compared with 2,850,000 traded Tuesday.

Business briefs

Ford strike talks gain little: UAW

United Auto Workers and Ford Motor Co. bargainers met for a third straight day Wednesday under a virtual news blackout in the second week of a nationwide strike by 170,000 workers, some of whom have criticized union negotiating tactics. Union sources insisted little was being accomplished to resolve the outstanding issues that are holding up settlement of the basic auto industry contract that would settle the Ford strike and could be taken to General Motors, Chrysler and American Motors. The Ford Motor Co. said the week-old strike by the United Auto Workers will force a complete shutdown of its Canadian operations by early next week, idling 14,000 workers in addition to 170,000 off the job in the United States.

FDA bans use of black, red dyes

The government Wednesday banned as potential health hazards the red dye that colors maraschino cherries and the black dye used in mascara and eyebrow pencils. The Maraschino Cherry Assn. said the ban will ruin the $100 million-a-year maraschino industry because, with no adequate substitute dye, the cocktail and confection cherries will appear an unappetizing dirty orange. But spokesmen for the Cosmetic, Toilet and Fragrance Assn., which represents 90 per cent of the cosmetics industry, said the black dye ban would have less economic impact because many producers already have switched to another dye. The Food and Drug Administration said the bans are effective immediately.

1977 VW gets best m.p.g.: EPA

A Volkswagen diesel-engine car being introduced next year has the best gasoline mileage — 52 miles per gallon on the highway — of any 1977 passenger auto tested so far, the Environmental Protection Agency said Wednesday. The worst mileage — nine m.p.g. in city driving — came in four Dodges and Plymouths with eight-cylinder, 440-cubic-inch engines. EPA Administrator Russell E. Train said 1977 model cars will average 18.6 m.p.g., 6 per cent better than 1976 models and 34 per cent higher than 1974. The Volkswagen was a Rabbit Diesel, which averaged 52 m.p.g. on the road and 39 in town for 44 m.p.g. over-all. Another Volkswagen diesel, a Dasher model, took third place with 40 m.p.g. — 47 on the highway and 35 in town. For the first time, the EPA estimated what fuel will cost yearly for each car. The information will be on the window sticker for consumers to study.

State Chamber OKs branch banks

The Illinois State Chamber of Commerce announced support of limited branch banking, bank holding companies and electronic funds transfer systems. "The advent of multi-unit banking is overdue in Illinois," said Amos Buettell, chairman of the board of the organization. "We consider these changes in bank regulations consistent with the state chamber's commitment to improve the Illinois business climate and to stimulate economic growth." The branch banking issue has been a controversial issue before the Illinois General Assembly.

Trade seat goes for $168,000

A membership on the Chicago Board of Trade was sold Tuesday for $168,000. A record for any commodity futures exchange, the CBOT said Wednesday. The sale was one of eight memberships purchased Tuesday, all at prices above the previous CBOT high of $150,000 set last January.

Flood-control project submitted for approval

by WANDALYN RICE

A $61.4 million flood-control project along the Des Plaines River from its origins in Wisconsin to where it flows into the Chicago Sanitary and Ship Canal in Will County is being proposed to federal and state authorities.

The plan, developed with funds from the U.S. Soil Conservation Service and Metropolitan Sanitary District, has been completed by the Des Plaines River Basin steering committee.

The plan calls for creation of a recreational area with fishing and boating lakes, and skiing, sledding and tobogganing facilities on the site of an abandoned quarry near Elmhurst.

In addition, it calls for channel by-passes along McDonald Creek and Buffalo-Wheeling Creek in Wheeling Township which divert flood flows from Schoenbeck Road and the Wheeling Drainage Ditch.

OTHER PROVISIONS of the plan

call for government purchase of 2,585 acres of land in the Des Plaines River flood plain for use as a greenway with bicycle paths to connect existing forest preserves along the river.

The plan also calls for purchase of 3,295 acres of existing wetland to preserve wildlife habitat and of several open space areas, including one near Long Grove.

Other improvements planned for the area include "flood-proofing" of 1,535 flood-prone homes in the Des Plaines River flood plain. Further development in the river's flood plain will be limited by both local and state flood-control ordinances.

The Des Plaines River plan is part of overall area flood-control planning which also has included similar, but less extensive plans, for Upper Salt Creek and the Little Calumet River, according to Eugene Doyle, chairman of the steering committee and mayor of Northlake. The Upper Salt Creek project, which involves construction of a recreational area in the Ned Brown Forest Preserve in Elk Grove Township, is nearing completion.

FUNDING FOR the Des Plaines plan, like funding for the other flood-control plans in the area, will come from combined federal and state sources. State Rep. Jack Williams, D-Franklin Park, a member of the steering committee, said he expects the state to furnish between 10 and 30 per cent of the cost of the project, depending on which federal program money comes from.

Williams said the Des Plaines River project should be "well underway" by 1980 and "by 1985 a good part of this ought to be completed."

He said the most immediate impact of the plan will be the limitation of development in the river flood plain. "This means it (the flooding situation) can't get any worse. From this point it can only get better," Williams said.

Cancer Detection

A spirometry test which measures the vital capacity of the lungs can detect lung damage due to smoking, asthma, emphysema and other lung diseases. This test is offered by the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. in their Cancer Detection Examination.

Of every six people who get cancer today, two will be saved and four will die. Of the four who would otherwise die, one might be saved with earlier diagnosis and prompt treatment. It is estimated that there will be 675,000 new cases of cancer in 1976 and that there will be 370,000 deaths resulting from cancer. (According to American Cancer Society publication "76 Cancer Facts and Figures")

The best defense we have against cancer today is early detection and prompt treatment. A yearly Cancer detection examination is the first step that you should take. The Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. offers a thorough 2 1/2 hour low cost Cancer Detection Screening examination including a computerized patient medical history, meticulous physical examination, proctoscopy, chest x-ray, electrocardiogram, blood pressure, over 30 chemical determinations on blood and urine samples, pap smear and instruction in breast self-examination for women, tests for vision, hearing, spirometry, glaucoma, body measurements, percentage of body fat, etc. An analysis of your personal cancer risk factors and educational literature are also provided.

Give yourself the best protection available against cancer by calling your physician or the Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. today and make your appointment for a Cancer Detection Examination. The Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection, Inc. is located at 1000 Grand Canyon Parkway, Hoffman Estates, Ill., (near Woodfield Mall). Telephone (312) 885-1360.

Northwest suburban housing projects get share of awards from Chicago home builders group

by LYNN ASINOF

The Northwest suburbs have a healthy share of the best housing in the Chicago area, according to the Home Builders of Greater Chicago.

Developments in the Northwest suburbs won 13 awards in the Design 76 competition sponsored by the builders' group, with Lake Barrington Shores winning five awards.

"I think that the winners represent a standard for the consuming sector to look to," said Norman Hassinger, Design 76 chairman. "They are, if not the best in the industry in their price range, certainly well above average."

HASSINGER SAID the winners were chosen because of basic design features that are important to consumers. He said consideration was given to the floor plan and its usability. The exterior treatment of the building also was considered, as was the utilization of land, particularly in the multiple family developments.

"I would say that for good basic design, people should look at these homes," Hassinger said. He said they will give home buyers some standard by which to judge quality construction, layout and design.

Herschel J. Farr, executive vice president of the builders group, said Lake Barrington Shores won many awards because of its natural landscaping, which centers on a large lake. The development won first and second place in the single-family attached division of homes priced at $80,000 and over. Its Condo III model also won for land use and land planning of two or more housing types.

In addition, Lake Barrington Shores won first place in both the architecture and recreational facilities divisions.

SCHAUMBURG'S Lexington Green, built by the Lexington Development Corp., won two awards. It won the second place award for coach house D-2 in the division of condominium apartments costing $30,000-$40,000. It also took a second place in land use, land planning and total environment.

Mission Hills of Northbrook, built by Eugene R. Corley, took three second place awards. It placed in both the interior design and recreation facilities divisions, and the third award was in the division for condominium apartments costing $75,000 or more.

The Crossings of Buffalo Grove won one award for its Alternate D, in the division for single-family detached costing $55,000-$65,000. Schaumburg's Sheffield Estates placed second in this category with the Arlington II model.

Farr said contest entries show a trend towards natural landscaping, with a great emphasis on man-made lakes and green areas. Although the major theme of this year's contest was quality and consumer appeal.

"THAT MEANS getting good houses for the dollars you're spending," Farr said.

For example, he noted the Sun House of Boulder Hill near Aurora, an energy conservation house with solar energy which won the division for $65,000-$80,000 single-family detached houses.

It was the house to use solar energy this year and both Farr and Hassinger said they expect more solar entries in next year's contest.

Farr said there was a lack of good entries in several categories, indicating a need for improved design efforts in these areas.

For example, there were no winners in the division for single-family attached housing priced at $55,000-$65,000; for land use and planning in single-family attached housing and in planned unit development single-family attached housing.

Hassinger said this type of tough judging is giving the contest greater meaning in the housing industry.

The judges were chosen from many different fields and included builders, architects, engineers, designers and newspaper people. Judging teams visited and evaluated all entries in their categories. The results were tabulated by Price Waterhouse and Co.

The winners of the contest are:

SINGLE FAMILY Detached Division, under $35,000

• Gold Key Award: The Radleigh of Mainstreet at Foxcraft, Aurora, built by The Hoffman Group, Inc.

• Silver Key Award: The Lexington of College Park, Joliet, built by U.S. Shelter Inc.

Families 'digging deeper' to buy homes, expert says

In spite of rapidly increasing housing costs, American families still are eager to buy homes — and there is plenty of mortgage money available to help them do it, said Robert H. Hazen.

He warned, however, any sudden increase in inflationary pressures could dramatically change the picture.

Hazen is president of the United States League of Savings Associations, the primary trade group serving the savings and loan business. Savings associations finance more home purchases than all other lenders combined.

HAIZEN IN a recent address to the annual convention of the California Savings and Loan League, noted that families are "digging deeper to buy the housing they want." Savings associations, he said, are not seeing any increases in loan-to-value ratios, which means that home buyers are having little difficulty meeting down-payment requirements for today's relatively expensive homes.

"We have heard so many times that the vast majority of families are being priced out of the housing market, that higher energy costs are crimping the typical family's ability to afford a home, that later marriages and smaller families mean trouble for housing — yet families are still buying homes," Hazen said.

As a result of the heavy mortgage demand, along with strong savings inflows, savings associations will lend a record $70 billion this year, Hazen said.

Hazen predicted that mortgage demand will remain seasonally high during the remainder of the year and that "plenty" of mortgage money will be available.

HOWEVER, HAIZEN said, any spurt in either food prices or energy costs could change the situation.

Hazen noted that home energy costs in many sections of the country "have escalated to the point that utility bills sometimes exceed local tax bills, yet energy conservation messages have failed to reduce American energy consumption."

Oil imports, he said, are running 41 per cent higher than in 1972, the year before the Arab oil embargo, and have reached an all-time high. "Another embargo or any significant increase in oil costs could have a devastating effect on the economy — and on housing," Hazen said.

Food prices also must be watched, the league executive warned.

"Inflation has slowed in large part because food price increases have slowed," Hazen said, "but food prices remain extremely volatile, and a quick runup in food costs could be the forerunner of another highly inflationary period."

There's never been a better time to develop the habit of investing in yourself.

Everyone is a creature of habit — bad habits and good ones. At First Federal Savings we've observed the habit of saving in our customer friends for 42 years. It's very satisfying to watch the habit working for those who invest in themselves. Regular savings of even small amounts soon prove that it is all worthwhile. And the habit of saving has never worked better than now. The figures here show you why.

Could put $230 in your pocket

Tips on saving energy and money

If you live in an average house in the Chicago area, chances are you can save $171 each winter and another $59 each summer by upgrading your home's energy efficiency. The savings of $230 can be even greater as fuel costs continue to rise.

That's the word from Great American Federal Savings & Loan Assn., one of the Chicago area's leading thrift institutions, based on information compiled by the Federal Energy Administration.

"Saving is more than a matter of putting money into a savings account; it's also managing your household affairs wisely so you'll spend less and therefore have more money to save, which is what energy efficiency helps accomplish," said John L. Domeier, Great American's chairman and president.

THE ENERGY administration's figures for Chicago are based on a gas-heated, one-story ranch house with 1,400 square feet, an attic of equal size, 12 windows and two doors. The energy savings come about in several ways. Adding storm windows saves $56.03 per winter; storm doors save $6.29; caulking around windows and doors saves $6.29; and upgrading the ceiling insulation saves $102.24 in the winter and $59.76 if you air condition in the summer.

Improving the insulation is where the biggest savings can be made. The efficiency of insulation is indicated by the R-value, a figure which is usually printed on bags or batts of insulation now being sold. The higher the R-value, the better the insulating efficiency. R-value is a better way of measuring efficiency than inches of thickness.

In the typical Chicago area home considered by the energy administration, the original insulating R-value is R-3, the equivalent of approximately a 1-inch thickness of glass fiber or rock fill. The savings are achieved by raising the value to R-22, the equivalent of 6 1/2-inch-thick glass-fiber batts or blankets or a 6-inch-thick rock wool batt.

At the rate of 30 cents a square foot to upgrade insulation from R-3 to R-22 the insulation cost for a 1,400-square-foot home is $420. Two storm doors at $75 each comes to $150; 12 triple-track storm windows at $30 each add up to $360; and do-it-yourself caulking around doors and windows could probably amount to $7.50. Total cost for the energy efficiency improvement comes to $937.50, which the homeowner may be able to finance through his savings and loan association.

"For this investment the homeowner would save $230 a year, meaning he'd recover this money in just over four years and thereafter be saving $230 each year," Domeier. "Assuming a 20-year life for the improvements, the original $937 investment would return $3,680, amounting to an annual yield of 19.8 per cent. That's a good return in anyone's language. The return can be even higher if the $230 yearly savings is invested in a savings account."

Semicircular driveways have good and bad points

The principal advantages of semicircular driveways are they provide easy access to the house and they make plenty of space for parking. The disadvantages are also twofold. Because of their length they are expensive and they cover a considerable area with pavement which reflects much heat in summer and requires added snow removal in winter.

If you have adequate space and the money, you still might want a driveway of this kind. Space is important. The more space you have available for this purpose the more comfortable it will be driving over your driveway. The dimensions shown on the plan are not absolute minimums for automobiles, but you have to take into consideration delivery trucks and possibly motor homes that might use your driveway. The radii shown on the plan are adequate for both of these.

As in any kind of driveway, careful driving is a factor. A careless driver even on a wide driveway can run over the edges and make ruts in a lawn. On a semicircular drive, careful driving is important because it is not always easy to judge the location of the edges of the pavement. This is especially so in the winter when snow covers the driveway. For this reason curbing is recommended.

FOR A DRIVEWAY of this kind a 10-foot width should be the minimum, although even the largest automobiles are not this wide. A narrower driveway would make it very difficult for a driver to remain on the drive surface.

Using the data shown on the plan, it is obvious that a driveway that will accommodate delivery trucks, larger vehicles and be comfortable to drive a car on cannot be built on a narrow lot.

Solar heating units turning into reality

By all signs, solar heating of homes appears to be coming closer to reality. There are several new homes in various parts of the country which are putting the hot rays of the sun to useful work in heating domestic hot water, and providing some of the heat needed for indoor comfort.

Some adventurous homeowners have already added solar heat to their existing systems, with heat-collecting panels on the roof or in the backyard, where the rays are absorbed by water circulating through serpentine tubing. The water thus heated is pumped to a large storage tank usually tied in with the existing hydronic heating system.

When the sun-heated water in the storage tank is sufficiently hot it is circulated to the baseboard heaters in the rooms. If it is not hot enough, control is automatically transferred to the boiler which then does its usual job of providing comfort.

In most geographic areas it is not expected that solar heat can do the full job during the winter. The Better Heating-Cooling Council points out. The array of 'flat-plate collectors' would be too great and too expensive in cold climates, and of course there are always those cloudy days to be reckoned with.

It's your landscape

by George Creed

Q. Is it beneficial to spray evergreens with water?

A. Yes, especially during drought conditions. This removes soot and dust from the needles.

Q. Can you give me the names of several good trees that will do well in damp conditions?

A. You might try one of these — Pin Oak, Sourgum, Larch or Bald Cypress.

No end to arguments on mortgages

Like the old controversy about home ownership itself (is it wiser to buy a house or rent?), there is also no end to the argument about how — having made the decision to buy — this purchase should be financed: big mortgage, little mortgage or outright cash?

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

You advise against paying a large down payment toward the purchase of a home because the tax deduction on the larger mortgage is a money-saver. In the same breath, you suggest that one's money could be better invested at 9 to 9½ per cent in high-grade corporate bonds. My experience tells me this is working both ends against the middle.

Having recently bought a home for $25,000, I had to decide how much to pay down. I could pay up to $13,000 comfortably, leaving a $12,000 mortgage. True, a larger mortgage would help on the taxes, but, at the same time, the interest on the $13,000 has always kicked me into a higher tax bracket.

I found that the extra income taxes I pay on the investment is greater than the tax break on the mortgage. So, why NOT stick the extra savings into the house, save a little on income taxes, lower my monthly payments and simplify my overall bookkeeping?

I've compared the figures often and find your advice concerning home financing to be just short of mortgage-mania. You are really not being fair to most of your readers. — Mr. R. B. (Bethlehem, Pa.)

About real estate

by Don G. Campbell

ANSWER: Suit yourself. If you've worked this thing out as often as you say you have and always emerge with the conclusion that it's cheaper to buy a home outright, then I wouldn't have a prayer of changing your mind. So, be my guest, but you've sure got one funny income tax situation if being in a higher tax bracket wipes out the advantage of the deductibility of mortgage interest.

What most people who think the way you do on this situation keep coming back to is the tax situation alone. You keep ignoring the other factor involved which, in actuality, is FAR more important than the tax deductibility of mortgage interest — inflation. I'm talking about the folly of paying off a debt that could be financed through 1996 (or 2006) with 1976 dollars.

Even if inflation actually gets down to what the politicians call an "acceptable" level of 3½ per cent a year we're still talking about a 1976 dollar that is going to be worth 84 cents in just five years, 71 cents in 10 years and 59 cents in 15 years.

So why on earth pay the full $1?

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

I feel I'm being ignored and abused by my next door neighbor. They put in an air conditioner in their kitchen window which, of course, is directly across from our bedroom window. Even when the weather is cool they put it on at 9 a.m. until sometimes 11 p.m.

My husband and I are retired people and would sometimes like to sleep later or retire earlier and, of course, open the window — the space is about six feet.

I have complained, but they say they can't put it on the other side because of the window arrangements. We both own our homes. Must I put up with this, or is there a solution? — Mrs. M. F. D. (Buffalo, N.Y.)

ANSWER: I can certainly sympathize with you but, with windows that are just six feet apart, I sure can't think of a solution. It would almost seem to me that the noise would be the lesser of your troubles. An air conditioner tends to throw out a pretty good blast of hot air. Doesn't THIS go right into your bedroom window?

Frankly, I can't think of a thing you could do except fight fire with fire and install an air conditioner in YOUR window. It would mute the sound of the neighbor's unit as well as closing the window would and, by keeping it on low, you would have the air circulating.

Anybody think of anything?

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

My husband was a World War II veteran and died about five years ago. At the present I am in the market to buy a house and was told by a friend that, as his widow, I would be eligible for a VA loan. Is this right? — Mrs. D. V. (San Diego, Calif.)

ANSWER: If you're the unmarried widow of a veteran who was eligible for a VA loan — but who didn't use his entitlement — then your friend is right.

Alternate energy talks set at Harper College

Architect Rodney Wright will present a third week-long seminar on alternate energy sources at Harper College on the evenings of Sept. 22, 23, 25, and 27. Items to be covered are historical and technological concepts, construction techniques, thermal effects, conservation, and climate.

The objectives of the seminar include heat loss calculation, sizing of solar energy collector, material selection, and, during the all day Saturday laboratory session, building a flat plate collector. Joseph Yohanan, AIA, will discuss the computer applications of the theories presented in the seminar.

The cost of the seminar is $40.00. Class size is limited to 25 participants. Pre-registration and advance payment of the fee are strongly advised because of the high interest in this third offering. For further information about Solar Energy Seminar at Harper College in Palatine, contact Bill Howard at 397-3000 Ext. 548 or Joseph Yohanan, AIA, at 397-3000 Ext. 580.

Device prevents shocks

New electric circuit could be life-saver

There is a new electrical circuit on the market that is probably one of the best safety devices to be invented for the homeowner in many a year. The following letter from one of our readers describes it.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: I think my electrician is trying to take advantage of me. I hired him to install an outlet in my bathroom for an electric razor. Now he is trying to sell me a very expensive job.

He insists I should install something known as a "ground fault interrupter." He said that everybody should have one of these for their bathroom circuits. If he is telling the truth, I'll spend the money.

I'll leave the answer up to you — WHAT FAULT?

Several years ago I witnessed an exhibit of the ground fault interrupter. A woman stood in a bathtub filled with water and was handed a live electric wire. The ground fault interrupter tripped the circuit breaker, even before she felt an electric shock.

Your electrician is not taking advantage of you. He is, in fact, very conscientious. The time is rapidly approaching when ground fault interrupters will be specified for all bathroom and swimming pool circuits. In the most simple terms, this device is a very sensitive circuit breaker that adds an extra element of safety for areas where the danger of electric shocks are the greatest.

If you feel that the additional peace of mind is worthwhile for the expense, then you should go ahead with the installation.

Mr. Meltzer on real estate

by Bernard Meltzer

DEAR MR. MELTZER: I have been reading many articles recently about solar heating. We are in the process building a new house. Would you recommend that I consider solar heating? — SUN POWER.

In my opinion, solar heating is still in the experimental stage. It will be some time before it has proven itself for use by the general public.

In addition, there are not enough solar heating units sold in this country to make the price economical as yet. I predict that within several years the concept will become more popular and the cost for a solar heating installation will become competitive with conventional heating systems. Right now the proponents of solar heat show that the fuel savings over the years will more than offset the initial installation expense.

This concept is contrary to the thinking of the American homebuyer. Americans like to spend less money "up front" and spread the balance over as many years as possible.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: My son is trying to install a photographic darkroom in our basement. He plans to use an old washtub that is located in the corner.

I am concerned that the photographic chemicals will damage our plumbing system. Can you tell me if I am right? — PHOTOGENIC.

Don't worry. The chemicals used for amateur photography are very mild. You may find that some of the odors coming from the basement are not so mild, however. Also, there should be a light increase in your water consumption, as most prints must be washed in running water.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: Please explain the long delays encountered on GI loans. We vets were not slow to respond to induction and military service at low pay for two or more years. — UNHAPPY KOREAN VET.

A combination of things — red tape, constantly changing forms, constantly changing laws, variations in requirements, etc.

Replacing furnace filter can save money, energy

Homeowners can participate in the nation's energy conservation effort this winter as well as save money on home heating costs by replacing furnace filters periodically.

Dirt-clogged filters waste energy required to operate home furnaces, according to the Federal Energy Administration. Periodic replacement of dirt ty filters keep resistance to the air flow at a low level, allowing more efficient heating and less energy consumption. Clean filters enable the fan to operate for shorter periods to maintain a desired temperature setting.

Savings can be significant when you consider that the nation's 70 million households use 20 per cent of the energy consumed in the United States. The energy administration reports that more than half of the energy consumed in households is used to meet heating and cooling requirements.

FILTERS ARE INSTALLED in home heating systems primarily to prevent dirt buildup that can seriously damage furnace parts as well as lower the efficiency of blowers and heat exchangers. Good quality air filters also help reduce the amount of dust distributed throughout the house.

Filters should be checked once a month and replaced when the media is obviously heavily laden with dirt, dust and lint. Most filters cost less than a dollar.

For other ways to help conserve energy around the home, write for a free copy of "Tips for Energy Savers," Office of Public Affairs, Federal Energy Administration, Washington, D. C. 20461.

Condominium development given new name, personnel

Las Haciendas, a condominium community located at 1184 Nichols Rd., Palatine, has been renamed "Village of the Sun," and given a complete new staff.

"The new name is only the first of many changes that will take place," said William B. Kaplan, senior vice president/property management for Romanek-Golub and Company. Romanek-Golub, a Chicago-based, full-service real estate company, recently was awarded the marketing, management, and development responsibilities for the community.

"Because of the unique Southwestern style architecture, we looked for a name that contained a Southwestern flavor and at the same time was warm, easy to pronounce, and had a community feel to it," said Kaplan. "We considered and discarded dozens of names before selecting Village of the Sun."

AT THE SAME TIME, Kaplan announced the appointment of William H. Crane as general manager of Village of the Sun and Marian Tingler as sales manager.

Crane, currently general manager of Romanek-Golub's highly successful condominium community in Elmhurst, the Atrium, will be responsible for the entire operation of the community.

Ms. Tingler, a "Million Dollar Award" winner of the Sales and Marketing Council of the Homebuilders'

Association of Greater Chicago, had been a member of the sales staff at the Atrium prior to this appointment.

Village of the Sun two and three-bedroom condominiums are available in four different floor plans, ranging from 1,200 to 1,495 square feet. Prices start at $38,900.

The condominium community is located at Nichols and Baldwin roads, just north of Dundee Road. The sales office is open from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 11:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Exhibitors gear for apartment, home exposition

Exhibitors are busy making plans for their show display for the Home and Apartment Exposition in October at the new O'Hare Exposition Center, Rosemont.

Meeting on a regular basis with a special exhibitor's advisory committee, Expo exhibitors are zeroing in on a combined theme of "Back to the Basics" and a "New Century of Value." They will aim their products and displays at giving the builder/architect more value for his dollar and offer him a wide range of price categories to choose from.

While there are many product lines in the show that offer higher cost items, the quality of these products is commensurate with the price. They are designed to last and to save money in the long run.

ON THE LOW end of the price range, are products that "do the job without the frills." Products that give at least a dollar's worth of value for a dollar spent and aim at keeping the total dollars spent to a minimum.

A sampling of exhibitors' display plans reveals how the show themes are being put into practice. Caloric Corp. includes in its large line of kitchen products a pilotless gas range. When the range is not in use, there is no draw on the gas supply which saves 30 per cent of your gas bill. It's a money-saving/energy-saving product, which also has the obvious built-in safety feature (when the stove is off, the gas is off).

Omni Products of Addison will offer a completely new concept in rain carrying systems. The revolutionary design, called Omni Facade, provides both gutter and fascia in a single piece of aluminum. The product can reduce time and material cost to the builder dramatically, while it provides a clean line look in roof design.

Brammer Manufacturing will show a full line of cabinets that represent a 70 per cent price spread between the low end and the high end to fit into all the builder programs and budgets, including the custom builder. Their Rondelle Line, with its rounded door edges, new drawer hardware, undermount side rails, will be shown for the first time in Chicago.

Elgin-Macor, Inc., will display an elegant full flight of stairs and stair railings for builders and architects to walk up and down and inspect first hand. The company will also show massive mirror doors, sliding folding glass mirror doors, and several samples of windows, all of which offer the highest quality at reasonable prices.

PEACHTREE DOOR will show pre-finished entry and patio doors, featuring a steel entry door embossed on both sides before the door is framed. This replaces the plastic plants used for decoration. Steel plates are fastened all the way into the studding to prevent break-in.

The pre-finished door cannot be duplicated in the field, according to company spokesman Art Prais, who says they have a patent pending on the strike reinforcement plate. Prais says that 80 per cent of the break-ins occur at the front door. While it is said that "If someone wants to get in, they will find a way," Prais contends that thieves being frustrated at the front door, will go to another house, rather than continue to try to get in. The door locks into the jam itself, rendering tight security.

The City of Elgin has made secure doors a requirement on new construction and home security is certainly more and more in the mind of the home owner. Their patio door has its moving panel on the outside, rather than the inside, thus making a tighter closing unit.

These and dozens of other displays will show attending members of the shelter industry a "supermarket" full of price choice on high quality products.

The show will run Oct. 6 and 7, noon to 10 p.m. at the O'Hare Expo Center. For further information on exhibition and complimentary tickets, call 751-1075.

Family's need for space key factor in house buy

The race for space is a frequent cause for a family's move from one home to another, said Robert W. Starck of Robert W. Starck & Co., Realtors.

"Maybe it's two kids who now need separate bedrooms to accommodate their diverse interests," Starck said, "or a new baby. Mom or Dad may have a new job that requires a well-organized office away from the hubbub of family fun. Whatever the case, the old home is bursting at the seams and a new house with an extra room or two is the answer."

Another reason for moving — one that Starck knows well — is a new job in a distant community.

While living space is an obvious consideration for people seeking new homes, Starck said there are many other things to look for once you've decided to move.

"IT'S A GOOD IDEA to look at your family's future needs," Starck suggests. "If the kids are about to leave home for college and careers, a four-bedroom house may not be your best buy. And if you expect the kids to be around for several more years, you'll find a family room or den will provide the extra entertaining space often needed by an active family."

"Frequently, people moving because of job relocations will find their new positions require increased entertaining at home," he said. "While your old home was just fine with a small dining alcove, it might be wise to look for a new home with a separate dining room. Also in job relocations, a family often finds itself upwardly mobile in a social sense. The character of the community in which it chooses to live may be as important to the breadwinner's career success as the work he or she does on the job."

Taking care of a large lawn and garden can be a pleasant leisure time activity or a burdensome chore, depending on the interests of the homeowner. "If Mom or Dad enjoys gardening, then a large one may be just the thing. If not, it would probably be best to seek a home with less ground space to maintain," Starck said.

Also, young children particularly enjoy room out-of-doors in which to play, Starck said, noting the family with children will want to consider homes with playing space.

"Of course, community services and schools are always important," Starck said. "Even if a family's children are grown, the fact that the community's schools are considered good or excellent will be important if they decide to move again and need to sell their house."

"It's not just space, then," Starck said, "that a family needs to consider when buying a new home. It's all the things that go into making a contribution to the family's lifestyle and it's plans for the future. By considering all those things you feel important, the new home you're buying can contribute greatly to your family's enjoyment now and in the future."

Farmland gives way to buildings

"Seventeen states in the nation have each converted more than 20,000 acres of farmland to residential use in the last five years — with the leader, California, accounting for approximately 81,500 farm to residential use acres."

"Illinois joins this list with a total of 43,700 acres moved from farm to home construction," said Jackson W. Goss, president and chief executive officer of Investors Mortgage Insurance Co., Boston, a subsidiary of Investors Mortgage Group, Inc.

According to Goss, these 17 states are leading the nation in development of formerly farm-used land — a trend responsible for the conversion to residential and residential-support use including highways, of nearly two million acres of farmland nationally each year.

STATES CONVERTING at least 20,000 farm-to-residential use acres in the last five years include, in order of conversion activity: California, Florida, Illinois, Texas, Ohio, Michigan, Tennessee, New York, Virginia, Missouri, North Carolina, Minnesota, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Georgia and Washington.

"In Illinois," Goss said, "and across America, the largest portion of converted meadowland is located near regional urban centers."

Of the nearly two million acres undergoing change each year, he said, an average of 420,000 acres surrounding cities and towns of over 50,000 population are being developed as single and multi-family housing — the bulk currently in single family dwellings.

"None of this construction," Goss said, "affects the 430 million acres — one fifth of the nation's total land area — which is being currently used for crop production."

"And, similarly, an additional 640 million acres consisting of grass and rangeland for livestock forage remain unimpacted by these residential advances."

"The growing demand of a burgeoning home seeking market, is, however, leading the nation's home builders to make increasing use of 'open land' area, to create a variety of housing styles and environments," Goss concludes.

Ford praised on development act

Phillip C. Smaby, president of the National Assn. of Realtors, said that "President Ford's implementation of the Community Development Act has merit, properly emphasizing a response to a growing problem: the unavailability of housing for young people."

Smaby's statement was in reaction to initiatives in home ownership announced recently by President Ford in a Michigan speech.

Smaby said, "The goal of home ownership, so long sought by members of this association, is being increasingly frustrated by the high cost of housing for middle America and by the difficulty young people, in particular, are having in finding the down payments to make ends meet."

"By moving toward a program of graduated mortgage payments tying the monthly payment to family income, the government's willingness to guarantee the success of such a program should encourage home ownership for many Americans now unable to afford it."

"Other aspects of the program contained in the President's announcement also deserve consideration."

"The answers do not lie exclusively with government, but the accelerating response of the President to this growing problem is very encouraging."

Careful planning smooths way for apartment move

Moving to a new apartment need not be a frustrating and expensive change. With careful evaluation and a planned budget, it can be a smooth well executed transition.

Every October and May thousands of apartment dwellers must decide whether to remain in their present living quarters, or join the multitudes seeking a new place to live.

There are many reasons for deciding to find a new apartment, and "you owe it to yourself to choose an apartment in which you can be comfortable without having to make unreasonable concessions," according to the latest issue of "To Family Banker," Continental Bank's bi-monthly money management newsletter.

"EVEN THOUGH you are not becoming a property owner, it's important to evaluate your prospective dwelling carefully because you will be spending a lot of time there," says the newsletter.

To help make apartment hunting and moving easier, here are some tips:

- Don't let total apartment expenses exceed 25 per cent of net monthly income. Cost estimates for utilities, parking fees, insurance, and other related expenses should be included along with the rent in determining the amount.

- Before inspecting an apartment, jot down the dimensions of major furniture items — beds, dressers, sofas, kitchen table — and check measurements against the space in the apartment being inspected.

- Try to inspect an apartment during a busy time to get an impression of prospective neighbors and detect the level of noise that would carry through the apartment.

- When moving into a high-rise, inquire about special services such as security, parking facilities, doorman services, swimming pools, tennis courts, etc.

- Make sure the apartment's functional features meet your needs. There should be enough electrical outlets. Examine the plumbing fixtures. Inspect the garbage disposal, dishwasher, laundry facilities, and other equipment that comes with the apartment.

- Look at the ceilings and upper walls for signs of water leakage. Check windows for broken glass or rolled frames. Inspect the locks on windows and doors.

- Note any problems you discover in the apartment and discuss them with the landlord to determine which ones he is willing to resolve at his own expense.

THE LEASE

- Have all points clarified before the lease is signed.

- Make sure the lease clearly states when and to whom rent is payable.

- Check to see if the terms of the lease and the property being rented are defined.

- If any problems with the apartment were detected during the inspection, make sure the landlord has agreed in writing to those repairs he is willing to pay for.

- Examine the rental contract thoroughly. If there are any questions about the lease, consult an attorney.

MOVING

- Plan moving logistics so that they come off in an efficient and organized manner.

- Keep cost in mind. It may be money well spent hiring a professional mover rather than risking safety or property in the move.

JERRY BOUSCHARD

Just what does a Realtor do to earn his commission on the sale of your house? Start with setting a realistic price on the property. You can ask any figure you like but overpricing may mean months or longer without a sale and seldom does an uninformed buyer come along who will pay more than the prevailing price for similar property.

The Realtor has a list of prospects, qualified by interest and financial ability, not merely curiosity seekers. He knows how to negotiate the financial aspects of the sale, how and when to use a second mortgage. The services of a Realtor usually mean more money and fewer headaches for you.

Pricing miscues top list: poll

5 errors made by home sellers

Although home sellers in the Chicago area were more inclined to work with professional sales organizations in the booming real estate market of the past year than they were a year earlier, they were less receptive to following professional advice.

That apparent contradiction emerges from a survey of 31 Baird & Warner sales offices throughout the Chicago metropolitan area to determine the five worst mistakes being made by home sellers and prospective buyers of existing homes.

Baird & Warner's sales managers ranked the five worst mistakes of sellers this season in this order:

- Pricing the house either too high or too low for the market.
- Failing to make the home as presentable as possible by not making minor repairs, decorating improperly, or simply ignoring good housekeeping.
- Interfering with the salesman when the house is being shown.
- Attempting to sell without the aid of a professional broker.
- Obstructing sales by missing appointments, neglecting to provide a key, etc.

"A year ago, trying to sell homes without a broker was considered the greatest mistake, and this category ranks fourth this year," said Robert G. Walters, senior vice president and general manager of the company's residential sales division.

"BUT THE TOP three seller mistakes for this year, singly and together, demonstrate disregard of important professional advice," Walters said. "I'm not sure which is worse, trying to sell your house alone, or hiring a trained broker and then disregarding his advice on setting a price, how to prepare the home for sale, and how to make the presentation."

Walters said unrealistic pricing is a problem because "You've got to be either trained or just plain lucky to determine the fair market value of 'going price' for a house at any time, and it's far more difficult in a volatile market," he said.

The price you pay for being wrong is losing money or customers, Walters said.

"If you don't know the market, and it can change from day to day, you risk the loss of thousands of dollars if you price your house too low. On the other hand, if the asking price is too high for the market, you're going to scare off prospective buyers. And if you scare too many for too long people will begin to think there is something wrong with the house — not your price."

WALTERS SAID even in a so-called seller's market, it is considered a cardinal sin by professionals to skimp on minor repairs or to ignore good housekeeping. Both are considered vital to making a sale as quickly as possible at the best price, and the two categories cover a multitude of sins, including:

- Not making minor repairs. "Buyers expect a home to be in reasonably good shape when they buy it. It is the seller's responsibility to see that the plumbing, electrical system, furnace, water heater, air conditioning and the complete physical plant are in working order," Walters said. "The psychological impact of a dripping faucet or a defective light switch far outweighs the cost of a minor repair when the prospect begins to imagine the possible condition of things that are less visible."

- Reluctance to decorate. Professionals believe a fresh coat of paint on the home, trim, gutters, and downspouts, fencing, and garage are one of the best possible investments in a successful sale. White or off-white are preferred.

"A fresh, sparkling look produces a favorable buyer attitude, even if they decide to redecorate in their own colors. You can also expect to recover in the selling price what you invested for decorating," Walters declared.

- Inattention to housekeeping, indoors and out. Among the sins listed by the professional are unmade beds, cluttered rooms, and messy cluttered closets, and general uncleanness. The outside uglies include uncut grass, whose only redeeming quality may be that they are hiding a yard full of weeds; untrimmed hedges, trees, and flower beds; dirty driveways and sidewalks; icy or snow-packed walks and driveways in the winter; and a yard booby-trapped with toys, tools, or miscellaneous junk.

"Even though none of these should influence the true worth of the home, they influence the shopper's judgment of the owner and how well the home has been maintained. This ultimately affects the negotiating process," Walters explained.

Interference with a salesman when the house is being shown was judged the next worst seller's offense.

"Once you've put your home into the hands of a Realtor, let him or her do the selling. To do otherwise is one of the worst, although seemingly inoffensive, mistakes the seller can make," said Walters.

HE EXPLAINED THAT the professional will emphasize those features that he has established, through a pre-qualifying interview, are of interest to the prospect. The owner may get carried away with his own well-meaning enthusiasm about features that are actually causing static in the communications process.

"Let the salesman point out the salient points of your home without interruption. If necessary, find a way to keep busy elsewhere," said Walters. "Better yet, leave the house entirely when your home is being shown."

Although it moved down from the top position last year to fourth place on the current list, attempting to sell a home without the aid of a professional is still deemed a major "no-no."

"Obviously people can and do sell their homes by themselves," said Walters, "but it can be a harrowing and costly experience. Besides knowing how to price a house realistically and making valuable suggestions on how to repair and prepare your home for presentation, the Realtor knows how and where to advertise, how to screen prospects to bring only bona fide candidates for your home, how to present your home appealingly, and how to guide seller and buyer through the shoals of give and take that often precedes a successful sale."

Owners who refuse to accept appointments, neglect to keep them, forget to leave a key, or fail to arrange for tenants in rented homes to be away are a serious problem. "The salesman doesn't want to inconvenience the owner any more than necessary, but sometimes it is necessary. If you want to sell your home, you should trust the judgment of the professional in setting up appointments at reasonable times," said Walters.

Although they failed to make the consensus list, the following were included among the top five worst seller mistakes by different sales managers: no way of qualifying a prospect and possibly opening oneself to a future burglary; lack of knowledge in correlating details and financing; taking verbal offers too seriously; being too emotionally involved to negotiate a sale; making home improvements at a cost that is greatly disproportionate to any added value to the house; stressing negative points; and letting pets roam around during showings.

Pirates drop 6 games off the pace

Phillies breathing easier

From Herald Wire Services
Philadelphia may have doused the final flickering hopes of the Pittsburgh Pirates Wednesday night by erupting for eight runs in the eighth inning to rally past the St. Louis Cardinals, 9-4.

Pittsburgh, meanwhile, could only helplessly sit and watch the agony, having dropped a heart-breaking 4-3 afternoon decision to the Cubs in the ninth inning.

The Phillies' triumph, coupled with the Pirates' loss increased Philadelphia's lead in the National League East Division standings to six games, seven in the loss column. The Phillies have 12 games to play, Pittsburgh has 10 left.

Dick Allen singled home three runs, including two to cap the eight-run eighth for Philadelphia. The Phillies spotted the Cardinals four runs in the first, then roared back against relievers Tom Walker and Al Hrabosky to win it.

Larry Bowa and pinch-hitter Bobby Tolan singled to open the eighth and shortstop Garry Templeton booted Dave Cash's grounder for his third error of the game. Garry Maddox singled to score two runners and make it 4-3.

Hrabosky relieved Walker and threw the ball into center field trying to pick Cash off second base. Pinch-hitter Jerry Martin then singled to bring in Cash with the tying run. After Greg Luzinski walked to load the bases, Allen singled to center to make it 6-4.

Mike Schmidt walked to re-load the bases and Eddie Solomon replaced Hrabosky. Bob Boone greeted him with a two-run single to make it 8-4 and Tolan's sacrifice fly scored Schmidt with the final run.

The Cardinals knocked out starter Jim Kaat with four extra-base hits for four runs in the first, but failed to score the rest of the way against five Philadelphia relievers. Gene Garber, 3-3, the fourth reliever picked up the victory.

Back in Wrigley Field, Joe Wallis singled with one out in the ninth inning to score rookie Jerry Tabb from second base and give the Cubs their 4-3 triumph. The loss was the Pirates' fifth in their last six games.

Tabb, a pinch hitter, opened the ninth for the Cubs when he drew a walk from loser Kent Tekulve and went to second on Rob Sperring's sacrifice. Rick Monday was walked intentionally before Wallis singled to short right field.

The Pirates, taking a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Richie Hebner's eighth home run, had to come from behind twice to tie the game. Singles by Steve Swisher, Mick Kelleher and Bill Bonham tied the score for the Cubs in the third and they pulled ahead in the fourth when Jerry Morales singled and scored on Larry Bittner's double.

Pittsburgh tied the score in the sixth on a walk to Parker, Richie Zisk's single and Rennie Stennett's sacrifice fly.

The Cubs moved ahead again in the sixth on a single by Morales, an infield out and Swisher's double before the Pirates again tied the score in the eighth on singles by Parker, Zisk and Ed Ott.

Tekulve, who took over from Doc Medich after seven innings, took his third loss against five wins while Joe Coleman, who relieved Bonham in the eighth, got his fourth win against 12 defeats.

Veeck may have to blush Saturday

Bud Selig, president of the Milwaukee Brewers, once said that nobody ever paid to see an owner, in an attempt to downgrade the importance of White Sox owner Bill Veeck.

But Sox fans will have a chance this Saturday to prove Selig wrong.

Saturday night is "Bill Veeck Appreciation Night" at Comiskey Park, a fitting tribute to the P. T. Barnum of baseball, who put some zip back in the South Side this season, something of an accomplishment considering he did it with a sixth-place team.

Sox baseball was fun and usually exciting much of this year, Veeck's first season in baseball since illness forced him to sell the Sox in 1961. But since Ole Bill has returned to Chicago, he's spent endless hours away from the ballpark, speaking to any group that would listen, hitting about every charitable event there is and never asking nor accepting a fee.

Bob Gallas
Staff sportswriter

Now, those who have gotten either help or enjoyment from Veeck will have their chance to show him their gratitude.

A group of Chicago civic leaders, headed by Emmott O'Neill, have organized this tribute to Veeck and their aim is simple — break the all-time attendance record at Comiskey Park of 55,555.

"Our main objective is to fill up his (Veeck's) ballpark and create some cash flow for the White Sox so Bill can do what he does best," said O'Neill, referring to the money that will be needed to attract the top free agents who will be selling their talent to the highest bidder this winter.

O'Neill reports that there's already a good start toward the goal. The bleachers, most of the picnic area, the football press box and a good part of the stands have been sold for the game Saturday, a night contest against the Oakland A's. Even A's owner Charles O. Finley has purchased 100 tickets and will be bringing a party to the game.

Prizes, drawings and promotions of every kind are planned to lure Veeck boosters to the ballpark, and O'Neill said there's even an incentive planned if the weather is cold.

"We're going to announce a certain temperature before the game and if the temperature at gametime is below that, we'll be giving away mink coats," O'Neill said. "We want to out promote Veeck."

While the tribute night is nothing new to Veeck, who owned the Sox in 1966-61 and brought the South Side a pennant in 1959, nobody is more embarrassed over this whole thing than Barnum Bill Himself.

"He's one of the most decent human beings I've ever met and also the humblest," said O'Neill. "I say hello to him these days and he just sort of nods and mumbles," said O'Neill. "He's a very humble guy and this embarrasses him."

It's possible that a hefty turnout Saturday, combined with good crowds Friday and Sunday, when other promotions are scheduled, will put the Sox over one-million in season attendance. That would be a feather in Veeck's cap in light of the horrible early-season weather and the team's mediocre performance on the field. Last year, the club only drew 750,000.

Tickets for Bill Veeck Night are available from $2 and up and can be ordered by dialing 924-1000.

It's guaranteed to be a night of entertainment in the Veeck tradition, which means expect the unexpected.

The price of admission alone is worth the opportunity to see Veeck blush.

Crowds gather when Irish visit

Here is how to get to Dyche Stadium and what to do when you get there if you want to see Northwestern's home-opening football game Saturday against Notre Dame:

The CTA, the Chicago and North Western Railway, and the Wilmette Bus Service provide public transportation to the game site.

The CTA L-train makes a 30-minute trip from the Loop to Central St. in Evanston, two blocks from the stadium. Express trains from Howard St. begin at noon. Call the CTA at 670-3000 for information on all commuter trains to Dyche Stadium.

The C&NW North Line makes a stop at Central St., also just two blocks from the stadium. Call 346-7979 for info.

Three Wilmette Bus lines stop at 4th and Linden in Wilmette, only 3½ blocks from Dyche.

Parking promises to be a headache unless you plan ahead.

The 4th and Linden L stop in Wilmette can accommodate 466 cars and the parking fee is just 25 cents for the entire day. The Haven/Kingsley School on Green Bay Rd. and Lincoln holds 425 cars for a fee of $1 each.

There are some 2,000 parking spaces located on Northwestern's campus. Shuttle-bus service for on-campus parking begins at noon and continues until everyone is at the game. Buses return to the Sheridan Rd. campus after the game. The fee for on-campus parking is $1. The shuttle service is free.

"We urge everyone to come early," said Robert Kurz, the university's associate athletic director, who is handling all the logistics.

A's wallop Royals to trim lead to 6

KANSAS CITY — Vida Blue, backed by home runs from Gene Tenace, Phil Garner and Joe Rudi, scattered six hits Wednesday night to register his 17th win and 18th complete game and lead the Oakland A's to an 11-1 triumph over the American League West leading Kansas City Royals. The victory moved the five-time defending Western champion A's to within six games of Kansas City with only 10 games left. The two teams meet again Thursday and play a three-game series at Oakland next week.

Blue, who has lost 12, registered his 10th win in his last 13 decisions but lost his shutout in the first inning when George Brett singled with two out and scored on Hal McRae's double. The only other Royals' threat came in the eighth inning when Fred Patek and Tommy Davis opened with back-to-back singles.

Oakland took a 3-0 lead in the first inning when Royals' shortstop Patek dropped a popup and Bert Campaneris raced to second base. After Rudi flied to center, Tenace blasted his 21st homer of the season. Sal Bando followed with a single and scored on Don Baylor's double off Royals' starter and loser Marty Pattin, who gave up six runs but only one earned in 5 1-3 innings.

The A's scored a single run in the second and added four in the sixth, three of which came on Garner's home run off the left field foul pole after Royals' second baseman Frank White let a two-out grounder roll through his legs.

After Royals' reliever Tom Bruno walked Campaneris to lead off the seventh inning, Rudi belted his 13th homer of the season over the left field wall. The A's added another run in the inning when Baylor walked with two outs, went to second on Claudell Washington's single and scored on Ron Fairly's bloop single.

Buffone vows return to Bear lineup

Chicago Bears' linebacker Doug Buffone, helped off the field with a snapped left Achilles tendon in Sunday's game against San Francisco, said Wednesday he's determined to come back "because I want to be part of the winning the Bears are doing. Sure the odds are against me, but I'll be back," said the 32-year-old linebacker, who played 142 consecutive games for the Bears in 11 seasons.

"A lot of people have axed me. But it won't be that easy to knock me out of football," Buffone said, sitting in a wheelchair with his left leg in a cast. Buffone, who is out for at least the season, will be released from Chicago's Illinois Masonic Hospital Saturday, but he won't get rid of the cast for 12 weeks.

"Right now I'm gearing my mind to getting well. I won't just be sitting at home feeling sorry for myself," said Buffone, who is going straight to the Bears' training camp in suburban Lake Forest when he is released "to watch the films and help the other linebackers." He pointed to his cast and said with a smile, "It could have been worse . . . I could have been in here for heart surgery."

Athletic directors seek compromise

ATLANTA — Compromise is the name of the game as Southeastern Conference athletic directors try to wiggle out of the 95-player limit facing their football teams next fall. The SEC ADs completed two days of meetings in Atlanta Wednesday and carried home to their school presidents two alternatives they hope will be presented at the NCAA's annual meeting in Hollywood, Fla., in January.

The first, and the one least likely to get NCAA approval, would do away with the 95 limit altogether. The second, the compromise, would change that limit to 105. "The problem is self evident," said SEC Commissioner Boyd McWhorter. "The NCAA tells coaches they may recruit 30 new players each year, but they can't have more than 95 at any one time."

"Figure it out for yourself. Four times 30 adds up to 25 more than the over-all limit. Eight years ago, when I was a member of the NCAA Council, 'run-off' was the ugliest word in the NCAA. Now, that's exactly what they are going to force coaches to do."

Predict owner-player confrontation

WASHINGTON — Congressional sports hearings concluded Wednesday with baseball players' union spokesman Marvin Miller predicting a "major confrontation" with the sport's owners should baseball retain its long-standing antitrust immunity.

Miller, executive director of the Major League Players Association, told the special House committee on professional sports that he foresees a disruptive labor dispute when the present collective bargaining agreement expires in three years. He testified that with their antitrust exemption, the owners probably will try to return to the previous rigid reserve clause system.

"I have learned that the owners with certain exceptions have a decided tendency to look backward, seldom forward. Their inclination to long for what was is stronger than any proclivity to look ahead," he said. "That being so, there is a strong likelihood of a major confrontation three years from now with all the consequent disruptions caused by the owners' attempt to turn back the clock if the unjustified exemption is permitted to stand."

Other news in the sports world . . .

Fred McNair of Chevy Chase, Md., suffered an attack of sinus tachycardia and had to forfeit his second-round match to Marty Riessen in the $125,000 Pacific Southwest Tennis Open Championships . . .

Twins tag White Sox, 6-3

Rod Carew had three hits and drove in three runs and Butch Wynegar hit two solo home runs Wednesday night to power the Minnesota Twins to a 6-3 victory over the White Sox, who lost their eighth straight game.

Carew hit his eighth homer, a two-run shot in the sixth and he tripled home Roy Smalley who walked in the third. Wynegar slammed his ninth homer leading off the second and homered again in a four-run sixth-inning outburst.

Burt Johnson was the victim of all the Minnesota runs as his record fell to 9-18, and his eighth straight defeat. Bill Singer won his 12th game with the ninth-inning relief help of Bill Campbell.

Fremd, Arlington run in headliner

by ART MUGALIAN
Cross Country Editor

Fremd's streak of consecutive dual-meet victories will be put to the test tonight, and if they can pass that test the Vikings will come closer to etching their names into IHSA cross country history.

The Fremd streak stands at 54. The last loss for a Viking team coached by Ron Menely was in October 1971 when cross-town rival Palatine beat them. The record, according to one source, is 55, held by Peoria Central, whose record string, oddly enough, ended Tuesday night.

"I think Lincoln-Way had 56 in a row," said Menely, "so I'm not really positive what the record is. But I do know that we really want that 57th win. If we can get it, that would be great."

The task for Menely's 1976 crew will be a tough one. The Vikings, currently 1-0 in the Mid-Suburban North, must face Arlington (1-0) in tonight's duel. The Cardinals finished second ahead of Fremd in the Crystal Lake Invite two weeks ago.

Four Fremd harriers were running injured in that meet, though.

"It's up to us to beat them," Menely emphasized. "They've already beaten us so they should be the favorites. 'Arlington's a good, solid team,' the Fremd coach added. "They pack well. The meet's on their course. It should be a real battle."

The Arlington-Fremd confrontation is one of six MSL duels on the schedule for tonight. Other North Division meets feature Hersey 0-1 at Wheeling (0-1) and Buffalo Grove (0-1) at Palatine (1-0). Deerfield, the state's No. 1 team, will also run at Palatine.

In the South, Prospect (2-1) is at Rolling Meadows (1-2), Forest View (1-1) is at Hoffman Estates (2-0), and Elk Grove (0-2) is at Schaumburg (0-3). Conant (3-0) is idle.

If Fremd gets past Arlington tonight, the Vikings can shoot for No.

56 against Hersey on Sept. 30. That would set up the potential record-breaker against Palatine and Maine West at Palatine Hills Oct. 7.

Menely was pleased with his team's performances Tuesday when the Vikings added a pair of dual-meet wins over DeKalb and Woodstock.

"We beat DeKalb despite the fact that Tom Ross, usually our third man, cramped up real bad," said Menely. "I think DeKalb is definitely ranked high in the state."

Fremd's John Filosa was second in the meet, just a count behind winner Tom Wuchte of DeKalb.

The Palatine Pirates, meanwhile, showed that they are fully recovered from the early-season woes that had resulted from injury and illness. The Pirates took first place in the Riverside-Brookfield Invite Tuesday, scoring 57 points in the 17-team meet.

Palatine junior Chuck Elliott was fourth, followed by teammates Tony Vargas (7th), Brian Kessler (13th), and Kevin Nikolai (14th).

Couch Joe Johnson's Pirates would be even stronger if they had Dave Elken, a St. Viator junior who finished second in the meet.

Hersey, Fremd tie; Cards stumble

Zeros were popular Wednesday for three area soccer teams who ventured onto the field for competition.

Mid-Suburban rivals Fremd and Hersey battled to a scoreless tie that included a pair of five-minute overtimes while Arlington ran into the buzzsaw of a more experienced Barrington outfit, 4-0.

The Vikings and Huskies engaged in a classic defensive battle with Fremd holding a shooting edge, 24-12.

The Vikings tallied what appeared to be the game's only goal in the second half, but an offside call wiped the goal off the scoreboard.

Goalies Eric Hartman of Fremd and Hersey's Jim Cowden were superb in the nets, repeatedly shunning shots on goal under the lights at Hersey.

The tie was Fremd's first blemish on their 3-0-1 record while Hersey's mark moved to 1-3-2 for the season.

At Arlington, meanwhile, the Cardinals gained valuable experience against Barrington in a non-conference clash.

After trailing 3-0 at halftime, Arlington played Barrington even in the scoreless third quarter before the Broncos capped the scoring with one in the fourth period.

In frosh-soph action, Fremd topped Hersey, 3-1, while Barrington edged Arlington, 2-1.

America's forgotten heroines

World War II WASPs made history

by DAVID L. LANGFORD

They are the forgotten heroines of World War II, some 1,000 spunky young women who flew warplanes on thankless but dangerous missions at home so the men could go to battle on the enemy's turf.

In their baggy GI-issue overalls which they dubbed their "zoot suits" and struggling with 30-pound parachutes, they logged 60 million miles, ferrying fighters and bombers to points of embarkation, towing targets for combat pilots and anti-aircraft batteries to shoot at, flight testing new aircraft or training other pilots in instrument navigation.

When one was killed, as 38 of them were, they sometimes had to pass the hat for money to send the body home for burial.

A total of 1,074 female flyers earned their wings as WASPs (Women's Air Force Service Pilots) between 1942 and late 1944 at bases in Houston and Sweetwater, Tex. It was an experimental program established by Gen. H. H. "Hap" Arnold, then commanding general of the Army Air Force, and under the direction of Jacqueline Cochran, the famed aviatrix.

TODAY, MANY of them are grandmothers, but they are still fighting for a status denied them since 1944 when male civilian pilots helped defeat a bill before Congress which would have made them military officers.

"Many of these guys (civilian pilots) were facing the draft and they didn't want to wind up in the walking army because we were filling the pilot jobs," explained Bee Falk Haydu of Newton, N.J., president of an organization of ex-WASPs called the Order of Fifinella, named for the little lady gremlin with flying goggles which Walt Disney designed as the WASP emblem during World War II.

And nothing makes a WASP madder than for the Air Force to intimate that its new undergraduate pilot training program for females is a "first."

The WASPs, though under civil service at the time, were trained by the Army Air Force, issued uniforms, ate in the mess halls and were accorded most of the military privileges of the second lieutenants they expected to be.

"WE DIDN'T COMPEL a salute, but we returned it when we got one," recalls Mrs. Haydu, who trained at the old Avenger Field at Sweetwater.

They called themselves the "guinea pigs." They were housed in barracks, marched to meals, did calisthenics and were hauled to classes in Army trucks with wooden seats they called "cattle trucks."

"The flight training, ground school, physical education, Morse code, radio techniques, military drill and courtesies, barracks inspection and every other aspect of military training was the same as that given to the male cadets," said Mrs. Haydu, who at 58 today helps her husband run a hot dog packing business in Neptune City, N.J., while continuing to fly.

The WASPs would go on to fly the hot pursuit planes such as the P-51, P-40, P-47, P-38 and P-39 on domestic missions or the twin-engine bombers such as the B-26 and B-25. Two were checked out in the Superfortress B-29. Another flew the jet fighter which was just coming out of the scene.

SOME OF THE names would go down in aviation history. Jacqueline Cochran, Nancy H. Love, Dora Dougherty Strother, Barbara Erickson, Cornelia Fort.

Cornelia Fort, 24, of Nashville, Tenn. She was the first of the 38 women to die while flying for American military forces. An eyewitness to the Japanese invasion of Pearl Harbor from the cockpit of a tiny Cub hovering over Hickam Field, she later joined the Women's Auxiliary Ferrying Squadron, a forerunner to the WASP program.

Before she was killed in a bomber crash in Texas, Miss Fort wrote in a woman's magazine about the experiences of the girl pilots:

"We get up in the cold dark in order to get to the airport by daylight. We wear heavy cumbersome flying clothes and a 30-pound parachute. You are either cold or hot. If you are so-male, your lipstick wears off and your hair gets straighter and straighter. You look forward all afternoon to the bath you will have and the steak. Well, we got the bath but seldom the steak. Sometimes we are too tired to eat and fall wearily into bed."

ONE OF THE 1,000 spunky young women who flew warplanes during World War II was Bee Falk, left, shown in her flying togs at Avenger Field, Sweetwater, Tex., in 1944. Today, at 56, as Mrs. Bee Falk Haydu, she helps her husband run a hot dog packing company and is a leader in the fight to win recognition for the WASPs.

IN THE reviewing stand at Avenger Field in March, 1944, Gen. Arnold presented the Air Medal to a pretty brunette named Barbara Erickson for her skills as a ferry pilot and administrator.

Today Mrs. Barbara Erickson London is still flying as a partner in a California aviation firm. Her oldest daughter, Terry, recently became the first woman pilot for Western Airlines as second officer on a Boeing 737.

Bee Haydu in 1943 used her earnings from a secretarial job to learn to fly, traveling on weekends between East Orange, N.J., and Martins Creek, Pa. She resents the suggestions by some that the WASPs were rich girls off on a lark.

"There was nothing glamorous about ferrying airplanes around from place to place, scrounging a place to sleep at night and then getting up early the next morning to go again," she said. "It's more akin to driving a truck."

THE WASPS WERE paid $175 a month during training, $250 a month after graduation. From that they had to pay room and board and buy their uniforms.

Though they expected to be put on military status eventually, they received no benefits, such as insurance or hospitalization, and did not qualify for educational or housing assistance under the GI bill. The 38 who were killed got no consideration.

"In some cases we had to take up donations to get the body sent home," Mrs. Haydu recalls.

Mostly for the recognition they feel they are due, the ex-WASPs are still lobbying Congress to pass a bill providing that the time they spent attached to the Army Air Force "be considered active duty for the purposes of all laws administered by the Veterans Administration."

THE HOUSE rejected a bill similar to one still pending in a Senate committee which specifies "no benefits shall be paid to any person for any period prior to the date of enactment of this act."

Since the cutoff date for most World War II veterans benefits has long since passed, the primary beneficiaries would be women who eventually received Air Force commissions. Their WASP time could be counted toward retirement.

It would qualify the ex-WASPs for VA mortgage loans.

But despite active support in Washington from retired Col. William Bruce Arnold, son of the general who organized the WASPs, the bill seems destined to die in Sen. Vance Hartke's Veterans Affairs Committee.

THE INDIANA senator, replying to frequent queries from Mrs. Haydu, cites strong opposition from the Veterans Administration.

A spokesman for the Veterans Affairs Committee told UPI if military benefits were extended to the WASPs, then the Merchant Marine and other civilian employees during wartime, such as military telephone operators, would ask, "Why not us, too?"

And a Veterans Administration spokesman said, "Our legislation has been limited to those who acquired veteran status through military service."

"The WASPs were employees under contract mainly to ferry aircraft and their service was quite valuable. But their service was in the same status as the Merchant Marines, which had many hazardous runs, and there were many other civilians who engaged in contract for employment pursuits."

THE WASPS, he added, "were not subject to military discipline or orders, nor were they limited to military pay. As a result, they were never considered components of the armed forces."

"To do so now would open the door. If military status were given to this group only, it would be discriminatory to all other groups."

The VA spokesman said he had never heard the figure of 38 killed in service — or any other figure — but added there were "industrial accidents all the time."

"There is more at stake here than a handful of benefits for a few of the WASPs," says Ms. Betty Cross, another officer of the Order of Fifinella. "We are going unrecognized."

MAINLY IT'S the recognition they want.

"When you talk about a WASP today, they think you mean white Anglo-Saxon Protestant," Mrs. Haydu said.

The gals will try to muster more support when members of the Order of Fifinella gather Oct. 22-24 for a reunion in Hot Springs, Ark. In the face of the opposition from the VA, they are pressing for a hearing before the Hartke committee takes a vote.

The women say they expected at the time to be militarized and wanted to be militarized, and that Gen. Arnold and the Air Force wanted them to be militarized.

Early in 1944, when the passage of a bill to militarize the WASPs seemed imminent, it was decided to send the women to the Army Air Force Tactical School at Orlando, Fla., for a three-week course to help prepare them to become Army officers.

BUT THIS PROGRAM was dropped when the bill sponsored by Con. John Costello of California was defeated and the decision was made to scrap WASP training altogether.

In a speech to the last class of WASPs, before the program was disbanded in December, 1944, Gen. Arnold said, "You and more than 900 of your sisters have shown that you can fly wingtip to wingtip with your brothers. If ever there was a doubt in anyone's mind that women can become skillful pilots, the WASPs have dispelled that doubt."

Jacqueline Cochran, who was director of the program from its inception to deactivation, told that same class: "What the WASPs have done is without precedent in the history of the world."

Add them up . . . statistics may tell your life span

by ELEANOR RIVES

There it was big as life on my health risk analysis report. I could reasonably expect to live to the age of 81.7 years.

As if that weren't enough, I could even tack on another 1.9 years by modifying a few of my habits.

Wow! Here all this time I thought I'd be lucky to reach 75.

But the 45-year-old man sitting next to me was far less jubilant. The analysis of his health statistics showed he could expect to live only to 65, five years less than the average for men of the same age and race.

But hold it. By modifying his habits, he could live to be 80. By quitting smoking, reducing his drinking level, regularly using a seatbelt and reducing his cholesterol level, he could add an extra 15 years to his life expectancy.

It was statistically provable, with data based on the actuarial statistics of insurance companies. Such companies are betting that we will live longer than we think we will. And the medical profession would love to help them win that bet.

Since 1900, modern medicine has added 23 years to the life expectancy of humans. Now humans, with the help of "Prospective Medicine" can further increase life expectancy.

PROSPECTIVE MEDICINE identifies an individual's total risks and defines ways to reduce those risks. It does not wait until there is a crisis, it does not deal only with ill people, it does not wait until a life-threatening condition is present. Instead it doggedly searches out characteristics associated with shortened life expectancy and sets up lines of defense and a preventive care program.

The Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection in Hoffman Estates has added a new dimension to its 90-minute Multiphasic Health Screening program, a program that consists of a computerized history and 62 tests for the detection and prevention of heart disease, cancer and other serious illnesses.

Now the patient may elect to have his data sent to Searle Laboratories where it is fed into a computer that shifts, sorts, analyzes, and compares it, then records its findings and suggestions in black and white.

First it gives the average expected life span for persons of the same sex, age and race as yourself. Next it gives your individual expected life span. Then it gives the increased life span you might reasonably expect if you follow its suggestions.

THE NEXT SECTION says, in effect, that if you were to die in the next 10 years, here are the health hazards, in the order of their likelihood (by percentage) that might be responsible for your death. Beside each are listed the factors in your data that contribute to these hazards.

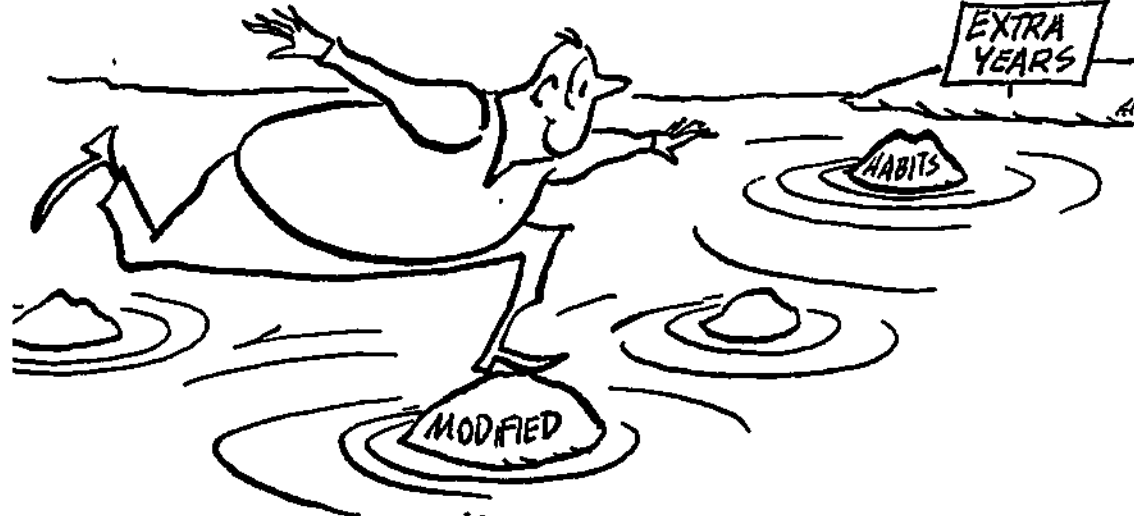

The third section lists, point by point, the steps you could take to increase your life expectancy, and, indeed, goes beyond that to record how many years of life each point may add.

My 45-year-old male friend, for example, found he could add four years to his life by reducing his drinking to "occasional social levels," of two to four drinks per week; he could add another year by reducing his cholesterol level to 220 and two more by the regular use of seatbelts. Quitting smoking would add a whopping eight years to his life.

The patient summary at the bottom of the page simply repeats the findings in conversational language.

What does all this mean?

It means that some persons previously unaware of it will find they are at risk and may do something about it. It means that by changing his lifestyle a 35-year-old man might decrease his risks by as much as 99 per cent. It means there is no age level at which a person must simply give up.

"WE ARE TALKING NOT only about extending life, but improving the quality of that life," said Dr. James Dow, medical consultant to the Center. "Even old age can be improved if the risk of cerebral vascular disease is identified and steps taken to prevent it."

Dr. Dow, who for ten years directed cardiovascular research at a number of universities, including Harvard, emphasized that the huge risk for men in their forties is dying of a heart attack.

"By the time a man reaches 30 or a woman reaches 45, coronary heart disease ranks first among the five top killers," he said. "Of 100,000 men age 40, 5,560 will die in the next ten years. More than a third of these deaths will be due to vascular disease. That's five times as many as those caused by all types of cancer combined."

Statistics show that of deaths of all causes in men age 50 on, 40 per cent will be due to coronary heart disease.

According to "Prospective Medicine," by Robins and Hall, a book directed to primary care physicians, the five top killers of 40-year-old men are: coronary disease, motor vehicle accidents, suicide, cirrhosis and stroke.

"AND EVERY ONE of them is behavioral," exclaimed Dr. Dow. "Every one of those risks can be reduced — greatly reduced. Since the overwhelming disease is coronary disease — and it is preventable — then screening for it makes sense."

He lists as factors to be considered in identifying the risk of coronary heart disease: smoking habits, blood pressure, cholesterol level, exercise habits, weight, family history and presence of diabetes. All but the last two can be changed by behavioral patterns.

The Northwest Center for Early Disease Detection is the only screening center of its type in the north-west suburban area. Information on the testing procedures, preparation for a visit, charges for both the screening and the health risk analysis may be obtained by calling 885-1360 or by writing the center at 1000 Grand Canyon Pkwy., Hoffman Estates, 60194.

Okay. So you have been screened, evaluated and you know your risks. Reports have been sent both to you and your personal physician and you have had a consultation with him. What will motivate you to do something about those risks?

Dr. Dow suggested that much impact is carried when the physician remarks, "Well, it looks like you're not going to be around very long." A person may be moved to change his habits, too, simply by seeing his risks set down on paper, accurately and scientifically measured, and his life expectancy forecast.

"Attitudes can be changed," said Dr. Dow. "It takes time. Screening is of no consequence unless positive action is taken to reduce or eliminate the risk factors."

The doctor says

Body temperature will vary somewhat

I want to know about body temperature. Mine is never 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit. When I am well it is always 98 degrees.

Since my temperature is never 98.6 degrees, I figure that I must have a mild fever whenever it is 98.6 degrees.

That 98.6 degrees F figure is just an approximation. A person's temperature may vary as much as three degrees in 24 hours and be perfectly normal. The temperature is lowest in the early morning hours while you are sleeping. Since few people take their temperature at that hour, this point is not generally recognized.

The temperature is highest in the late afternoon or early evening and it can be as high as 100 degrees F, particularly in active children in the absence of any medical problem at all. Many mothers get alarmed because their children have temperatures high than 99 degrees in the afternoon when in fact it is perfectly normal.

I suspect that a temperature of 99 degrees F for you is quite within your normal range, but you are correct in assuming that it could be more important in your case than in others. To evaluate a temperature you must know what time of day it is taken and under what circumstances. Having just drunk cold water will lower it or having drunk or eaten hot items will raise it.

To give you a better idea about body temperature I am sending you The Health Letter number 7-6, Body Temperature and Fever. It will also give you some tips on the problems people have with thermometers. Others who want this information can send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with 50 cents for it. Address your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, Tex., 78292.

Could I have some advice on kidney stones? What causes them? Can these be cured? Also what about a diet? I know a man who has been in and out of the hospital several times with them. The last time the stone could not be removed, but finally he passed it. I would appreciate whatever you can tell me.

Anyone who has a kidney stone should have a complete medical examination in an effort to determine the cause. They can be caused by medical problems that in turn cause a high level of calcium in the blood. Then can occur as a complication of kidney infections.

Other than those formed as a complication of infection there is usually little that you can accomplish by diet. Some doctors do recommend limiting calcium intake, but if the increased calcium is from other causes, such as that dissolved out of the bones, that will not help much.

The best recommendation I can give to anyone with kidney stones, other than getting a complete evaluation, is to be sure to drink lots of liquids. If you drink lots of water all through the day so the urine is never concentrated, you will have less chance of the minerals clumping and leading to the formation of a stone. How much water should you drink? The important point is to drink whatever amount is needed to cause regular passage of large volumes of urine. In hot weather, or if sweating, that may mean drinking more water than you would on cooler days or when not working.

Whatever their labels, three types of onions

Dear Dorothy: I'm thoroughly confused about onions — white, red, yellow, sweet, Bermuda, Globe, Spanish. Are they interchangeable in recipes? What's the difference? — Barb Doemer Unusual question — and a good one. Whatever labels they carry and whatever color, there are only three basic types of onions: Globe, Spanish and Granex-Grano (I have no idea where this name comes from). Most onions you see are the Globe types. They're round, medium-sized and are primarily cooking onions. The Spanish are shaped like the Globe, but come much larger. Most are yellow-skinned. They're sweeter and are good for slicing and for salads. The Granex-Granos are also mainly yellow-skinned, but they are not round, but flatter, shaped almost like tops. They're quite mild and good for slicing and eating raw. When you're shopping, pass up those onions with damp or soft necks. The best are hard, firm, dry, with small necks and papery outer covers.

Dear Dorothy: Picked up a cotton rug, intending to replace it with a new one. However, the wood floor has a strange odor. Washing didn't remove it. Any suggestions? — Mrs. H. W. Simonds

You might try what was used by an old friend on a floor that had been wet by an incontinent old person. She spread on 10 pounds of the granules used to line kitten boxes, left it on for 48 hours, then swept it up. The odor was gone — and has never returned, even in humid weather.

Dear Dorothy: Before I bring out freshly cooked corn, I butter a piece of bread and roll the ears in it. It may be spoiling the family, but they love it this way — and I think it saves on butter dripping all over the place. — Laura Griffiths

Mrs. Ritz welcomes questions and hints. If a personal reply is required, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Write to Dorothy Ritz in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

Susan J. Shimer— Philip E. Keller

Mr. and Mrs. Philip E. Keller

After a honeymoon in Florida, Susan J. Shimer and Philip E. Keller are making their home in Syracuse, N.Y., where Philip is beginning medical school at Syracuse University.

Both Susan, daughter of former Arlington Heights residents Mr. and Mrs. Walter I. Shimer, who now make their home in Atlanta, Ga., and Philip, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Keller Jr., Syracuse, are graduates of Purdue University. Susan, a '71 graduate of Arlington High, earned her B.S. degree in 1975 and her master's in food science in '76. Philip earned his degree in biology in 1976.

Their Aug. 21 wedding was held in First United Methodist Church of West Lafayette, Ind., and the reception was held in the church hall. The double ring service took place at 2:30 p.m. with Susan wearing a gown of white eyelet and lace. She carried a large orchid with baby's breath.

LAURA BECKLEY, Glen Ellyn, was matron of honor, and bridesmaids were Barbara Eickhoff, Morristown, N.J., Susan Smith, Columbus, Ga., Patti Campbell, Rolling Meadows, and the groom's sister, Fran. All wore peach and rose pink print gowns and carried peach carnations.

Chris Ball, Syracuse, was best man, and ushers were Terrence O'Laughlin and Jim Rapson, Syracuse, Scott Boerke, Madison, Wis. and the groom's brother, Hank of West Lafayette.

For gardeners tired of traditional

You don't have to wait until the frost is on the pumpkin to think about fall-planted bulbs for spring.

The local garden centers and nurseries are stocked with a lovely array of all manner of beauties. A peek into some of the fall garden catalogs that are arriving by mail daily create lovely visions, and would make you believe your garden will look like the daffodil-decked back 40 of Morton Arboretum this spring.

If you're like me, perhaps and long for something other than traditional red tulips, blue hyacinths and yellow daffodils. I get a real charge over people stopping to stare and saying, "What's that dumb thing you've got growing? Then when my back is turned, they pluck it to show the Avon lady.

THE CROWN IMPERIAL (fritillaria imperialis) is guaranteed to turn heads just that way. Garden connoisseurs treasure it. But at $3.25 per bulb or therabouts. Maybe you'd rather opt for its little sister, the guinea hen flower fritillaria meleagris, sometimes known as checkered lily, because of the checkerboard pattern on the blossoms. Guinea hens, which sell at about eight bulbs for $1.75, bloom in April and need a sheltered spot.

Very choice, the camassia (Indian hyacinth; is another showy spring-flowering bloom, perfect for naturalizing in rock gardens and borders. The rich, violet blue flowers look like a hyacinth that just got zapped by a Fourth of July sparkler.

Since I am called "El Cheapo," I like to get the most for my money. My taste runs to anemone (Grecian wildflowers), no more than six-inch high, ground-hugging cuties. They can be picked up for about $1.35 a dozen and planted for mass display less costly than tulips or daffodils.

SWEET-SCENTED starflowers (triteleias), glory - of - the - snow (chionodoxa), dainty puschkinia and clustery red and yellow mini alliums (baby-sized version of the expensive giant alliums) can be had for even less than anemones.

Bell-shaped, pendant spring snowflakes (leucojum vernum) are very hardy and make excellent cut flowers. Don't confuse them with snowdrops (galanthus), which are one of the first flowers to bloom in the spring. The double form of snowdrops is truly delightful. All three are worth planting.

If traditional types of bloomers are still your favorites, consider the fringing, fluffy orchid-flowering tulips, the flashy peony-flowered tulips, or fragrant gardenia daffodils.

"HOOP PETTICOAT" and "Angel's Tears" are two offbeat daffodils, offered by the Park Seed Co., Greenwood, S.C. 29647, that don't look like daffodils. And Burpee, 300 Park Ave., Warminster, Pa., 18981, has butterfly daffodils, new this year, with an unusual split-cup flower form.

One of the most picturesque of the fall catalogs is the one put out by Van Bourgondien, 245 Farmingdale Rd., P.O. Box A, Babylon, N.Y. 11702. Included is a section on wildflowers, so stunning in the spring garden. Nothing beats the beauty of giant white trilliums, pink ladyslippers, Jack-in-the-pulpit, yellow-fringed orchid, columbine. All three catalogs feature indoor bulbs for container growing, such as harlequin flower (sparaxis) calla lily and my favorite, freesia.

Lastly, for those who like bulb flowers, but don't want to wait until spring, try tuning in to colchicum, the bulb that looks like a crocus but grows without soil or water on the windowsill. Also called, "mystery bulb," colchicum can be planted in the garden after flowering, and the foliage will appear next spring.

NOW sets women's issue forum

Seven candidates for the Illinois General Assembly will participate in a women's issue forum sponsored by North Suburban Chicago Chapter of the National Organization for Women. The question and answer session focusing on issues most relevant to women will be held Monday from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. in the Glenview Public Library meeting room.

All persons running for the Illinois House or Senate this term from Districts 1, 4, 11, 15 and 32 have been invited. The public is also invited and may bring up any questions on legislative issues such as rape laws, passage of the ERA, child care and other issues of importance to women.

Health care for women is workshop topic

An all-day workshop focusing on the concerns and issues regarding health care for women will be sponsored by the Harper College Women's Program Thursday, Sept. 30, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the college boardrooms, building A. Tuition of $10 includes lunch.

"Here's to Your Health" will feature a panel consisting of Dr. Collette Rasmussen, director of preventive medicine, Cook County Department of Health; Jean Lytle, coordinator of nursing, Harper College; Kate Davis, director of family counseling, State Division of Children and Family Services; and Elaine Costello, lecturer on nutrition and rehabilitation exercises, Harper College.

AREAS COVERED during the workshop will include a health-care update — physical and emotional aspects, nutrition, exercises, reproductive cycle, medication, attitudes toward illness and health, handling the doctor-patient relationship and community health care resources.

Interested women may register by calling 397-3000, extension 410. Child care for a fee is available by prior registration 397-3000, extension 262.

Arlington Garden Club

A demonstration on pressing plants that can be framed for wall hangings will be the program Monday evening for Arlington Heights Garden Club. Speaker will be Jack Cerman, science coordinator for District 21 and former naturalist at the River Trails Nature Center, who will also tell the story of the plants used in his demonstration.

The club is open to all area residents and meets at 8 in the Historical Society Lecture Hall, Arlington Heights. Information 398-1432.

The Spares

"Decision Making Fears" will be the topic of Frank Flick, president of Flick-Reedy, Bensenville, at Sunday's meeting of The Spares Sunday Evening Club. The club meets at 7:30 p.m. in Holy Trinity Lutheran Church, Glenview.

For single, widowed, divorced and legally separated adults, the club serves all of Cook and five surrounding counties. Information 459-0026.

St. Zachary A & R

A card and bunco party with prizes has been planned for Monday night's meeting of St. Zachary's Altar and Rosary Society, Des Plaines. All ladies in the parish, from teens to senior citizens, are invited to the 8 o'clock meeting in the Parish Room. Information 297-8259.

Engaged

Long-Hoggay

Schaumburg residents Mr. and Mrs. Robert Long announce their daughter Debi Joy's engagement to Mark David Hoggay, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Hoggay, Palatine. A September '77 wedding is planned.

A '74 graduate of Schaumburg High, Debi is studying at Harper College to become a medical office assistant. Until recently she was employed at Northwest Community Hospital. Mark, a '74 graduate of Arlington High, was also employed at Northwest Community Hospital and is now studying health care administration at Lakeland College, Plymouth, Wis.

Gillespie-Boyle

The engagement of Gail Mae Gillespie to Gary William Boyle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Boyle, Mount Prospect, is announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Gillespie, Des Plaines. The couple plans a June '77 wedding.

Gail is employed by the Communicator's Inc., Chicago, after graduating from Prospect High in '74 and studying at Carroll College, Waukegan, Wis. Her fiancé was graduated in '74 from Prospect and is studying at the University of Tulsa and employed by KARC Radio Station in Tulsa.

Minor-Bezenko

Former Palatine residents Mr. and Mrs. John D. Minor, Cincinnati, announce the engagement of their daughter, Linda Christine, to Bruce Bezenko, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bezenko of Cincinnati. No wedding date has been set.

Bruce is a student at Ohio University, and Linda, who attended Palatine High but graduated from Anderson High in Cincinnati in '75, is employed as a training director for McDonald's Corp. in Cincinnati.

Ask Andy

President — many men in one

Andy sends the Encyclopedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Joe Riggs, 9, of Indianapolis, Ind., for his question:

WHAT ARE THE REQUIREMENTS FOR BECOMING PRESIDENT?

The age, citizenship and residence requirements a Presidential candidate must meet are few and simple. The requirements of the Presidency, however, are not. The job becomes more complex each year as our global society becomes larger and more complicated. The enormous responsibility is ever present and must weigh heavily on each candidate for this highest, most powerful office in the world. So much is required of the President that a list would be endless. Although we recognize that one human being cannot be all things to all the people all the time, we can, however, consider some of the vital qualities necessary.

The President has so many roles and duties he may be described as "many men in one." He must have a firm knowledge of history, both of the United States and the world. He must understand the complexities of law, foreign policy, domestic affairs and international tensions. He must choose carefully those in his Cabinet and others who will help him make important decisions and policies. He must co-ordinate the efforts of hundreds of people and inspire them in his own zeal for the best possible performance.

The President must be broad-minded — willing to listen to those whose opinions may differ from his own. He must be tolerant of opposing viewpoints, and draw whatever positive aspects he can from them. He must ultimately be decisive. After all possible deliberation, decisions must be made, and he must be willing to accept the responsibility for them.

Because he deals with so many people, both nationally and internationally, he must possess tact, diplomacy and patience.

The President serves the people. To do this willingly, steadfastly and to the best of his ability requires nothing less than a dedicated faith in humanity. In spite of the pressures, frustrations, anguish and fatigue he doubtless feels at times, he must have abundant confidence in the future of mankind.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Wayne Johnson, 11, of Gastonia, N.C., for his question:

WHAT IS A BOW ON A VIOLIN MADE OF?

The bow of the violin is a springy, curved stick made of a special wood that is found growing in the jungles of Brazil. Attached to the bow is a flat ribbon made up of more than 150 horsehairs. The horsehair ribbon can be made taut or loose by turning a screw at the end of the bow. As the bow is drawn over the violin strings, tiny rough spots on the hairs cause the strings to vibrate and sound is produced.

The violin is often called the queen of instruments, and many large orchestras will often have 30 or more of them playing together. Although the usual tones produced by the violin are as soft and sweet as the purring of a cat, in the hands of a beginner they can sound like a screeching wild demon. Of course, with lots of practice the screeches subside and true tones begin coming through.

Science reveals too much

One great advantage of using all four notrump calls as Blackwood is that you never get confused. Our recommendation for the ordinary player that he amend this so that a jump to four notrump directly after partner's bid of one or two notrump be the only use of four notrump as a notrump raise is almost as simple.

Experts go a lot further in complicating this problem. Some get good results, others occasional misunderstandings, but many frequently lack success.

The bidding of today's hand is typical of the every day American bridge game. North opens the bidding with one heart. South is tempted to respond two spades, but settles for the proper bid of just one.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and Jim Jacoby

North jumps to three spades and South bursts right into Blackwood. North shows just two aces and South bids the small slam.

If West leads a club the slam goes right down, but West has a normal diamond lead and South makes all 13 tricks.

The really expert pair manages to bid in such manner as to find out that each player has two club losers. Not only do they stop at the safe contract of five spades, but they manage to tell their opponents what to lead. West opens a club and South makes his scientific contract right on the nose.

Portable Potatoes

Portable potatoes are great for any occasion, be it a picnic or a potluck dinner. And these inexpensive and hearty dishes have different, exciting flavors which will make a hit in nearly any setting.

ESCALLOPED APPLES 'N POTATOES

- |   |  |
|---|--|
| 8 cups sliced tart cooking apples (about 10 apples) | 1 teaspoon cinnamon                      |
| 3/4 to 1 cup sugar                                  | 1/8 teaspoon nutmeg                      |
| 1 tablespoon cornstarch                             | 1/2 cup water                            |
| 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice                      | 2 tablespoons butter                     |
|   | 1 package (1 pound) frozen potato rounds |

Combine apples, sugar, cornstarch, lemon juice, cinnamon and nutmeg. Turn into a buttered 2-quart baking dish and add water; dot with butter. Cover and bake in a preheated 400 degree oven for 30 minutes or until hot and bubbly. Place potatoes on top of apples in a single layer; return to oven and bake an additional 15 minutes or until potatoes are browned.

Serve with furred North Atlantic Sole or Flounder fillets. To prepare: thaw frozen fillets. Roll up each fillet and secure with wooden picks. Place in muffin cups and brush with lemon juice and butter and season with salt and pepper. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven 15 to 20 minutes, basting occasionally, until fillets flake easily when tested with a fork. Makes 6 servings.

GRIDIRON CLUB CASSEROLE

- |                        |   |
|------------------------|---|
| 6 slices bacon, diced  | 1/2 teaspoon celery seed                          |
| 1 cup chopped onion    | 3 pounds frozen crinkle-cut French fried potatoes |
| 1/2 cup chopped celery | 2 rings bologna                                   |
| 2 cups cider vinegar   | 2 tablespoons cornstarch                          |
| 2 cups water           | 2 tablespoons water                               |
| 1/2 cup sugar          | 1/2 cup chopped parsley                           |
| 4 teaspoons salt       |   |

In a large skillet saute bacon until almost done. Add onion and celery and saute until tender. Stir in vinegar, water, sugar, salt and celery seed. Fold in French fries. Place ring bologna on top of potatoes and bring to a boil. Reduce heat, cover and simmer 15 to 20 minutes until bologna is hot and potatoes tender. Remove bologna to a heated platter. Combine cornstarch and water; stir into potato mixture in skillet. Heat and stir until sauce is clear. Stir in chopped parsley. Serve with bologna. Makes 8-12 servings.

TATER LAYERED MEATLOAF

- |  |                                |
|--|--------------------------------|
| 1 pound frozen crinkle-cut French fried potatoes | 1/2 cup minced onion           |
| 2 tablespoons minced onion                       | 1 egg, beaten                  |
| 2 eggs, beaten                                   | 1/4 cup milk                   |
| 1 1/2 teaspoons salt                             | 2 tablespoons red wine vinegar |
| 1/2 teaspoon pepper                              | 2 teaspoons caraway seed       |
| • • • •  | 1 teaspoon salt                |
| 1 1/2 pounds ground beef                         | 1/4 teaspoon pepper            |
| 1/2 pound ground pork                            | 3/4 cup dairy sour cream       |
| 1 1/2 cups dark rye bread crumbs                 |                                |

In a bowl combine French fries, onion, 2 eggs, salt and pepper; set aside. In a large bowl combine ground beef, pork, bread crumbs, onion, egg, milk, vinegar, caraway seed, salt, and pepper. Press one-half the meat mixture into a greased baking dish, 9x9x2 inch or 10 inch round casserole dish. Evenly spoon potato mixture over meat then pat remaining meat mixture on top of the potatoes. Bake in a preheated 350 degree oven 40 to 45 minutes or until meat loaf is done. Spread sour cream evenly over top of meat loaf. Return to oven until top is glazed. May be garnished with fresh dill. Makes 8 servings.

| Salt and pepper  | 1 egg, beaten                |
| 2 teaspoons marjoram leaves                                | 1/2 teaspoon marjoram leaves |
| 2 tablespoons vegetable oil                                | 1/2 teaspoon salt            |
| 1/2 cup chopped onion                                      | 1/4 teaspoon pepper          |
| 1/2 cup chopped celery                                     | 1/4 cup water                |
| 1 package (12 ounces) shredded hash brown potatoes, thawed | • • •                        |
|  | 3 tablespoons flour          |

Season pork chops with salt and pepper. Crush 2 teaspoons marjoram and rub into both sides of chops. Brown chops in a skillet in oil. Remove chops to a 3-quart baking dish. Saute onion and celery in drippings and stir in hash browns. Stir in corn, egg, 1/2 teaspoon marjoram leaves, salt and pepper. Spoon about 1/2 cup stuffing on each chop. Pour 1/4 cup water into bottom of dish. Cover and bake in a preheated 350 degree oven 45 minutes or until chops are fork tender. Remove chops with stuffing to a heated platter and keep warm while making gravy. Pour liquid from baking dish into a measuring cup; add enough water to measure 2 cups. Stir 3 tablespoons flour into drippings in skillet in which chops were browned. Gradually blend in liquid. Heat to boiling, while stirring constantly. Boil 1 minute. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Spoon over chops, and stuffing. Makes 6 servings.

Food with foreign flair

by LOIS SEILER

Foods with a foreign flavor appeal to Barb and Ray Miller, Arlington Heights. To suit the Millers the dishes should have some of the ingredients and seasonings indigenous to the foreign countries although they don't need to be completely authentic.

Barb and Ray met in Cambodia, where Barb served as a secretary to a missionary organization and Ray was stationed with the U.S. Army. When both returned to this country, they were married. Since then Barb duplicates some of the recipes she enjoyed in the Orient.

She makes soft, fluffy rice the way the missionaries prepared it, and her own version of Chinese Fried Rice combines bacon, onion, celery, cooked rice, scrambled egg and soy sauce. Barb serves this as an accompaniment for Beef and Bean Sprouts.

She remembers eating Beef and Bean Sprouts at Chinese restaurants. Not concerned with authenticity, Barb achieves the Oriental flavor with American food and uses short cuts to simplify the method.

FOR THIS dish, she browns thin strips of round steak and simmers them with bean sprouts in a little liquid seasoned with onion soup mix, bouillon and soy sauce. As accompaniments she serves broiled fillet of sole or turbot and some snow peas, fried rice and soft fluffy rice.

Barb usually serves her Oriental-style meals on Chinese dishes with glass spoons and chopsticks. Guests first practice picking up peanuts to improve their use of chopsticks, resulting in a festive meal.

The Millers' three children enjoy this meal as much as adults. But one of the family's all-time favorites is Hawaiian Chicken which is baked in a sweet and sour sauce and topped with pineapple and green pepper. Attractive in appearance, this colorful chicken is served with soft, fluffy rice, a casserole of green beans, mushroom soup and onion rings, a gelatin mold and rolls. For dessert she suggests something simple, such as ice cream or sherbet.

BARB GROWS her own snow peas in her vegetable garden, and raises African violets so that, as in her native California, she can have flowers blooming all year long. Sewing and macrame are additional hobbies.

Active in the Evangelical Free

Church, she is an Awana leader and serves on the missionary committee, and the Northwest Suburban Christian Women's Club. She also holds a weekly Friendship Bible study in her home and is on the PTA board at North School.

HAWAIIAN CHICKEN

- 10 to 12 pieces of chicken
- 1 large can sliced pineapple, (1 1/2 pounds)
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1/2 cup cider vinegar
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 1/4 teaspoon ginger
- 2 chicken bouillon cubes
- Green pepper slices

Coat chicken with flour, season with salt and pepper and brown in skillet.

Prepare sweet and sour sauce in the following manner: Drain syrup from pineapple and add water to make 1 1/2 cups liquid. Place in a saucepan and add sugar, cornstarch, vinegar, soy sauce, ginger and bouillon cubes. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly.

Place browned chicken pieces into a 9 by 13-inch casserole. Cover with sweet and sour sauce. Arrange halved pineapple slices over chicken and cover with foil. Bake 1 hour and 15 minutes. Remove foil, garnish with green pepper slices, and bake 15 minutes more. Serve over soft, fluffy rice. Serves 4 to 6.

SOFT, FLUFFY RICE

Place 2 to 3 cups regular rice in a 3-quart saucepan and rinse and drain three times. Add enough water to cover palm of hand laid flat over rice. Season with salt.

Place, uncovered, over high heat and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and cook over medium heat until water evaporates and barely covers rice. Reduce heat to very low, place lid on pot and cook 20 minutes. Remove from heat and let rice steam, with lid on, for 15 minutes. (Don't peak.) Fluff with a fork. Serves 4 to 6.

FRIED RICE

- 6 slices diced bacon
- 2 whole green onions, diced
- 1 rib celery, diced
- 1 small onion, diced
- 2 eggs
- 3 to 4 cups cooked rice

Salt and pepper
Soy sauce

Brown bacon in skillet. Remove bacon from skillet and set aside. In the bacon grease, brown green onions, celery and onion. Remove vegetables and scramble eggs in skillet. Return everything to skillet with cooked rice. Mix well, season with salt, pepper and soy sauce. Cover and cook on low heat until flavors combine, stirring occasionally, 15 to 20 minutes. Serves 4 to 6.

BEEF AND BEAN SPROUTS ON RICE

- 1 thinly-sliced round steak

- 1/4 to 1/2 cup water
- 1/2 envelope dry onion soup mix
- 2 beef bouillon cubes
- 1 can bean sprouts
- Salt and pepper
- Soy sauce

Cut round steak into strips, 1/2 by 2-inches. Season with salt and pepper and brown in skillet. Add water, soup mix and bouillon and cook, stirring, for a few minutes. Add bean sprouts and mix well. Season to taste with salt, pepper and soy sauce. Mix again. Cover and simmer until meat is tender and dish is well-flavored throughout, about 40 minutes. Serves 6. Serve on fluffy white rice.

AFTER BROWNING cut-up chicken and covering with a sweet and sour sauce, Barb Miller, Arlington Heights, arranges pineapple slices over the pieces and bakes them. Green pepper then garnishes her Hawaiian Chicken dish.

Super malt for snacks

Question: What are they hungry for when they don't know what they're hungry for?

Answer: Super Shake! It's a terrific milk shake recipe that supplies amino acids, vitamins and minerals naturally & no synthetics, no pills. Now you can't beat that for an after-school snack.

I came up with this recipe when my son, who started college this year, needed to make his own meals on nights when the dormitory kitchen closed. The idea was that this would serve as a supplement, giving him the protein and carbohydrates he needed to get through the evening without the hungries.

THEN IT DAWNED on me that anyone could use this recipe for the same purpose. Haven't you suspected for a long time that those balanced lunches you prepare for the school age members of your family are

The working woman cooks
by Joyce Zeller

being traded off for potato chips and junk food some of the time? And when your children come home from school, how often do they grab what's easiest instead of a nutritious snack?

Well, with a little sales effort maybe we can get them interested in making a Super Shake. They can experiment with bananas or orange juice concentrate for flavor. I like frozen raspberries or strawberries because of the Vitamin C.

The Brewer's yeast included in the recipe can be bought in the powdered, dehydrated form at health food stores and in some supermarkets. The taste is a little different and takes some getting used to but it's an important source of folic acid which plays a role in growth.

IT IS IMPORTANT that you use the full half cup of powdered milk in this recipe to get the right balance for best nutrition.

You can make Super Shake ahead of time and keep it in the refrigerator all day so that it can be available to your youngest children who might not be too good with the blender.

So give it a try. Tell your kids it'll help them run the mile faster, grow taller or have longer hair. The important thing is that we get them eating something that will do them some good.

SUPER SHAKE

- 1/2 cup powdered milk
- 1 tablespoon wheat germ
- 1 tablespoon Brewer's yeast
- 1 (10 ounce) package frozen strawberries or raspberries
- 1 cup water

Put all ingredients in a blender. Blend six seconds or until well mixed. Serve or refrigerate. Serves 1.

Marinades add zest

Marinades, to be successful, should have not only the right oil and acid balance, but should be spiced to enhance the food they bathe. Either whole or ground spices and herbs may be used in a marinade, but, if whole spices are used, the release of their flavor should be started by heating briefly. Ground spices may be used in cold marinades, those which needn't be heated.

In beef or lamb marinades use plenty of the more pungent spices — black pepper, bay leaf, thyme, cloves, caraway seed. For chicken or turkey, you'll want ginger, rosemary or tarragon in addition to the usual pepper. Seafood marinades call for aromatic seeds such as dill, celery or fennel.

Often we want to marinate vegetables such as cooked green beans, potatoes to be used in a salad, cucumbers, celeriac. Here herbs are particularly good — basil, marjoram, tarragon or parsley flakes.

To make a small amount of marinade go a long way, fit the meat into the smallest bowl possible; this will raise the level of the marinade higher on the meat. Remember that thin strips of meat need less time in a marinade than compact cuts. Kebabs need only an hour or two, while an 8-pound roast should be marinated at least 24 hours. When marinating time is increased, cut down on the vinegar by about a third, as the acidity tends to build up.

NO DOUBT ABOUT IT!

Chicken constructs church

Ever know a chicken that could build a church? Not literally, of course — those heavy wooden planks would be too much for even a cocky bantam rooster to lift. But a Virginia recipe of a few generations ago, Chicken Muddle outsold everything else when offered at a church sale. As a result, chicken got religion and the name of the recipe changed to Church-Building Chicken. It's still supporting parishes today!

In the pioneer days of our country, birds were eaten extensively. In Pennsylvania, German immigrants ate Bob-o-Link breasts in gravy. The French in New England feasted on Pate de Allouette, or meadow lark. The Irish, English and Scots were great for meat pies made with blackbirds. Early settlers also enjoyed

Eater's digest

by Jarvis Rice

quail, woodcock, pheasant, partridge — especially robins. Even in the 1800s, birds were still on the menu. Marshal Wyatt Earp is reputed to have concocted a recipe for mourning dove. For his prisoners: Earp had another favorite: boiled sliced buffalo tongue pickled in vinegar. For his unruly prisoners?

One day, centuries ago, a Chinese swineherd, Ho-ti by name, accidentally set fire to his pigsty. Groping around in the smoking ruins, he burned his fingers on the charred remains of a pig. When he involuntarily put his fingers in his mouth, he found clinging to them some bits of meat. They tasted delicious. So he hurried to tell all the other swineherds, who began to burn down their pigsties to cook the new and flavorful pork dish. Today we've found less wasteful ways to cook pork. And that story should remind you of Charles Lamb's Dissertation on Roast Pig.

What are butternuts? Depends on where you live. In North America they're a kind of walnut, but in South America they're another kind of nut called a souari. Butternuts are also brown homespun overalls in the South, and during the Civil War, Confederate soldiers were called butternuts because of their brown homespun uniforms. Their Northern sympathizers were given the name, too.

Do you know that it takes 10 pounds of milk to produce a pound of cheese? That makes cheese pretty economical. The fact is even more remarkable when you consider that we eat three billion pounds of cheese a year. That's including Edam, the only cheese in the world that's made backwards.

Quick, saucy fish fillets

For easy, saucy fish fillets, thaw and drain one pound of perch, haddock, or turbot fillets. Arrange fish in a single layer in a 2-quart, buttered, shallow casserole. Combine 2/3 cup condensed cream of celery soup and 3/4 cup dairy sour cream. Heat, stirring occasionally. Add 1/2 cup (3 ounces) shredded Cheddar Cheese and heat slowly, stirring constantly until cheese melts. Pour over fillets and bake in a preheated 375 degree oven for 20 to 25 minutes or until fish flakes. Sprinkle with 1/4 cup (1 ounce) Cheddar cheese and return to oven for 5 minutes more. Serves 4.

Know Your Value!

A food store should give you total value for your food dollars whenever you shop!

We're Everything A Food Store Should Be!

Another in a series from Eagle's Value Checklist, designed to help you get total value for your food dollars!

Total value is something more and more shoppers are demanding when they shop for food. Eagle gives you total value!

You'll find a wide selection of quality food and meat. Farm Fresh Produce, too.

Eagle shoppers enjoy shopping conveniences like No Limits on quantities, Single Item Pricing and Open Dated dairy and bakery products.

Service at Eagle means more than just bagging your groceries. You'll find employees ready to help you with everything from special meat cuts to loading purchases in your car.

Total value at Eagle means all of those things...and, of course, dependable savings with Lower Prices Overall. Prices so low that...well, you just can't find prices that reduce your food costs like Eagle low Prices.

Crowd pleasing, tangy baked beans

Get the beanpot out. It's time to bake up an inexpensive and nutritional dish using baby lima beans, apples, brown sugar and molasses.

The kitchen will be a beacon of mingled aromas alerting family and guests to this special treat for covered-dish or after-the-game suppers.

If there are leftovers, serve them in a baked bean sandwich on dark rye or pumpernickel.

TANGY BAKED BEANS

1 pound dried baby lima beans
6 cups water
2 cups diced, peeled tart apples
1/2 cup chopped onions
3 tablespoons brown sugar
3 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
3 tablespoons unsulphured molasses
2 teaspoons salt
1/2 pound salt pork.

Wash beans; drain. Place in a large heavy saucepan. Add water. Bring to boiling point; reduce heat. Cover and simmer for 40 minutes or until skins pop. Drain beans, reserving liquid.

Place beans in a 2-quart bean pot or casserole. Combine 2 cups of the reserved liquid (add water to make 2 cups if necessary) with the apples, onions, sugar, Worcestershire sauce, molasses and salt. Stir into beans.

Score salt pork, making cuts one half inch apart and 1-inch deep. Bury in center of beans. Cover bean pot.

Bake in a preheated 325 degree oven for about 5 hours, stirring beans once or twice and adding boiling water if necessary. Makes 6 to 8 portions.

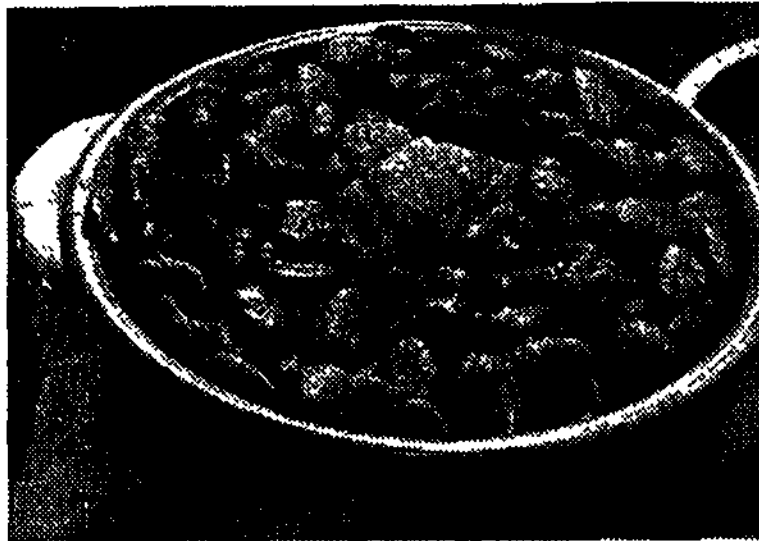

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Cookie storage tips

Take the time to store your home-baked cookies properly. Completely cool all cookies before stacking. Keep soft and crisp cookies in separate containers. Soft cookies require air-tight packaging; crisp cookies a loose fitting container. To keep cookies for extended periods of time, freezing is best.

Yogurt with a new twist

For an easy and delicious green salad accompaniment, blend one cup plain yogurt with 1 1/2 teaspoons ranch dressing mix for salads, and 2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese. As a dressing it has fewer calories per tablespoon than commercial low-calorie dressings, 9 calories compared to 16 to 25.

"I love Italy. I love oranges. I love coffee. That's why I love Orange Cappuccino."

"Orange Cappuccino, inspired by Italian Cappuccino, is a delicious new flavor from General Foods International Coffees. It has a creamy brown color and a delicate aroma—yet it's a full-bodied coffee with the enticing taste of orange."

The flavor is so satisfying I drink it the way the Italians drink their Cappuccino—in a relaxed and unhurried way!" Carol Lawrence

Dominick's BENEFIT DAYS...

A DOMINICK'S BENEFIT DAY is a special day scheduled for the purpose of helping, aiding recognized and established organizations to raise additional sums of money to be used in their charitable endeavors, or the realization of other worthwhile objectives. Members of any organization who are enthusiastic and want to truly support their groups fund drive can individually play an important part in making a DOMINICK'S BENEFIT DAY exceptionally lucrative. For instance, if a group of members during the course of specified DOMINICK'S BENEFIT DAY purchase a total of $500.00 worth of groceries and other items featured and carried in DOMINICK'S FINER FOOD STORES, a check for $25.00 will be sent to the organization. There is no limit as to the amount of money an organization can raise in a one day's effort. Incidentally, each organization is permitted to have three Benefit Days a year. # Overweight child: fat doesn't always mean happy

by LISA PIASECKI

Beneath the stereotyped, jolly facade of the overweight child often lies real unhappiness, or so believes Frank Fabiano, psychologist for School Dist. 230.

Obese children, growing in number each year, remain doomed to face the same social handicaps as their overweight peers and the same health problems as overweight adults — unless they receive the proper incentives and parental guidance necessary to follow a weight reducing program while retraining eating habits.

As Jacqueline Norris, coordinator of nutritional services at Holy Family Hospital, explained eating patterns are established in childhood so it becomes more difficult to lose weight as an adult. Therefore, it is important for a child to lose excess weight and retrain eating habits as early as possible.

NUTRITION TABLES classify a person weighing 15 per cent above the theoretical weight for his height as mildly obese, and 25 per cent as grossly obese.

The chief causes of such obesity include overeating, inactivity or a combination of the two. To successfully lose weight, nutritionists agree that more calories must be used up than are consumed.

Before beginning any diet, however, the American Medical Association recommends that you bring your child to a qualified physician for an examination. After checking for any other health problems, the doctor can then develop a weight reducing program specially designed for your child. This usually involves a low calorie diet and/or increased physical activity, said Mrs. Norris.

ALTHOUGH DIETARY restrictions for a child cannot be as drastic as they might be for an adult, a nutritionally sound weight reducing program appealing to a child is possible.

A successful reducing diet, however, requires a low energy content, adequate protein, fairly low carbohydrate and fat levels, plenty of vitamins and minerals and good satiety value, besides having variety and appeal. Food choices and portion sizes must also be right to keep total intake at the proper level. Too large a portion of a particular food can cause the increased weight gain rather than the food itself.

For a child to stick to a diet for any length of time, he or she needs to feel satisfied. While clear soups, fruits, vegetables and beverages will ensure rapid weight loss, the dieter will feel hungry more often.

INCLUDING MEAT, poultry, fish, cheese eggs and some fat, creates the necessary feeling of fullness for proteins and fats leave the stomach more slowly, said Mrs. Norris.

Nutritious snacks also can help make your child feel less hungry while becoming an important part of the diet when counted as part of the total daily food intake. Raw vegetables, a small piece of fresh fruit, a few animal crackers, a small cube of cheese or a cup of unbuttered popcorn appeals to children while being relatively low in calories.

The Basic Four Food Groups — milk and dairy products, bread and cereals, fruits and vegetables, meats and other high protein foods — provide a good guide when planning a sound diet, added Mrs. Norris.

Good foods from the Basic Four to include for the dieting child are: skimmed milk; fresh fruits, and canned fruits packed in water or rinsed; low starch vegetables, especially those which are yellow and leafy green; lean meats, poultry and fish; eggs and cottage cheese; small quantities of whole grain cereals and breads; and small servings of low energy desserts such as gelatin.

THE FOLLOWING foods should be avoided: soft drinks unless sugar free and in small quantities; fried and fatty foods; rich dressings, sauces, and gravies; rich desserts and pastries; nuts and dried fruits; sugar and sweets; cream, fats, and oils.

Besides helping your child follow a nutritious reducing diet, he'll also need help in retraining his eating habits. To do so, he must see the inherent advantages.

Nutritionists agree, increasing physical activity, looking for fun projects to remove your child's attention from food, and helping him feel better about himself, can all help, as a child often overeats because of boredom, frustration or insecurity.

Mrs. Norris also stressed that the parent not push the term 'diet' with the child, making the reducing program as normal as possible. This often means changing the eating habits of the entire family.

WEIGHT REDUCING requires time and patience, especially for a child. Help your child by letting him work with you in menu planning and preparation; finding ways to serve his meals attractively; and making the small dieter feel as much like his peers as possible, especially when it comes to school lunchtime.

The Weight Watchers Organization, long aware of the social and emotional problems faced by the overweight child, has prepared a series of special "back-to-school lunchbox recipes" which taste good and appeal to children of all ages.

With a special sandwich in his lunchbox made "just for him," you can start your child on a new, more healthy and happy school year, minus extra pounds.

PIZZA OMELETTE SANDWICH

1 egg, beaten
1/8 teaspoon oregano
Dash garlic powder
Dash basil
Dash salt
Dash ground pepper.
1/8 medium tomato, finely diced
1 ounce American cheese, diced
2 slices enriched white bread
Preheat broiler: combine egg with next 5 ingredients. Add tomato and cheese; mix well. Pour into heated non-stick skillet. Cook until edges brown slightly. Place under broiler; cook until egg is firm and cheese is melted. Place on 1 slice of bread. Top with remaining slice. Makes 1 serving.

TUNA-COTTAGE CHEESE SANDWICH

2 ounces canned tuna, drained and flaked
1/3 cup cottage cheese
1/4 medium dill pickle, finely chopped
1 1/2 teaspoons mayonnaise
1 teaspoon diced pimento
1 slice enriched white bread
1/4 medium tomato, sliced
1 lettuce leaf
1 slice 100 per cent whole wheat bread
Combine first five ingredients in small bowl. Spread on white bread; top with tomato slices, lettuce, and whole wheat bread. Makes 1 serving.

BANANA AND HAM SANDWICH
1 tablespoon mayonnaise
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
2 slices 100 per cent whole wheat bread
4 ounces sliced cooked ham
1/2 medium banana, sliced lengthwise
Combine mayonnaise and mustard. Spread evenly on 1 side of each slice of bread. Arrange ham over mayonnaise mixture on 1 slice; top with banana and remaining slice of mayonnaise mixture side down. Makes 1 serving.

Note: for even fewer calories, water-packed tuna, cooked salad dressing, and low-fat cottage cheese may be substituted for oil packed tuna, mayonnaise and regular cottage cheese.

Smart shoppers stretch food budgets without fuss

Grocery shopping can be a particularly painful experience with today's high cost of living, except for the wise and informed shopper who knows how to stretch her food budget to include good nutrition as well as good values.

Irene Downey, University of Illinois Extension food and nutrition specialist, suggests a number of ways to nutritiously stretch food dollars.

Ms. Downey advises buying the foods essential for good nutrition before spending food money on unessential foods. Especially when money is tight, be sure to buy foods from the basic four food groups before spending money on extras with little food value.

THE MOST EXPENSIVE food items are not necessarily the most nutritious ones, Ms. Downey explained. Within each of the four basic food groups, high quality foods can be found at prices which fit your purse.

In the milk and milk products group, buy the equivalent of three cups of milk per day per child and two cups per adult. Dry milk mixed with water is least expensive, while whole and flavored milk are the most costly. A better tasting milk can be made by mixing half powdered milk with part fresh milk. Remember, too, that it takes one and a half cups ice cream to equal the protein and calcium value of one cup of milk.

At last four different fruits and/or vegetables need to be included in the diet each day. Best buys in this group are usually canned fruits and vegetables, dried vegetables or fresh produce at the season's peak. However, warns Ms. Downey, check price per serving from season to season to determine the best buy.

WHOLE GRAIN or enriched breads and cereals rank among the budget foods, added Ms. Downey. The recommended four servings per person per day can come from low-cost breads, cooked cereals and unsweetened dry cereal.

Meat, fish and poultry provide high-quality protein, with lower cost meat cuts as nutritious as the more expensive ones. Eggs, cheese, dried beans, nuts and peanut butter also are high protein sources.

OVER-GENEROUS servings of meat are not necessary. The adult allowance for protein is 45 grams. One ounce of lean cooked meat, fish, poultry, two eggs or three-fourths cup of cooked dried peas or beans contain about nine grams each. If you provide half the needed protein from animal foods, the remaining protein will be obtained from breads and cereals and other plant foods. Knowing the above will help you buy protein foods to fit your purse, Ms. Downey says.

Of course, in addition to the four food groups, you need to buy the essential ingredients for everyday cooking — fats, oils, salt, etc. But even here you can often make your money go for good nutrition. Iodized salt, for example, costs the same as uniodized, but it provides more nutrition.

Natural snacks beat the junk food junkies

When the school day ends, and the kids run home starved, surprise them with home-baked, nutritious treats instead of the many empty calorie snacks filling supermarket shelves.

The kids can help with the cookie-baking. Oat-Raisin Refrigerator Cookies combine rolled oats, full of B-vitamins, with seedless raisins, a high energy food with Vitamin A, iron and calcium. Whole Wheat Cookies blend whole wheat and enriched flours supplying niacin, thiamine, riboflavin, and iron. The bran and germ from the whole wheat kernel, the brown sugar and the hint of orange contribute a delicious nutty flavor as well as nutrition.

For cake lovers, Jam-Packed Cake provides good taste and nutrition for snacking or desserts.

Choose your favorite fruit preserves to combine with the vitamin and mineral packed rolled oats, almonds, coconut, whole wheat, honey and brown sugar found in 100 per cent natural cereal.

OAT-RAISIN REFRIGERATOR COOKIES

- 1 cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 1/2 cup granulated sugar
- 1/2 cup shortening, softened
- 1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened
- 2 eggs
- 2 tablespoons molasses
- 1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 2 cups rolled oats
- 1 cup seedless raisins
- 1/2 cup toasted wheat germ

In large bowl, cream sugars with shortening and butter until light and fluffy. Add eggs; beat thoroughly. Stir in molasses, lemon rind and vanilla. Sift together flour, baking soda, and salt. Gradually add flour mixture to sugar mixture, mixing well. Stir in oats, wheat germ, and raisins. Press and shape into two long, smooth rolls about 2 1/2 inches in diameter. Wrap in waxed paper and chill several hours or until stiff. With thin, sharp knife, cut into thin slices. Place several inches apart on ungreased baking sheet. Bake at 400 degrees, 8 to 10 minutes. Remove to rack to cool. Makes 5 dozen.

WHOLE WHEAT COOKIES

- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 1 cup whole wheat flour
- 1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup brown sugar
- 2/3 cup shortening
- 1 egg
- 3 tablespoons milk
- 1 tablespoon grated orange peel

Stir together flours, baking powder, and salt. Cream sugar and shortening until light and fluffy. Beat in egg, milk, and orange peel. Thoroughly blend in flour mixture. Drop by teaspoonfuls, 2 inches apart, onto greased baking sheets. Bake in preheated 375 degree oven 8 to 10 minutes, or until golden brown. Remove from baking sheet and cool on wire rack. Makes 3 1/2 to 4 dozen.

Note: Spoon flour into dry measuring cup; level. Do not scoop.

JAM-PACKED CAKE

Makes 13x9-inch cake

- 1/2 cup butter or margarine
- 1/4 cup light corn syrup
- 2 eggs
- 2 cups sifted, all-purpose flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon soda
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup buttermilk
- 1 cup preserves, any flavor
- 1 cup 100 per cent natural cereal

Beat butter until light and fluffy. Add 1/3 of corn syrup and 1 egg, mixing until well blended. Add remaining corn syrup, and egg; mix well. Sift together flour, baking powder, cinnamon, soda, and salt; add to butter mixture alternately with buttermilk, mixing well after each addition. Stir in preserves and cereal. Pour into greased 13 by 9-inch baking pan. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven, 35 to 40 minutes. Cool; cut into squares

Ford, Carter ready lines for debate of their lives

PRESIDENT FORD

by United Press International

President Ford rehearsed his lines all over the White House Wednesday and Jimmy Carter pored over briefing books against that moment Thursday when they meet on a Philadelphia theater stage, take seats that look like bar stools and begin the argument of their lives.

The first of three 1976 presidential campaign debates — direct descendant of the 1960 Nixon-Kennedy clashes — opens under stark television lights at 8:30 p.m. CDT on the stripped-bare stage of the old Walnut Theater.

There, for 90 minutes, three reporters will fire questions alternately at Ford and Carter before a television audience of scores of millions — including countless uncommitted voters — in a pressure-cooker ordeal likely to have a major, if not decisive, impact on the election.

Thursday's debate will be confined to domestic and economic issues. The Oct. 6 followup will cover foreign and defense policy and the Oct. 22 finale will be a free-for-all open to questions on any subject.

In Washington, the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals denied independent candidate Eugene McCarthy's request that it block the debate until formal argument of his demand to be included. The ruling dashed McCarthy's hopes for getting a piece of the first debate action.

With the political stakes as high as they can be, the Republican and Democratic nominees rested and studied intensively on the eve of Round One.

Beyond the standard campaign isues, this year's debates held great potential for personal bombshell questions hard to rehearse and already controversial: What about Carter's salty comments on adultery in that Playboy interview? What about reports Ford's congressional campaign finances are under investigation? Where would Carter, and Ford, set the level for increased income taxation?

White House spokesmen quit ducking questions about Ford's training schedule and told reporters he is rehearsing his answers to every conceivable question. He has been doing so for four or five days. He plans to do so even after he arrives in Philadelphia Thursday.

Press secretary Ron Nessen said Ford's aides, himself included, pop questions at Ford wherever the President may be — in the White House family theater, in the Oval Office, in his private inner office, in the family living quarters.

He confirmed speech consultant Don Penny, the man who prepped Ford for his Republican convention speech, is coaching him again, but denied knowledge of whether Ford is using a videotape camera to check the instant-replay of his rehearsals.

Nessen said Ford watched a re-run of the first debate between John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon in 1960 as part of his preparation.

In Plains, Ga., Carter's advisers declined to be so detailed on the preparations. They said he was boning up on the issues, which have been summarized for him in two, thick briefing books, and discussing the debate with

Oakton annex would increase tax base, pupils

by JOHN N. FRANK

Oakton College may increase its tax base by 75 per cent and its student body by 25 per cent over the next three years if requests by three high schools districts to annex to the Oakton district are approved by a state board, said Oakton administrators.

Last week, the boards of education of Evanston Township High School Dist. 202 and New Trier Township High School Dist. 203 voted to seek annexation to the Oakton district, which is comprised of Maine Township High School Dist. 207 and Niles Township High School Dist. 219.

The Glenbrook High School Dist. 225 Board of Education took similar action in July, but the Illinois Community College Board will not act on the three petitions for annexation until the settlement of a court battle regarding the establishment of a new college district, James Howard, the associate director of the community college board.

ADDITION OF THE three districts to Oakton's district would increase the assessed valuation of district property from the current $1.6 billion to $2.8 billion, David E. Hilquist, Oakton's vice president for business and finance, told The Herald. It would also allow Oakton to offer programs it did not previously have sufficient student demand or community resources to offer, he said.

Annexation means "gratification and anticipation of expanded monetary problems which we are well able to handle," Oakton Pres. William A. Koehnline said in July. Those problems would result if any or all of the high school districts were annexed to Oakton after December when it would be too late for the college to revise its budget for the current year, Koehnline said.

Once annexation occurred, there would be a one-year lag between the time Oakton levied taxes on residents of the new areas and the time tax money would be collected, necessitating a deficit budget for Oakton, Hilquist said.

Financial considerations have played a major role in convincing the three high school districts to request annexation, district officials said.

UNTIL DECEMBER 1975, a high school district which did not belong to a community college district was allowed by law to levy a special tax to pay tuition costs to community colleges district residents were attending.

This charge-back provision has now expired, forcing high school districts to pay community colleges with funds from their operating budgets, which have been severely cut in the last (Continued on Page 5)

Missing Glueckert girl seen in Texas

by DANN GIRE

Barbara Glueckert, a 14-year-old Mount Prospect girl missing since Aug. 21, and fugitive Thomas Urlacher, 24, have been identified by a Chicago man as the persons who gave him a ride while hitchhiking in Texas.

Van Guy, 3850 Dobson St., told police Miss Glueckert, Urlacher and an unidentified man with blond hair, picked him up Aug. 28 in Lubbock, Tex. Guy told police he rode in a white 1969 Mustang with the trio about 10 hours before being dropped off in El Paso, about 400 miles west of Lubbock.

The Herald also learned the following developments in the case:

• Lubbock police today will issue a local bulletin on Miss Glueckert and Urlacher.

• A Barrington Hills man has told police Urlacher borrowed $1,000 from him two days after Miss Glueckert's disappearance.

• It is believed Miss Glueckert and her companion are headed for Flagstaff, Ariz., where Urlacher reportedly has friends.

MOUNT PROSPECT Det. Sgt. Patrick Hallihan said Wednesday that Guy had been traveling through Texas and was unaware police were seeking the girl and Urlacher until he returned to Chicago Sept. 3 and read local newspapers. "He came to us before the reward ($5,000) was announced," Hallihan said.

Guy told police he rode in the back seat of the car next to the teen-age girl he later identified as Miss Glueckert. The two men rode in the front seat, Guy said.

During conversation, Guy said he asked the girl where she was from.

Miss Glueckert replied "Mount Prospect." The blond man then turned around and told the girl to "shut up," Hallihan said.

Guy told police the blond man occasionally referred to the dark-haired man, (later identified as Urlacher) as "Tom."

After Guy was dropped off in El Paso, he reported the travelers told him they were headed toward Flagstaff, Ariz.

DET. JACK GNIOT said Guy's story of the car ride is officially classified as "unconfirmed."

But Robert Glueckert, Barbara's father, is optimistic that Guy's story,

"is probably most credible in relation to other stories of people seeing her."

Glueckert said Wednesday he "hopes the story is correct. I don't really know. If it is a very credible story I would hope that it would be thoroughly investigated so that it would either be discounted or lead to the return of Barbara."

"All I'm worried about at this time is getting her home," he said. "There may have been some sort of mental change in her, but we can't worry about that now. If she's safe and alive, that's important."

LUBBOCK POLICE Capt. William Cox of juvenile division said a local bulletin on Urlacher and Miss Glueckert is being issued today.

Lubbock police so far have not been officially involved in the search for the pair, last seen Aug. 21 at a rock concert in Huntley, Ill.

In a related incident Wednesday, Mount Prospect police said a Barrington Hills man admitted he loaned Urlacher $1,000 just before Urlacher left the Chicago area.

David Reiter, 19, of Rte. 2 County Line Rd., told police he gave Urlacher the money Aug. 23 and is still waiting to be repaid.

Det. Richard Pascoe said Reiter has been in the habit of loaning Urlacher sums of money on a short term basis "with hundreds of dollars in interest." Until now, police said, Urlacher had always repaid the loans.

THE HERALD obtained a copy of a letter police said Reiter sent Urlacher Aug. 28. It is unknown if Urlacher read the letter.

"I know what kind of trouble that you're in. But that's no excuse for not calling me at all," the letter reads. "There is no way I can take that loss. No way."

The letter, signed by Reiter, stated that if Urlacher did not contact Reiter by Sept. 3, Reiter would go to the police.

Strikers picket Osco drug stores

In a wage dispute with Osco Drug Stores, striking clerks Wednesday picketed the firm's distribution center, 2401 Lunt Ave., Elk Grove Village, and an Osco store at 1480 Lee St., Des Plaines.

A meeting Wednesday with federal mediators failed to end the three-day-old strike, said Ed Jablonski, vice president of communications for the United Retail Workers Union. The strike affects about 2,200 clerks, but not pharmacists, at the 77 Chicago-area Osco Drug Stores.

The dispute centers on wages, Sunday overtime pay, employee discounts and length of contract, Jablonski said. The strike vote was called after a five-hour meeting Sunday, with 70 per cent of those present voting to strike, he added.

Osco representative George Trumbull was unavailable for comment Wednesday.

JABLONSKI SAID picketing at the distribution center is aimed at stopping delivery of goods to the stores. "We have stopped almost all deliveries," he said.

Elk Grove Village police said they were called out Tuesday to clear a driveway so five trucks could leave the center. By law, picketers are not permitted to stop people or vehicles, police said.

Police responded to several calls of shoving incidents and alleged damage to vehicles.

The Des Plaines store was one of seven picketed Wednesday. Jablonski said more stores will be picketed each day as the strike progresses.

"WHEREVER WE'RE striking a store, we're passing out handbills and asking people not to shop at Osco until the strike is over," he said.

Jewel Food Stores, which often are housed with Osco Drug Stores, are not affected by the strike because their employees belong to a different union.

Asked how long the strike might last, Jablonski said, "It is very difficult to read how it's going to move. We're hopeful of a settlement." He said no new date has been set for negotiations.

Tougher zoning for day care urged

Des Plaines is preparing an ordinance which would impose stricter zoning regulations on church day-care centers in residential areas despite objections by the city zoning board of appeals.

The city council ordered City Atty. Charles Hug to prepare the ordinance after it rejected a city zoning board recommendation Sept. 1 not to pass the stringent regulations.

Currently, day-care centers operating out of church buildings in residential areas are exempt from zoning laws governing other day-care centers. If the proposal is passed, new church day-care centers wishing to operate in residential areas would be required to obtain a special-use permit and meet the same standards imposed on commercial and nonprofit centers. Existing centers would not be affected.

DES PLAINE'S day-care laws, which are more stringent than state codes, regulate square footage, lot frontage, parking, play areas and hours of operation. The city's standards for day-care centers in residential areas are much more demanding than those governing commercial zones.

Day-care center operators have complained that the tough zoning laws make it impossible to successfully operate a day-care center in residential neighborhoods.

In ordering the ordinance to be drafted, aldermen said the proposal is not designed to discourage more day-care centers from opening in Des Plaines, but rather to require all day-care centers to meet the same standards. "What this would do is apply equal standards to day-care centers located in single-family areas," said Ald. Gerald J. Meyers, 7th.

THE ZONING LAWS regulating day-care centers in residential areas were enacted two years ago to protect homeowners from large, commercial day-care centers opening in neighborhood facilities. However, some city officials believe this latest proposal is unnecessary.

Ald. Alan Abrams, 8th, an opponent of the proposal, said the ordinance would "address a problem which simply doesn't exist."

"It will place a hardship on churches to provide the kind of service which is needed by the working mothers of Des Plaines," he said. "I think we would be doing something wrong to pass this. I think we should follow the zoning board of appeals recommendation."

The move by the city council is counter to recommendations by both the zoning board and the city department of planning and zoning. Zoning commissioners said Des Plaines ordinances already are strict enough and further regulations would hinder development of the needed facilities.

A REPORT BY the department of planning and zoning released in August said the city's licensed, full-time day-care centers only are able to meet about half of the city's current day-care needs. The study recommends the city encourage development of more centers.

Dist. 63 administrators get 9% pay hike

Principals and administrators in East Maine Dist. 63 will receive salary increases averaging 9 per cent this year, said Donald Stelina, assistant superintendent for personnel.

District teachers already have received salary increases averaging about 9.7 per cent, Stelina said.

Principals receiving salary increases include: Cesare Caldarelli, Wilson School, $28,518, a $2,133 increase over his 1975-76 salary; Margery Dick, Melzer School, $24,353, a $2,418 increase; Milo Hellman, Washington School, $28,353, a $2,418 increase; Richard Heike, Stevenson School, $24,303, a $2,118 increase.

DONALD HUEBNER, Gemini School, $28,253, a $2,418 increase; Robert Jablon, Twain School, $27,453, a $2,768 increase; Kenneth Johansen, Oak School, $26,303, a $2,118 increase.

Also, Steward Liechli, Nathanson School, $27,553, a $2,768 increase; James Lumb, Apollo School, $26,203, a $2,768 increase; Raymond Owens, Nelson School, $24,633, a $2,418 increase; Walter Slekierski, Ballard School, $24,003, a $1,888 increase.

Administrators receiving salary increases from the Dist. 63 Board of Education last week include: James Bowen, business manager, $30,028, a $1,492 increase; Lenore Page, assistant superintendent for instruction, $30,375, a $2,868 increase.

Also, Patricia Kolvek, assistant business manager, $17,819, a $1,292 increase; Jack Eitelhuber, director of buildings and grounds, $19,761, a $917 increase; and Stelina, $32,773, for whom last year's figure was not available Tuesday.

Supt. G. Allan Gogo received a three-year contract in April with an annual salary of $42,000. Gogo's new salary is 5 per cent higher than his 1975-76 school year salary of $40,000.

A representative for Dist. 203 said the price of not annexing to Oakton would be $300,000 for that district next year.

"We really need that money desperately to keep our own schools going," said the representative, who asked not to be identified.

The interim superintendent of Dist. 202, Phillip McDewitt, said not annexing would mean his district would have to pay community colleges $300,000 a year to cover the cost of educating district students.

"Dollars for the district are difficult to come by," McDewitt said.

BESIDES FINANCIAL considerations, McDewitt said he considers annexation favorably because of assurances he has received from the Oakton administration that a satellite campus would be established to serve residents in the eastern half of any enlarged district. Oakton, currently located at 7900 Nagle Ave., Morton Grove, has purchased land for a permanent campus on Central Road in Des Plaines.

Howard said the state community college board can not take action on the annexation petitions until the legality of the three districts and the Deerfield-Highland Park high school district forming their own community college district is decided by the courts. The four districts were put into a new community college district in 1974 by the state board, but voters in those districts repeatedly voted down creating their own community college.

The Illinois Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that the community college board had done nothing unconstitutional in creating a North Shore community college district and referred the matter back to an appellate court, Howard said.

Ford, Carter ready lines for debate of their lives

PRESIDENT FORD

by United Press International
President Ford rehearsed his lines all over the White House Wednesday and Jimmy Carter pored over briefing books against that moment Thursday when they meet on a Philadelphia theater stage, take seats that look like bar stools and begin the argument of their lives.
The first of three 1976 presidential campaign debates — direct descendant of the 1960 Nixon-Kennedy clashes — opens under stark television lights at 8:30 p.m. CDT on the stripped-bare stage of the old Walnut Theater.
There, for 90 minutes, three reporters will fire questions alternately at Ford and Carter before a television audience of scores of millions — including countless uncommitted voters — in a pressure-cooker ordeal likely to have a major, if not decisive, impact on the election.

Thursday's debate will be confined to domestic and economic issues. The Oct. 8 followup will cover foreign and defense policy and the Oct. 22 finale will be a free-for-all open to questions on any subject.
In Washington, the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals denied independent candidate Eugene McCarthy's request that it block the debate until formal argument of his demand to be included. The ruling dashed McCarthy's hopes for getting a piece of the first debate action.
With the political stakes as high as they can be, the Republican and Democratic nominees rested and studied intensively on the eve of Round One.
Beyond the standard campaign is-suces, this year's debates held great potential for personal bombshell questions hard to rehearse and already controversial: What about Carter's salty comments on adultery in that Playboy interview? What about reports Ford's congressional campaign finances are under investigation? Where would Carter, and Ford, set the level for increased income taxation?

White House spokesmen quit ducking questions about Ford's training schedule and told reporters he is rehearsing his answers to every conceivable question. He has been doing so for four or five days. He plans to do so even after he arrives in Philadelphia Thursday.
Press secretary Ron Nessen said Ford's aides, himself included, pop questions at Ford wherever the President may be — in the White House family theater, in the Oval Office, in his private inner office, in the family living quarters.

He confirmed speech consultant Don Penny, the man who prepped Ford for his Republican convention speech, is coaching him again, but denied knowledge of whether Ford is using a videotape camera to check the instant-replay of his rehearsals.
Nessen said Ford watched a re-run of the first debate between John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon in 1960 as part of his preparation.
In Plains, Ga., Carter's advisers declined to be so detailed on the preparations. They said he was boning up on the issues, which have been summarized for him in two, thick briefing books, and discussing the debate with

Seek district aid for fire station, Hein tells village

The village should seek financial aid from the Wheeling Rural Fire Protection District for construction of a second Wheeling fire station, Trustee William Hein said.
Hein earlier this week said he was approached by fire district trustee Lance Hooper, who said the village might consider "having the fire district work out a program for funding the new fire station or updating the one we have."
Hein, a critic of Wheeling's participation in the fire district, said he gave the proposal "a lot of thought."
"If we're going to be involved in the fire district, and if it's going to take us a while to get out, it might behoove us to look into this proposal," he said.
THE VILLAGE'S fire station is at 312 E. Dundee Rd. The village wants a second fire station built west of the Soo-Line R.R. tracks to serve the west and southwest part of Wheeling.
The fire protection district in 1972 offered financial aid to the Buffalo Grove Fire Dept. for construction of the station at 505 W. Dundee Rd., Buffalo Grove. The district financed the station through a $450,000 loan on which the department makes annual payments.
Hein said fire district help in financing a new fire station "in no way eliminates us from trying to get out" of the district.
"If we can utilize anything that we're entitled to, then we should move in that direction," he said.
THE VILLAGE BOARD has been seeking disamenation from the fire district to increase fire tax funds to the village. Hein has said the district does not distribute tax funds equally between the Wheeling and Buffalo Grove fire departments. He also has said the village could increase fire tax revenues by $30,000 a year because a portion of the village not in the fire district could be taxed.
Village Atty. John Burke last month said about 2,000 residents of northeast Wheeling should have paid a fire tax since 1965 but Cook County failed to collect the tax. Burke Wednesday said County officials contend they are not responsible for collecting the tax, citing a 1966 opinion from the Cook County State's Attorney's office.
"The state's attorney's opinion said the court order (which requires the County to collect fire taxes in northeast Wheeling) contradicts state law," Burke said.
Burke said the 1965 court order, which prevented the village from withdrawing from the Wheeling Rural Fire Protection District, also required the county to levy a tax on 2,000 village residents living outside the fire district boundaries.

Missing Glueckert girl seen in Texas

by DANN GIRE
Barbara Glueckert, a 14-year-old Mount Prospect girl missing since Aug. 21, and fugitive Thomas Urlacher, 21, have been identified by a Chicago man as the persons who gave him a ride while hitchhiking in Texas.
Van Guy, 1930 Dobson St., told police Miss Glueckert, Urlacher and an unidentified man with blond hair, picked him up Aug. 28 in Lubbock, Tex. Guy told police he rode in a white 1969 Mustang with the trio about 10 hours before being dropped off in El Paso, about 400 miles west of Lubbock.
The Herald also learned the following developments in the case:
• Lubbock police today will issue a local bulletin on Miss Glueckert and Urlacher.
• A Barrington Hills man has told police Urlacher borrowed $1,000 from him two days after Miss Glueckert's disappearance.
• It is believed Miss Glueckert and her companion are headed for Flagstaff, Ariz., where Urlacher reportedly has friends.
MOUNT PROSPECT Det. Sgt. Patrick Hallihan said Wednesday that Guy had been traveling through Texas and was unaware police were seeking the girl and Urlacher until he returned to Chicago Sept. 3 and read local newspapers. "He came to us before the reward ($5,000) was announced," Hallihan said.
Guy told police he rode in the back seat of the car next to the teen-age girl he later identified as Miss Glueckert. The two men rode in the front

Barbara Glueckert

Miss Glueckert replied "Mount Prospect." The blond man then turned around and told the girl to "shut up," Hallihan said.
Guy told police the blond man occasionally referred to the dark-haired man, (later identified as Urlacher) as "Tom."
After Guy was dropped off in El Paso, he reported the travelers told him they were headed toward Flagstaff, Ariz.
DET. JACK GNIOT said Guy's story of the car ride is officially classified as "unconfirmed."
But Robert Glueckert, Barbara's father, is optimistic that Guy's story,

"is probably most credible in relation to other stories of people seeing her."
Glueckert said Wednesday he "hopes the story is correct. I don't really know. If it is a very credible story I would hope that it would be thoroughly investigated so that it would either be discounted or lead to the return of Barbara."
"All I'm worried about at this time is getting her home," he said. "There may have been some sort of mental change in her, but we can't worry about that now. If she's safe and alive, that's important."
LUBBOCK POLICE Capt. William Cox of juvenile division said a local bulletin on Urlacher and Miss Glueckert is being issued today.

Lubbock police so far have not been officially involved in the search for the pair, last seen Aug. 21 at a rock concert in Huntley, Ill.
In a related incident Wednesday, Mount Prospect police said a Barrington Hills man admitted he loaned Urlacher $1,000 just before Urlacher left the Chicago area.
David Reiter, 19, of Rte. 2 County Line Rd., told police he gave Urlacher the money Aug. 23 and is still waiting to be repaid.
Det. Richard Pascoe said Reiter has been in the habit of loaning Urlacher sums of money on a short term basis "with hundreds of dollars in interest." Until now, police said, Urlacher had always repaid the loans.

THE HERALD obtained a copy of a letter police said Reiter sent Urlacher Aug. 28. It is unknown if Urlacher read the letter.
"I know what kind of trouble that you're in. But that's no excuse for not calling me at all," the letter reads. "There is no way I can take that loss. No way."
The letter, signed by Reiter, stated that if Urlacher did not contact Reiter by Sept. 3, Reiter would go to the police.

Criminal justice system doom predicted

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Every time a television cop says, "You have the right to remain silent . . ." Stanley J. Reiben says he feels sad, even though he played a role in making the famed "Miranda Warning" part of the nation's criminal justice scene.

Reiben, for a generation one of the top defense lawyers in the United States, says he feels sad because, to many Americans, the "Miranda Warning" signifies fairness in the judicial system — and that, he says, is just not so.

Rather than getting better, more swift, sure and fair, Reiben says, "The criminal justice system is breaking down under the load."

"The poor have virtually no chance at all, it is getting harder for the middle class, and soon — unless there are changes — only the very rich will be able to get fair treatment in the criminal courts," Reiben says.

AS COUNSEL to the New York State Assembly Codes Committee, Reiben has come up with a proposal he says would help restore balance in the criminal court system, though he is quick to concede the idea does not answer all the problems.

In the simplest form, Reiben's proposal calls for creation of a "Grand Jury Counsel," who would present cases to a grand jury. If the grand jury returned an indictment, the case would then be prosecuted by the district attorney.

Under the current system, the district attorney presents the case to the grand jury and then, if an indictment is returned, prosecutes the defendant.

This leads, says Reiben, to a "scoreboard mentality" among district attorneys and forces them away from their basic trust which is "to protect the innocent and punish the guilty."

"IT STANDS to reason," he says, "if the district attorney presents the original case to the grand jury and gets an indictment then he is going to make every effort to secure a conviction, even if in so doing he ignores the basic tenets of justice."

"I accuse no district attorney of being evil simply because he is human. I have never met an in-office district attorney or assistant who admits he manipulates a grand jury. But I've met literally hundreds of former prosecutors who've regaled me with stories of how they handled grand juries."

He cited a case he was involved in at one time in which the prosecution withheld from the grand jury the fact that a key witness was actually an undercover police officer, not the convicted criminal he was portraying.

"That grand jury," he recalls with a slight smile, "thought it was hearing testimony from a real mobster and all they were actually hearing was a policeman who had been working on the case for a long time — don't you think he had a vested interest?"

AS THE PEOPLE'S representative, Reiben says, the district attorney

"should be speaking for a system of justice." But that often is not the case because the prosecutor eventually begins to believe he is "ordained as a protector of society and so he wraps all his actions in a cloak of sanctity."

"This has a snowball effect . . . Everybody must produce . . . It becomes a game of how many indictments, how many convictions? The temptation to achieve a score — a victory — is overwhelming."

Reiben, 61 years old and silver-haired with an elegant taste in clothing, has successfully defended 64 persons accused of murder in New York State. His part in the use of the "Miranda Warning" came when he was chief counsel for George Whitmore, a 19-year-old black accused in the 1963 slayings in Manhattan of Emily Hoffert and Janice Wylie, a niece of author Philip Wylie.

THE CASE, in which it was eventually established that Whitmore's confession was false, was cited by U.S. Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren as being a major cause of the Miranda rulings.

That ruling requires arresting officers to inform suspects of their rights to remain silent and have an attorney during all phases of the criminal justice process.

Another man, Richard Robles, eventually was convicted in the slayings.

Reiben says the grand jury counsel would have a built in check on the temptation to "run up a big score of indictments."

"The indictments would go to a district attorney who would not have a vested interest in gaining a conviction."

FREDDIE HATCH

Mackinac worker, 75, sweeps way to fame

MACKINAC ISLAND, Mich. (UPI) — There's no way to estimate how many tourists' shoes Freddie Hatch has saved in his career on this scenic island, but now someone else will have to sweep up where Hatch left off.

For 22 years the 75-year-old street sweeper has kept the pathways and streets clean in this popular vacation spot. His job is crucial because the island allows no cars and horses are the main form of transportation.

BUT HATCH is retiring from his 11-hour-a-day job Nov. 11 to allow a younger person to push the broom and shovel past the rustic businesses on this Lake Huron Island between Michigan's peninsulas. No successor has been found, but Hatch said there should be plenty of candidates from the amateurs who help him each year.

"I'm a product of the Roaring '20s," Hatch said. "I figure it's time for the late 20th-century generation to take over. Besides, somebody might find a way to mechanize me out of this job, even on Mackinac Island."

ISLAND BUSINESSMEN recently honored him with a retirement dinner and a check for $350. But he didn't stay for the festivities, saying he had to get up for work the next morning.

The Sugar Island native came to Mackinac in 1954 after trying careers as a lumberman and Great Lakes sailor. Technology wiped out his jobs in both professions. He was given a position as street sweeper for $1.10 an hour, and decided to stay.

Although his main duty is sparing tourists the hazards of horse paths, he provides other services as well.

"He's a public relations man and guide rolled into one," said Jack Chambers, an island innkeeper.

"HE KNOWS MORE about island history than most of the natives and answers all sorts of questions asked by tourists. Actually, he's the most official looking person most visitors see."

Some tourists, however, consider Hatch more a butt of jokes than a source of information. Occasionally they borrow his tools and take snapshots of each other doing his job.

"Folks ridicule me sometimes," he said. "Seems sort of silly to me, but if they like it, that's their business. I just don't pay any attention."

Polls show Thompson lead

Charges fly in race for governor

by ROBERT KIECKHEFER

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The gubernatorial campaign between James R. Thompson and Michael J. Howlett already is starting to look like the mud-slinging, name-calling marathon Howlett and Gov. Daniel Walker staged last spring.

Charges of "gutter politics," political assassination and irresponsibility started flying in earnest last week as early polls indicated Thompson holds a strong lead over Howlett statewide.

The week got underway with Tony Kerner, adopted son of the late Gov. Otto Kerner, charging at a Democratic rally that Thompson rose to fame by walking a bloody path "strewn with victims." One of those victims, Kerner charged, was his father, whom Thompson successfully prosecuted on a racetrack stock bribery charge. Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley introduced Kerner. Howlett also attended the rally.

Thompson said Kerner's remarks represented a "sharp, dirty turn" in the campaign and responded with a few charges of his own.

"From the mayor on down, they've started to focus their personal attacks on me," Thompson said. "I think that's gutter politics. I think it's desperate politics."

THOMPSON HINTED he believes Daley was responsible for Kerner's statements. If that is true, he asked, "Then, Mister Howlett, what kind of governor will you be? And what kind of role will he (the mayor) play in your administration?"

Thompson also noted disapprovingly that Howlett has several times recently referred to him as a "Nixon Republican."

The war of words continued later in the week when Howlett pledged that he will not raise state taxes if he is elected. Howlett said Thompson won't make the same pledge because he is "soft on a tax increase."

That tactic is similar to the one Gov. Daniel Walker used to defeat Paul Simon in the 1972 Democratic gubernatorial primary. In that campaign Simon said he felt that if any tax were increased, it should be the income tax. Walker used a quick media campaign to convey the impression that Simon planned to raise taxes.

Thompson has carefully avoided the trap by simply refusing to answer what he calls "the Paul Simon question." Asked about Howlett's statement about him he said simply, "Irresponsible."

The Howlett-Walker primary clash featured charges of "racetrack politics" and vulgar epithets. Even Daley said he was surprised by the low level of the campaign and Thompson said shortly before the primary he felt the Democrats had "gone at it with such ferocity that they've damaged each other in the process."

THERE WERE SOME substantive proposals during the week's campaigning.

Howlett told a meeting of the Illinois Broadcasters Association here he can promise not to raise taxes because normal growth in the economy is enough to pay rising costs of government. He said state taxes have grown 9 per cent a year since the income tax was passed.

Thompson released his 10th lengthy position paper — a document about welfare abuses and problems — during a "flyaround." He said the state must take new approaches to the problem of welfare fraud and cheating and help recipients achieve the "pride and self-respect that only productive employment brings."

Howlett, in speeches in Chicago and Decatur, also urged greater utilization of Illinois coal in conjunction with nuclear power development. He suggested that the state Department of Conservation be reorganized to end political control of that office. During a Rotary Club speech in Batavia he repeated his call for a return to two-year state budgets.

In other campaign developments during the past week:

• Thompson aides released a poll showing their candidate 15 percentage points ahead of Howlett, 52 per cent to 37 per cent. An earlier Thompson poll showed a similar point difference, but with more undecided voters. Thompson's polls show him with less of a lead than one done for the Chicago

CHRISTENING CAMPAIGN airplane, Democratic vice presidential candidate Sen. Walter Mondale pours a bucket of champagne over side of plane. Christened the "Minnesota Fritz," the United Boeing 727 was baptized at Midway Airport where Mondale picked up the airplane for its first campaign flight to Springfield, Ill.

Tribune. The Tribune poll showed the GOP candidate ahead by 24 points.

• Democratic attorney general candidate Cecil Pardee said in Quincy he will permit state agencies to run their own legal staffs if he is elected. Pardee said his Republican opponent, Atty. Gen. William Scott "has stated he has the sole right to represent all agencies of government," but in cases involving more than one agency "has repeatedly maintained that it is his right to also decide which agency he will represent or if he will represent an agency at all."

• Republican campaign officials announced Vice President Nelson Rockefeller and GOP vice presidential candidate Sen. Robert Dole will attend an Illinois "Salute to the President" dinner in Chicago Oct. 7.

• Republican Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey said his Democratic opponent, Edward J. Egan, was ordered by Daley to give up his job as appeals court judge to run for state's attorney.

"The explanation is simple," Carey said. "What Daley gives, he can take away." The state's attorney's office can be a sensitive one for the Daley organization, since an unfriendly incumbent can use it for embarrassing investigations.

• Leaders of the Political Honesty Initiative, after failing to get three proposed legislative ethics amendments on the November ballot, announced they will ask legislative candidates to endorse their goals and will work against those who refuse.

• The Chicago Tribune said Teamsters leader Louis Peick, whose union has endorsed Howlett, has donated $10,000 to Thompson's campaign.

• F. Joseph McCaffrey, the Libertarian party gubernatorial candidate, urged repeal of all drug abuse laws and said as governor he would pardon all drug offenders now in prison.

He said antidrug laws are simply another form of prohibition and cause more crime than they prevent.

Waterfront ruffians replaced by wealthy

URBAN DECAY almost robbed Pittsburgh of one of its most fashionable and historic neighborhoods, the Mexican War streets. But a restoration project is now well on its way to reclaiming the BOSTON (UPI) — Gone are the ragged wooden wharves, the jostling, sweating merchants, the smells and men and darkness that put the waterfront of this bustling harbor town off limits for decades.

Scarred, rotten docks that served wooden clipper ships and steel hulled luxury liners alike for two centuries have been repaired.

Government, private enterprise and $140 million have taken the waterfront from the past and given it to the future.

Nearby marketplaces where fresh produce has been sold for 250 years have been restored.

CHANGE FOR the 104-acre harborfront, including 40 wharves and warehouses, began a decade ago. Most buildings were gutted and modernized from within, leaving red-brick exteriors untouched.

Many visitors to the area express astonishment as they wander through evidence of urban renewal at its best.

For investors, the long awaited harvest has just begun.

"I just don't believe this place," said Bostonian Ken Gurvin, glancing at greenhouse-style glass enclosing merchants' wheel-to-wheel push carts along the outside walls of 150-year-old Quincy Market.

"It's just incredible," SHOPS AND CONFLICTING smells from adjacent cafe-style food counters crowd the 500-foot long interior of the granite market building, replacing the musty, cluttered butcher shops and wholesalers that packed the building for decades.

The city's second mayor, Josiah

Quincy, had the green copper domed market built in 1926 as an "improvement, unexampled in its general character and not to be paralleled for its public utility." Some called it the nation's first urban renewal project.

New construction may not have ignited higher prices for Bostonians then, but the $9.5 million renovation in 1976 has.

Gold plated price tags are common at the market and along the waterfront now that the 20th century and antique chic have arrived.

"I don't know if I'd shop here," said Gurvin, a young financial analyst, "but it's a great place to visit."

THE UNINHABITED warehouse district and the men in tee-shirts that worked it have been replaced by posh apartments housing well heeled men and women tailored collar to cuff.

A harbor view, two-bedroom condominium in a renovated warehouse with a yacht mooring below may cost $100,000 or more. A one bedroom walkup nearby may cost $450 a month.

Twin 40-story luxury apartment buildings tower over the renovated area.

The district's population, less than 1,000 six years ago, now numbers more than 3,400.

Low priced, after work cocktail hours at new waterfront restaurants draw customers from business districts blocks away. Many stay in the area for dinner, rather than hike to the center of town for less expensive meals.

A STEADY STREAM of interest in the district, evident over the past two years, has turned into a torrent in recent weeks.

On the first weekend the Quincy market was open in late August, thousands of city dwellers dodged thunderstorms to sample the results of years of careful planning. Whether they return remains uncertain.

"I can't afford any of this stuff," complained Marvin Carter, as he headed from the red-bricked sidewalks outside the new market to the familiar, crate cluttered Haymarket vegetable market across the street.

Contrast exists between the new market and the Haymarket, a crowded outdoor market that has served the area for decades.

"THEY CATER to different kinds of people as far as I can see," says Louis Jackson, a construction worker with six children who travels weekly from the Mattapan section to haggle at the outdoor market. "I think the two places complement each other well."

Prices and styles compete. Apples selling for 25 cents a pound at the Haymarket sell for 25 cents a piece across the street at the new Quincy market.

Food is the mainstay of Haymarket. Antiques, bric-a-brac and handicrafts fill the tables outside the renovated market.

The prices at Haymarket are shouted and haggled as they have been along the waterfront for centuries.

At the freshly sandblasted Quincy market nearby, prices are posted, not discussed.

Cedar Run party goes to the dogs

by LINDA PUNCH
It was the social event of the season for the doggy set at Cedar Run subdivision in Wheeling.

The occasion: the first birthday party of Ginger, Fluffy and Cupcake, the three offspring of Murphy and the late Queenie.

The party drew canine participants from throughout the complex — poodles, Great Danes, German shepherds, pugs and the all-American mutt. Guests wore brightly colored party hats and Hawaiian leis supplied by the owners of the birthday dogs.

KAY ALEXANDER, 1228 Ohio Ct., owner of Fluffy and self-proclaimed "mother of the mother dog," said the party began as a joke.

SHE SURVEYED the mass of wagging tails and bounding balls of fur. "It's too bad their mother is not alive to see this day," she said.

Nadellie Roller, owner of Cupcake, said the three owners were discussing how the puppies "are all from the same litter. We thought it would be kind of cute to have a party for them."

An aura of mildly controlled chaos hung over the event as Mrs. Roller, Mrs. Alexander and Sharon Sikora, owner of Fluffy, brought out the party refreshments, three rectangular dog food cakes, frosted and decorated.

Small children raced through the area, occasionally tripping over a leash or small dog. The canine contingent generally was well behaved with only minor disputes. Most of the dogs limited their contact to a discreet sniffing of their fellow guests.

STANDOUTS AT the party were Murphy, father of the three, and Azar, Murphy's housemate. Azar, a black and white Great Dane, distinguished himself by making passes at every available female, yanking his owner from one side of the yard to the other in pursuit of feminine companionship.

Natily dressed dogs were the rage as poodles strutted by wearing frilly dresses and ribbons. Azar, befitting his station, sported a white cloth tie.

The party ended with the serving of the birthday cake. The dogs gathered around as the owners dispensed slices of cake and ice cream cups to the guests. The three birthday dogs also lined up for photos commemorating the occasion.

BIRTHDAY DOG Cupcake samples ice cream at her party at Cedar Run Subdivision, Wheeling. Cupcake, and sisters Ginger and Fluffy, celebrated their first birthday Wednesday.

One Cedar Run resident, apparently a non-dog owner, watched the gathering from his front porch.

"All I want to know is who is going to clean this mess up," he said.

Residential fund goal falls short

The Wheeling-Buffalo Grove United Fund fell short of its residential campaign goal during last weekend's door-to-door collection. Greg Crocker, general chairman, said.

Crocker said volunteers collected about $1,500 with half of the amount in. The residential campaign goal was $3,000.

"We expected a little bit better but some of the residents are involved with their campaign at work. We're a little bit discouraged but it's certainly $1,500 more than last year," he said.

The Wheeling-Buffalo Grove campaign has set a $30,000 goal for 1976, a 20 per cent increase over last year's goal of $25,000. Crocker said the United Fund reached its goal for the first time during the 1975 campaign.

Local goals are $3,000 from residential; $10,000 from schools; $4,700 from industrial; $4,500 from business; $2,000 from municipal; $300 from professional and $300 from clubs.

All local funds collected will be returned to local organization, including the Boy Scouts of America, Girl

Ford, Carter ready lines for debate of their lives

PRESIDENT FORD

by United Press International

President Ford rehearsed his lines all over the White House Wednesday and Jimmy Carter pored over briefing books against that moment Thursday when they meet on a Philadelphia theater stage, take seats that look like bar stools and begin the argument of their lives.

The first of three 1976 presidential campaign debates — direct descendant of the 1960 Nixon-Kennedy clashes — opens under stark television lights at 8:30 p.m. CDT on the stripped-bare stage of the old Walnut Theater.

There, for 90 minutes, three reporters will fire questions alternately at Ford and Carter before a television audience of scores of millions — including countless uncommitted voters — in a pressure-cooker ordeal likely to have a major, if not decisive, impact on the election.

Thursday's debate will be confined to domestic and economic issues. The Oct. 6 followup will cover foreign and defense policy and the Oct. 22 finale will be a free-for-all open to questions on any subject.

In Washington, the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals denied independent candidate Eugene McCarthy's request that it block the debate until formal argument of his demand to be included. The ruling dashed McCarthy's hopes for getting a piece of the first debate action.

With the political stakes as high as they can be, the Republican and Democratic nominees rested and studied intensively on the eve of Round One.

Beyond the standard campaign issuess, this year's debates held great potential for personal bombshell questions hard to rehearse and already controversial: What about Carter's salty comments on adultery in that Playboy interview? What about reports Ford's congressional campaign finances are under investigation? Where would Carter, and Ford, set the level for increased income taxation?

White House spokesmen quit ducking questions about Ford's training schedule and told reporters he is rehearsing his answers to every conceivable question. He has been doing so for four or five days. He plans to do so even after he arrives in Philadelphia Thursday.

Press secretary Ron Nessen said Ford's aides, himself included, pop questions at Ford wherever the President may be — in the White House family theater, in the Oval Office, in his private inner office, in the family living quarters.

He confirmed speech consultant Don Penny, the man who prepped Ford for his Republican convention speech, is coaching him again, but denied knowledge of whether Ford is using a videotape camera to check the instant-replay of his rehearsals.

Nessen said Ford watched a re-run of the first debate between John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon in 1960 as part of his preparation.

In Plains, Ga., Carter's advisers declined to be so detailed on the preparations. They said he was boning up on the issues, which have been summarized for him in two, thick briefing books, and discussing the debate with

Mall merchants find business for most good

by BILL HURLEY

The Buffalo Grove Mall has been faced with many problems since it first opened in 1970, but merchants say business remains good for most stores.

Two stores have expanded since moving into the 18-unit mall at Arlington Heights and Dundee roads. More than half of the stores are paying a percentage of their sales in addition to the base rent because of the high volume of their sales, said James Conones of Kenroy Inc., which manages the property.

However, two stores, including a major tenant, Scott's Family Center, have left the mall because of poor business and some businessmen and village officials have expressed concern that business has been decreasing.

JACQUELINE BRINN, president of the Buffalo Grove Chamber of Commerce, said her impression is that the mall is "the only shopping center in the village that is not doing well."

She said she has no sales figures available, but has been to all of the centers and found the mall "seems to have the least amount of people."

Daine Roberts, former manager of Scott's, said business never was good for his store at the mall. He said there were not enough people in the area to generate adequate business when the store opened in 1970.

As the area developed, he said, extended construction along Dundee Road made drivers seek alternative routes, taking business away from the mall.

The most recent problem — one which was a major factor forcing Scott's to leave the mall — was the influence of the Plaza Verde Shopping Center, which opened across the street from the mall last year.

ROBERTS SAID Plaza Verde brought competition that took away business from the smaller and less modern Buffalo Grove Mall. He said Scott's, one of the first stores to locate in the mall, left because business was too slow to support a store the size of Scott's.

Other mall businessmen say the smaller specialty stores in the mall do not require the volume of business Scott's does, and are doing well.

Several said business has been increasing recently and Plaza Verde actually has been a boon to business because it brings shoppers to the area.

But they do want replacements for Scott's and for Frank's Shoes, on the Mall facing problems

A FOR RENT sign looms over an empty Buffalo Grove Mall at mid-day. The mall is facing problems of competition from Plaza

Verde across the street, poor architectural design and the absence of a good "anchor store" to draw business, say businessmen and village officials. Despite the problems, merchants say business is good and, in some cases, increasing.

by DANN GIRE

Barbara Glueckert, a 14-year-old Mount Prospect girl missing since Aug. 21, and fugitive Thomas Urlacher, 21, have been identified by a Chicago man as the persons who gave him a ride while hitchhiking in Texas.

Van Guy, 9330 Dobson St., told police Miss Glueckert, Urlacher and an unidentified man with blond hair, picked him up Aug. 28 in Lubbock, Tex. Guy told police he rode in a white 1969 Mustang with the trio about 10 hours before being dropped off in El Paso, about 400 miles west of Lubbock.

The Herald also learned the following developments in the case:

• Lubbock police today will issue a local bulletin on Miss Glueckert and Urlacher.

• A Barrington Hills man has told police Urlacher borrowed $1,000 from him two days after Miss Glueckert's disappearance.

• It is believed Miss Glueckert and her companion are headed for Flagstaff, Ariz., where Urlacher reportedly has friends.

MOUNT PROSPECT Det. Sgt. Patrick Hallihan said Wednesday that Guy had been traveling through Texas and was unaware police were seeking the girl and Urlacher until he returned to Chicago Sept. 3 and read local newspapers. "He came to us before the reward ($5,000) was announced," Hallihan said.

Guy told police he rode in the back seat of the car next to the teen-age girl he later identified as Miss Glueckert. The two men rode in the front seat, Guy said.

During conversation, Guy said he asked the girl where she was from.

Miss Glueckert replied "Mount Prospect." The blond man then turned around and told the girl to "shut up," Hallihan said.

Guy told police the blond man occasionally referred to the dark-haired man, (later identified as Urlacher) as "Tom."

After Guy was dropped off in El Paso, he reported the travelers told him they were headed toward Flagstaff, Ariz.

DET. JACK GNIOT said Guy's story of the car ride is officially classified as "unconfirmed."

But Robert Glueckert, Barbara's father, is optimistic that Guy's story,

"is probably most credible in relation to other stories of people seeing her."

Glueckert said Wednesday he "hopes the story is correct. I don't really know. If it is a very credible story I would hope that it would be thoroughly investigated so that it would either be discounted or lead to the return of Barbara."

"All I'm worried about at this time is getting her home," he said. "There may have been some sort of mental change in her, but we can't worry about that now. If she's safe and alive, that's important."

LUBBOCK POLICE Capt. William Cox of juvenile division said a local bulletin on Urlacher and Miss Glueckert is being issued today.

Lubbock police so far have not been officially involved in the search for the pair, last seen Aug. 21 at a rock concert in Huntley, Ill.

In a related incident Wednesday, Mount Prospect police said a Barrington Hills man admitted he loaned Urlacher $1,000 just before Urlacher left the Chicago area.

David Rottler, 19, of Rte. 2 County Line Rd., told police he gave Urlacher the money Aug. 23 and is still waiting to be repaid.

Det. Richard Pascoe said Reiter has been in the habit of loaning Urlacher sums of money on a short term basis "with hundreds of dollars in interest." Until now, police said, Urlacher had always repaid the loans.

THE HERALD obtained a copy of a letter police said Reiter sent Urlacher Aug. 28. It is unknown if Urlacher read the letter.

"I know what kind of trouble that you're in. But that's no excuse for not calling me at all," the letter reads. "There is no way I can take that loss. No way."

The letter, signed by Reiter, stated that if Urlacher did not contact Reiter by Sept. 3, Reiter would go to the police.

Criminal justice system doom predicted

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Every time a television cop says, "You have the right to remain silent . . ." Stanley J. Reiben says he feels sad, even though he played a role in making the famed "Miranda Warning" part of the nation's criminal justice scene.

Reiben, for a generation one of the top defense lawyers in the United States, says he feels sad because, to many Americans, the "Miranda Warning" signifies fairness in the judicial system — and that, he says, is just not so.

Rather than getting better, more

swift, sure and fair, Reiben says, "The criminal justice system is breaking down under the load."

"The poor have virtually no chance at all, it is getting harder for the middle class, and soon — unless there are changes — only the very rich will be able to get fair treatment in the criminal courts," Reiben says.

AS COUNSEL to the New York State Assembly Codes Committee, Reiben has come up with a proposal he says would help restore balance in the criminal court system, though he is quick to concede the idea does not answer all the problems.

In the simplest form, Reiben's proposal calls for creation of a "Grand Jury Counsel," who would present cases to a grand jury. If the grand jury returned an indictment, the case would then be prosecuted by the district attorney.

Under the current system, the district attorney presents the case to the grand jury and then, if an indictment is returned, prosecutes the defendant.

This leads, says Reiben, to a "scoreboard mentality" among district attorneys and forces them away from their basic trust which is "to protect the innocent and punish the guilty."

"IT STANDS to reason," he says, "if the district attorney presents the original case to the grand jury and gets an indictment then he is going to make every effort to secure a conviction, even if in so doing he ignores the basic tenets of justice."

"I accuse no district attorney of being evil simply because he is human. I have never met an in-office district attorney or assistant who admits he manipulates a grand jury. But I've met literally hundreds of former prosecutors who've regaled me with stories of how they handled grand juries."

He cited a case he was involved in at one time in which the prosecution withheld from the grand jury the fact that a key witness was actually an undercover police officer, not the convicted criminal he was portraying.

"That grand jury," he recalls with a slight smile, "thought it was hearing testimony from a real mobster and all they were actually hearing was a policeman who had been working on the case for a long time — don't you think he had a vested interest?"

AS THE PEOPLE'S representative, Reiben says, the district attorney

"should be speaking for a system of justice." But that often is not the case because the prosecutor eventually begins to believe he is "ordained as a protector of society and so he wraps all his actions in a cloak of sanctity."

"This has a snowball effect . . . Everybody must produce . . . It becomes a game of how many indictments, how many convictions? The temptation to achieve a score — a victory — is overwhelming."

Reiben, 61 years old and silver-haired with an elegant taste in clothing, has successfully defended 64 persons accused of murder in New York State. His part in the use of the "Miranda Warning" came when he was chief counsel for George Whitmore, a 19-year-old black accused in the 1953

slayings in Manhattan of Emily Hoffert and Janice Wylie, a niece of author Philip Wylie.

THE CASE, in which it was eventually established that Whitmore's confession was false, was cited by U.S. Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren as being a major cause of the Miranda rulings.

That ruling requires arresting officers to inform suspects of their rights to remain silent and have an attorney during all phases of the criminal justice process.

Another man, Richard Robles, eventually was convicted in the slayings.

Reiben says the grand jury counsel would have a built in check on the temptation to "run up a big score of indictments."

"The indictments would go to a district attorney who would not have a vested interest in gaining a conviction."

FREDDIE HATCH

Mackinac worker, 75, sweeps way to fame

MACKINAC ISLAND, Mich. (UPI) — There's no way to estimate how many tourists' shoes Freddie Hatch has saved in his career on this scenic island, but now someone else will have to sweep up where Hatch left off.

For 22 years the 75-year-old street sweeper has kept the pathways and streets clean in this popular vacation spot. His job is crucial because the island allows no cars and horses are the main form of transportation.

BUT HATCH is retiring from his 11-hour-a-day job Nov. 11 to allow a younger person to push the broom and shovel past the rustic businesses on this Lake Huron Island between Michigan's peninsulas. No successor has been found, but Hatch said there should be plenty of candidates from the amateurs who help him each year.

"I'm a product of the Roaring '20s," Hatch said. "I figure it's time for the late 20th-century generation to take over. Besides, somebody might find a way to mechanize me out of this job, even on Mackinac Island."

ISLAND BUSINESSMEN recently honored him with a retirement dinner and a check for $850. But he didn't stay for the festivities, saying he had to get up for work the next morning.

The Sugar Island native came to Mackinac in 1954 after trying careers as a lumberman and Great Lakes' sailor. Technology wiped out his jobs in both professions. He was given a position as street sweeper for $1.10 an hour, and decided to stay.

Although his main duty is sparing tourists the hazards of horse paths, he provides other services as well.

"He's a public relations man and guide rolled into one," said Jack Chambers, an island innkeeper.

"HE KNOWS MORE about island history than most of the natives and answers all sorts of questions asked by tourists. Actually, he's the most official looking person most visitors see."

Some tourists, however, consider Hatch more a butt of jokes than a source of information. Occasionally they borrow his tools and take snapshots of each other doing his job.

"Folks ridicule me sometimes," he said. "Seems sort of silly to me, but if they like it, that's their business. I just don't pay any attention."

Polls show Thompson lead

Charges fly in race for governor

by ROBERT KIECKHEFER

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The gubernatorial campaign between James R. Thompson and Michael J. Howlett already is starting to look like the mud-slinging, name-calling marathon Howlett and Gov. Daniel Walker staged last spring.

Charges of "gutter politics," political assassination and irresponsibility started flying in earnest last week as early polls indicated Thompson holds a strong lead over Howlett statewide.

The week got underway with Tony Kerner, adopted son of the late Gov. Otto Kerner, charging at a Democratic rally that Thompson rose to fame by walking a bloody path "strewn with victims." One of those victims, Kerner charged, was his father, whom Thompson successfully prosecuted on a racetrack stock bribery charge. Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley introduced Kerner. Howlett also attended the rally.

Thompson said Kerner's remarks represented a "sharp, dirty turn" in the campaign and responded with a few charges of his own.

"From the mayor on down, they've started to focus their personal attacks on me," Thompson said. "I think that's gutter politics. I think it's desperate politics."

THOMPSON HINTED he believes Daley was responsible for Kerner's statements. If that is true, he asked, "Then, Mister Howlett, what kind of governor will you be? And what kind of role will he (the mayor) play in your administration?"

Thompson also noted disapprovingly that Howlett has several times recently referred to him as a "Nixon Republican."

The war of words continued later in the week when Howlett pledged that he will not raise state taxes if he is elected. Howlett said Thompson won't make the same pledge because he is "soft on a tax increase."

That tactic is similar to the one Gov. Daniel Walker used to defeat Paul Simon in the 1972 Democratic gubernatorial primary. In that campaign Simon said he felt that if any tax were increased, it should be the income tax. Walker used a quick media campaign to convey the impression that Simon planned to raise taxes.

Thompson has carefully avoided the trap by simply refusing to answer what he calls "the Paul Simon question." Asked about Howlett's statement about him he said simply, "Irresponsible."

The Howlett-Walker primary clash featured charges of "racetrack politics" and vulgar epithets. Even Daley said he was surprised by the low level of the campaign and Thompson said shortly before the primary he felt the Democrats had "gone at it with such ferocity that they've damaged each other in the process."

THERE WERE SOME substantive proposals during the week's campaigning.

Howlett told a meeting of the Illinois Broadcasters Association here he can promise not to raise taxes because normal growth in the economy is enough to pay rising costs of government. He said state taxes have grown 9 per cent a year since the income tax was passed.

Thompson released his 10th lengthy position paper — a document about welfare abuses and problems — during a "flyaround." He said the state must take new approaches to the problem of welfare fraud and cheating and help recipients achieve the "pride and self-respect that only productive employment brings."

Howlett, in speeches in Chicago and Decatur, also urged greater utilization of Illinois coal in conjunction with nuclear power development. He suggested that the state Department of Conservation be reorganized to end political control of that office. During a Rotary Club speech in Batavia he repeated his call for a return to two-year state budgets.

In other campaign developments during the past week:

• Thompson aides released a poll showing their candidate 15 percentage points ahead of Howlett, 52 per cent to 37 per cent. An earlier Thompson poll showed a similar point difference, but with more undecided voters. Thompson's polls show him with less of a lead than one done for the Chicago

CHRISTENING CAMPAIGN airplane, Democratic vice presidential candidate Sen. Walter Mondale pours a bucket of champagne over side of plane. Christened the "Minnesota Fritz," the United Boeing 727 was baptized at Midway Airport where Mondale picked up the airplane for its first campaign flight to Springfield, Ill.

Tribune. The Tribune poll showed the GOP candidate ahead by 24 points.

• Democratic attorney general candidate Cecil Pardee said in Quincy he will permit state agencies to run their own legal staffs if he is elected. Pardee said his Republican opponent, Atty. Gen. William Scott "has stated he has the sole right to represent all agencies of government," but in cases involving more than one agency "has repeatedly maintained that it is his right to also decide which agency he will represent or if he will represent an agency at all."

• Republican campaign officials announced Vice President Nelson Rockefeller and GOP vice presidential candidate Sen. Robert Dole will attend an Illinois "Salute to the President" dinner in Chicago Oct. 7.

• Republican Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey said his Democratic opponent, Edward J. Egan, was ordered by Daley to give up his job as appeals court judge to run for state's attorney.

"The explanation is simple," Carey said. "What Daley giveth, he can taketh away." The state's attorney's office can be a sensitive one for the Daley organization, since an unfriendly incumbent can use it for embarrassing investigations.

• Leaders of the Political Honesty Initiative, after failing to get three proposed legislative ethics amendments on the November ballot, announced they will ask legislative candidates to endorse their goals and will work against those who refuse.

• The Chicago Tribune said Teamsters leader Louis Peick, whose union has endorsed Howlett, has donated $10,000 to Thompson's campaign.

• F. Joseph McCaffrey, the Libertarian party gubernatorial candidate, urged repeal of all drug abuse laws and said as governor he would pardon all drug offenders now in prison.

He said antidrug laws are simply another form of prohibition and cause more crime than they prevent.

Waterfront ruffians replaced by wealthy

URBAN DECAY almost robbed Pittsburgh of one of its most fashionable and historic neighborhoods, the Mexican War streets. But a restoration project is now well on its way to reclaiming the BOSTON (UPI) — Gone are the ragged wooden wharves, the jostling, sweating merchants, the smells and men and darkness that put the waterfront of this bustling harbor town off limits for decades.

Scared, rotten docks that served wooden clipper ships and steel hulled luxury liners alike for two centuries have been repaired.

Government, private enterprise and $140 million have taken the waterfront from the past and given it to the future.

Nearby marketplaces where fresh produce has been sold for 250 years have been restored.

CHANGE FOR the 104-acre harbor-front, including 40 wharves and warehouses, began a decade ago. Most buildings were gutted and modernized from within, leaving red-brick exteriors untouched.

Many visitors to the area express astonishment as they wander through evidence of urban renewal at its best.

For investors, the long awaited harvest has just begun.

"I just don't believe this place," said Bostonian Ken Gurvin, glancing at greenhouse-style glass enclosing merchants' wheel-to-wheel push carts along the outside walls of 150-year-old Quincy Market.

"It's just incredible." SHOPS AND CONFLICTING smells from adjacent cafe-style food counters crowd the 500-foot long interior of the granite market building, replacing the musty, cluttered butcher shops and wholesalers that packed the building for decades.

The city's second mayor, Josiah

Quincy, had the green copper domed market built in 1926 as an "improvement, unexampled in its general character and not to be paralleled for its public utility." Some called it the nation's first urban renewal project.

New construction may not have ignited higher prices for Bostonians then, but the $9.5 million renovation in 1976 has.

Gold plated price tags are common at the market and along the waterfront now that the 20th century and antique chic have arrived.

"I don't know if I'd shop here," said Gurvin, a young financial analyst, "but it's a great place to visit."

THE UNINHABITED warehouse district and the men in tee-shirts that worked it have been replaced by posh apartments housing well heeled men and women tailored collar to cuff.

A harbor view, two-bedroom condominium in a renovated warehouse with a yacht mooring below may cost $100,000 or more. A one bedroom walkup nearby may cost $450 a month.

Twin 40-story luxury apartment buildings tower over the renovated area.

The district's population, less than 1,000 six years ago, now numbers more than 3,400.

Low priced, after work cocktail hours at new waterfront restaurants draw customers from business districts blocks away. Many stay in the area for dinner, rather than hike to the center of town for less expensive meals.

A STEADY STREAM of interest in the district, evident over the past two years, has turned into a torrent in recent weeks.

On the first weekend the Quincy market was open in late August, thousands of city dwellers dodged thunderstorms to sample the results of years of careful planning. Whether they return remains uncertain.

"I can't afford any of this stuff," complained Marvin Carter, as he headed from the red-bricked sidewalks outside the new market to the familiar, crate cluttered Haymarket vegetable market across the street.

Contrast exists between the new market and the Haymarket, a crowded outdoor market that has served the area for decades.

"THEY CATER to different kinds of people as far as I can see," says Louis Jackson, a construction worker with six children who travels weekly from the Mattapan section to haggle at the outdoor market. "I think the two places compliment each other well."

Prices and styles compete. Apples selling for 25 cents a pound at the Haymarket sell for 25 cents a piece across the street at the new Quincy market.

Food is the mainstay of Haymarket. Antiques, bric-a-brac and handicrafts fill the tables outside the renovated market.

The prices at Haymarket are shouted and haggled as they have been along the waterfront for centuries.

At the freshly sandblasted Quincy market nearby, prices are posted, not discussed.

THE BAND THAT marched in the streets of two foreign countries has received permission to march in its own backyard. The Wheeling High School band will be allowed to practice in village streets as a result of village board action this week. A special parade permit was issued after a resident's complaint prompted band members to take their case to the village fathers.

Wheeling High band marches on

by LINDA PUNCH
and JUDY JOBBITT

The Wheeling High School band, which has marched in the streets of Mexico City, Mexico, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada, and Washington, D.C., now has permission to practice in the streets of Wheeling.

The Wheeling Village Board Monday approved issuance of a special parade permit for the band after a citizen's complaint Aug. 31 halted band practice in the streets of the Colonial Heights subdivision, near Wheeling High School.

Jack Williamson, band director, Tuesday said the band has been practicing in the area in the southwest corner of Hantz and Elmhurst roads "since the school opened 12 years ago." The band marches in the street to practice for parades and other marching competition.

"We've never had a call until that one time. All it took was one person. The people in the area were upset with him," he said.

WILLIAMSON SAID the band has traveled "all over and nobody has tried to throw us out of any country yet."

"I can't understand why that guy called the police. It was not like we march at 11 p.m. at night," he said.

Band members decided to take their plea to the village board and canvassed the Colonial Heights area for signatures on a petition supporting their cause, Williamson said. The petition, signed by 132 neighborhood residents, was submitted to the board Monday by band members Tony Lauber and Scott Ashley.

Village Pres. Ted. C. Scanlon threw his support behind the band after hearing the students' plea.

"My personal feeling is that this band is the greatest asset Wheeling has. If 90 per cent of the people in the area are in accord, I think one gentleman should be able to put up with it," he said.

TRUSTEE CHARLES Kerr suggested the village issue a parade permit because allowing pedestrians in the street is in violation of state law.

"I don't think the board should approve something that is possibly illegal. I think a blanket type parade permit allowing them to march two days a week is okay," he said.

Williamson said the band is in a better position since the plea to the village board. He said the band now has the parade permit and also will have a police escort to help them cross the streets during the twice-weekly evening practice sessions. "The village board members have been fantastic supporters. They really go out of their way," he said.

Airport expansion plan draws residents' opposition

A plan for expanding the Chicago-Land Airport in Lincolnshire received an unfavorable reaction from about 150 residents attending a meeting of the village airport study committee.

Residents at the meeting Tuesday were concerned about noise, property values, school safety and drainage problems which might be caused by expansion of the airport.

The airport study commission was formed by the Village of Lincolnshire to study the feasibility of the village acquiring the airport as well as other alternatives such as continued private operation or some other use of the land.

THE PLAN PROPOSED Tuesday night to expand the airport as a private facility was presented by August Stavros, who represents an investment group which has an option to purchase the land.

August Stavros is the brother of former Wheeling political leader James Stavros and is an official of the Wheeling Trust and Savings Bank.

Stavros told the commission he planned to resurface the 5,000-foot runway, build 552 hangars for single engine planes, 94 hangars for multi-engine planes and build a motel-restaurant and cocktail lounge.

Engine and instrument repair shops as well as parts and fuel sales also would be increased, Stavros said.

The number of planes based at the airport would more than double under the plan.

However, traffic at the airport would increase by only 20 per cent, Stavros said.

MANY RESIDENTS at Tuesday's meeting were concerned about increased jet traffic at the airport and possible noise problems. Airport owner Jack Sheller said about six corporate jets a week currently fly into the airport and no one has complained about them.

A spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration expressed concern about an eight-story medical building approved by the village four years ago at the Marriott Lincolnshire.

Sheller said the village's airport zoning regulations would automatically rule out the proposed building.

A Lincolnshire Plan Commission hearing on the airport proposal will be held 8 p.m. Tuesday at Laura B. Sprague School, on Riverwoods Road just south of Ill. Rt. 22.

Dist. 125 wrapup

Residents' tax rate to drop 20 cents

Taxes for homeowners in High School Dist. 125 are expected to drop 20 cents per $100 equalized assessed valuation.

The Dist. 125 Board of Education Monday approved 1976 tax levies which would lower the current tax rate from $2.27 to $2.07 per $100 equalized assessed valuation, if the district's total assessed valuation goes up a projected 5 per cent.

Three funds were dropped from the 1976 tax levy including life safety, junior college and special education building. The special education fund, however, may be reinstated this fall by the state legislature.

The board also reduced levies in the transportation fund and the retirement fund. The operations, building and maintenance fund levy remained at the same level as last year and the education fund will increase one cent.

Airport expansion opposed

The board unanimously passed a resolution opposing the expansion of Chicago-Land Airport in Lincolnshire. An investment group has announced a tentative proposal to expand the present facilities to a 700-hangar operation which would include a new 5,000-foot runway big enough to handle DC9 jets.

Board members said they opposed expansion of the airport because of the serious safety, health and noise hazards which could be caused by low-flying planes.

Academic items topic Oct. 12

The board will reconvene Oct. 12 to discuss academic items. The meeting will include a presentation by the Stevenson band and a review of a recent survey of the top 25 per cent of the high school's recent graduates.

Mall merchants find business good

west end of the mall.

"Anytime you take a store out of a mall, you take out traffic and it hurts everyone," said Leo Davis, manager of Bell's Liquors.

COCONES SAID Kenroy currently is negotiating with some businesses to move into the vacant Scott's store. He said he hopes to have a new tenant soon. He said Kenroy has been looking for a hardware store, drug store or small retail store.

Other tenants and village officials who say the mall's problems go beyond the opening of Plaza Verde and closing of Scott's complain that the mall is not attractive enough to bring in potential customers.

Village Trustee Robert Bogart said the mall is not maintained properly.

"It's rapidly deteriorating," he said. "I don't think it's a benefit to the village for people to drive down Dundee Road and look at it."

Cocones denied the charge, saying Buffalo Grove Mall is the "cleanest mall in the area." He said new lighting was installed three months ago.

PHILLIP ALDER, owner of Alan B. Ltd., said the mall needs improvements in lighting and architectural design.

"The only thing that could be done to improve (mall business) is in the management part. But the management doesn't seem to want to extend any money" into improving the mall, he said.

Robert Griffith, office manager of Quinlan & Tyson Realtors Inc., located in the mall suggested management install carpeting inside the mall.

"When you're standing in line at National Food Store, you almost have to look down at the mall. It doesn't strike me as being particularly an attractive mall. It just doesn't come on like that," he said.

Location convenient for many shoppers

Shoppers at the Buffalo Grove Mall Wednesday said they shop the mall because of its convenient location to their homes.

Several said they shopped regularly at the mall, but most said they stop in for groceries at National Food Store, but go to other shopping areas for other merchandise.

The mall is located on the northwest corner of Arlington Heights and Dundee roads.

"There isn't a whole lot here since Scott's moved out," said Alene Kubinek, 405 Indian Hill Dr., Buffalo Grove. She said she does more shopping at Ranchmart Shopping Center at Dundee and Buffalo Grove roads or at Plaza Verde across the street from the mall.

MAUREEN SANTI, 724 Bernard Dr., Buffalo Grove, said she comes to the mall to buy children's shoes, but usually shops in Wheeling for groceries and Randhurst Shopping Center for other merchandise.

"There are so many malls around here, I'm afraid they're putting themselves out of business," said Barbara Morris, 935 Whitehall Ln., Buffalo Grove. Mrs. Morris said she shops at Plaza Verde because it has a larger variety of stores.

Tony Benante, 961 Whitehall Dr., Buffalo Grove, said he usually shops at Buffalo Grove Mall for groceries and clothes because it is nearer to his home than any other shopping center.

Most shoppers said the mall is comfortable to shop in, but one man, James Kroiser, 12 Oak Creek Dr., Buffalo Grove, said he would like to see improvements to the interior of the shopping center.

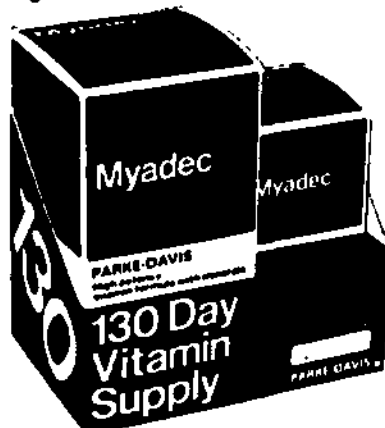

"They could fix it up to make it look a little better," he said.

THE BAND THAT marched in the streets of two foreign countries has received permission to march in its own backyard. The

rade permit was issued after a resident's complaint prompted band members to take their case to the village fathers.

Wheeling High band marches on

by LINDA PUNCH
and JUDY JOBBITT

The Wheeling High School band, which has marched in the streets of Mexico City, Mexico, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada, and Washington, D.C., now has permission to practice in the streets of Wheeling.

The Wheeling Village Board Monday approved issuance of a special parade permit for the band after a citizen's complaint Aug. 31 halted band practice in the streets of the Colonial Heights subdivision, near Wheeling High School.

Jack Williamson, band director, Tuesday said the band has been practicing in the area in the southwest corner of Hantz and Elmhurst roads "since the school opened 12 years ago." The band marches in the street to practice for parades and other marching competition.

"We've never had a call until that one time. All it took was one person. The people in the area were upset with him," he said.

WILLIAMSON SAID the band has traveled "all over and nobody has tried to throw us out of any country yet."

"I can't understand why that guy called the police. It was not like we march at 11 p.m. at night," he said.

Band members decided to take their plea to the village board and canvassed the Colonial Heights area for signatures on a petition supporting their cause, Williamson said. The petition, signed by 132 neighborhood residents, was submitted to the board Monday by band members Tony Lauber and Scott Ashley.

Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon threw his support behind the band after hearing the students' plea.

"My personal feeling is that this band is the greatest asset Wheeling has. If 90 per cent of the people in the area are in accord, I think one gentleman should be able to put up with it," he said.

TRUSTEE CHARLES Kerr suggested the village issue a parade permit because allowing pedestrians in the street is in violation of state law.

"I don't think the board should approve something that is possibly illegal. I think a blanket type parade permit allowing them to march two days a week is okay," he said.

Williamson said the band is in a better position since the plea to the village board. He said the band now has the parade permit and also will have a police escort to help them cross the streets during the twice-weekly evening practice sessions. "The village board members have been fantastic supporters. They really go out of their way," he said.

Ford, Carter ready lines for debate of their lives

PRESIDENT FORD

by United Press International President Ford rehearsed his lines all over the White House Wednesday and Jimmy Carter pored over briefing books against that moment Thursday when they meet on a Philadelphia theater stage, take seats that look like bar stools and begin the argument of their lives.

Thursday's debate will be confined to domestic and economic issues. The Oct. 6 followup will cover foreign and defense policy and the Oct. 22 finale will be a free-for-all open to questions on any subject.

White House spokesmen quit ducking questions about Ford's training schedule and told reporters he is rehearsing his answers to every conceivable question. He has been doing so for four or five days. He plans to do so even after he arrives in Philadelphia Thursday.

dent may be — in the White House family theater, in the Oval Office, in his private inner office, in the family living quarters.

The blaze broke out shortly after 11 p.m. in a pile of trash and shrubs, and took firemen two hours to extinguish. A hook-and-ladder truck, two pumpers and two ambulances responded. No injuries were reported. Cause is under investigation.

In a wage dispute with Osco Drug Stores, striking clerks Wednesday picketed the firm's distribution center, 2401 Lunt Ave., Elk Grove Village, and an Osco store at 1430 Lee St., Des Plaines.

Police responded to several calls of shoving incidents and alleged damage to vehicles. The Des Plaines store was one of seven picketed Wednesday. Jablonski said more stores will be picketed each day as the strike progresses.

Dist. 211 passes $40.3 million budget; reflects hikes

The High School Dist. 211 Board of Education Wednesday approved a $40.3 million budget for 1976-77 that reflects increased costs because of higher student enrollment, pay raises and maintenance for new construction.

The tax rate paid by district residents could go up or down, business manager James Slater said. Although the board approved a 6 cent tax levy increase, many factors affect the tax rate in Dist. 211, he said.

According to the formula used to determine state aid, the state gives Dist. 211 more state aid each year, but requires the district to roll back its local tax rate. Gov. Daniel Walker recently approved legislation eliminating the roll-back requirement but it may not go into effect until July, 1977.

IF THE ROLL back is eliminated taxes probably will go up, Slater said. If the roll back is not eliminated the district's tax rate will go down, he said.

"Nobody knows what will happen," he said. "Taxes could rise substantially or they could drop substantially."

The 6-cent increase approved by the board means district residents would pay $2.678 per $100 of assessed valuation in 1976-77. In 1975-76 the levy was $2.618. This means residents owning a home assessed at $10,000 would pay about $6 more in taxes in 1976-77.

The tax levy rose in the educational, liability insurance, and Illinois Municipal Retirement Fund. The levy decreased in bond, interest and transportation funds.

THE BUDGET lists $28.6 million in operating costs plus $11.7 million in construction costs. The 1976-76 expenses were $25 million for operation and $3.8 million for construction. The additional expenses for construction are for bills due on the new Palatine High School which will be completed this year.

The education fund which pays for salaries, educational supplies and administrative expenses will increase $18.7 million in 1976-77, up 16.2 per cent from last year's $16.1 million. The hike reflects increased costs and an average 7.6 per cent raise in faculty salaries and raises for other personnel.

The operations building and maintenance fund increased 12.8 per cent from $3.17 million in 1975-76 to $3.57 million.

Budgets for other funds include:

- Bond and interest fund, $4.68 million, up 12.2 per cent. This fund is used to purchase property and to construct new buildings and additions.
- Transportation fund $949,500, up 1.8 per cent. Money from this fund is used to pay for busing students.

- Retirement fund $498,000, up 17 per cent. This fund pays retirement benefits for nonteaching employees.

- Rent fund $240,000, no change from last year. Dist. 211 pays rent on Schaumburg High School to the Capital Development Board, a state agency. The school was built in 1970 with state funds and the district agreed to pay rent on the building for 16 years after which the district will own the school.

Village won't adjust garbage rates

Despite charges by some senior citizens that the new rates are discriminatory, Elk Grove Village will make no adjustments in its village garbage pickup rates.

"Our position is well-stated. It's not going to change just because I got a letter," said Village Pres. Charles J. Zetek Wednesday.

He was referring to a letter from Milton Barndt, 40 Woodcrest Ln., that charged senior citizens who live in their own homes are victims of discrimination because they will pay more for garbage pickup than the elderly tenants of the Village Grove apartments, 1071 Cheekwood Ln.

WHEN THE VILLAGE board approved a 25-cent increase in monthly garbage pickup charges, Zetek insisted that the contractor, Garden City Disposal Co., Rosemont, delay raising the pickup rates for the senior complex for at least one year.

"I'm not going to do anything," Zetek said of Barndt's request. Zetek has defended giving the apartment complex a break because it helps an "easily recognizable" group of senior citizens. He has said the administrative cost of identifying other elderly customers would be too high.

Although disappointed in Zetek's response, Barndt said he doubted he would try anything else to get the discount policy broadened. "After all, it's just 25 cents," he said.

Barndt, who is president of the Elk Grove Park District seniors' club, said his request represented about 50 families. He said the other senior citizens had asked why the price break applied only to the seniors in the complex.

RESIDENTS OF THE Village Grove apartments benefit only indirectly, because the apartments' management is actually billed for garbage pickup.

The monthly rate at the complex remains $2.25 per apartment, the lowest residential rate in the village. With the increase of last August, other apartments pay between $2.50 and $3.75 per month, and homeowners pay $3.75.

According to the 1974 census, there are approximately 1,000 residents aged 60 and older in the village, about 4 per cent of the total population.

Traffic signs installed at hit-run scene

Stop signs were installed by the Cook County Highway Dept. Tuesday at Springinguth Road and Weathersfield Way where a Schaumburg girl was injured seriously in a hit-and-run accident this month.

Immediately following the accident, county highway officials said weekly traffic counts on Springinguth Road did not justify a stop sign, even though their studies show nearly half the drivers exceed the 30 m.p.h. speed limit on the street.

They reversed their decision when residents Donna Hartsburg, 324 Springinguth Rd., and her neighbor, Pat Layton, 320 Springinguth Rd., began a telephone campaign to County Board Pres. George Dunne.

THE WOMEN'S action prompted County Highway Supt. Hugo J. Stark to visit the intersection and order the stop signs installed as soon as possible.

Stark later said regardless of traffic counts, the signs should be installed because of the danger of the intersection.

The women said serious accidents occur at the intersection at least once a month. They recommended either stop signs be installed or the speed limit reduced.

Mrs. Hartsburg said Tuesday she was "relieved" when the signs were put up. "We can at least breathe a little easier now in the hopes that the danger will be reduced," she said.

Several years ago the village put up stop signs at Weathersfield Way but could do nothing to control traffic on Springinguth Road, which is under county jurisdiction.

Walker reelected history unit chief

The Elk Grove Historical Society has reelected Don Walker as president.

Other new officers are Eleanor Turner, secretary and Mickey Robinson, treasurer.

Society member Darlene Greaves said the society is looking for volunteers to help clean the Disney Park museum building; donations for the museum; and new society members. She said 32 memberships have been sold.

For more information, call the park office, 437-8700.

City considers tougher church day-care zoning law

Des Plaines is preparing an ordinance which would impose stricter zoning regulations on church day-care centers in residential areas despite objections by the city zoning board of appeals.

The city council ordered City Atty. Charles Hug to prepare the ordinance after it rejected a city zoning board recommendation Sept. 1 not to pass the stringent regulations.

Currently, day-care centers operating out of church buildings in residential areas are exempt from zoning laws governing other day-care centers. If the proposal is passed, new church day-care centers wishing to operate in residential areas would be required to obtain a special-use permit and meet the same standards imposed on commercial and nonprofit centers. Existing centers would not be affected.

DES PLAINE'S day-care laws, which are more stringent than state codes, regulate square footage, lot frontage, parking, play areas and hours of operation. The city's standards for day-care centers in residential areas are much more demanding than those governing commercial zones.

Day-care center operators have complained that the tough zoning laws make it impossible to successfully operate a day-care center in residential neighborhoods.

In ordering the ordinance to be drafted, aldermen said the proposal is not designed to discourage more day-care centers from opening in Des Plaines, but rather to require all day-care centers to meet the same standards.

"What this would do is apply equal standards to day-care centers located in single-family areas," said Ald. Gerald J. Meyers, 7th.

THE ZONING LAWS regulating day-care centers in residential areas were enacted two years ago to protect homeowners from large, commercial day-care centers opening in neighborhood facilities. However, some city officials believe this latest proposal is unnecessary.

Ald. Alan Abrams, 8th, an opponent of the proposal, said the ordinance would "address a problem which simply doesn't exist."

"It will place a hardship on churches to provide the kind of service which is needed by the working mothers of Des Plaines," he said. "I think we would be doing something wrong to pass this. I think we should follow the zoning board of appeals recommendation."

The move by the city council is counter to recommendations by both the zoning board and the city department of planning and zoning. Zoning commissioners said Des Plaines ordinances already are strict enough and further regulations would hinder development of the needed facilities.

A REPORT BY the department of planning and zoning released in August said the city's licensed, full-time day-care centers only are able to meet about half of the city's current day-care needs. The study recommends the city encourage development of more centers.

Michael Richardson, director of planning and zoning said the city should be careful that its zoning regulations "do not unduly burden the development of day-care centers."

The city has 11 licensed, full-time centers, six of them operating out of church buildings.

The controversy about day-care zoning regulations stems from the establishment of a center in a residential area in 1974. Lorraine Angell, owner of Angell Town Day Care Center, 2329 Birch St., has been fighting with the city about the zoning laws since then. She contends that the city's actions in amending zoning codes are aimed specifically at her.

City officials have denied those charges, but have filed suit to have Angell Town closed.

'Harper alumni grades beat norm'

by JOHN N. FRANK

Harper College students who have transferred to state schools are doing better academically than the average Illinois community college transfer student, Harper officials said.

John A. Lucas, Harper's director of planning and research, said that information supplied by Eastern Illinois University, Charleston; Illinois State, Normal; University of Illinois, Champaign; Southern Illinois, Carbondale; and the University of Illinois Circle Campus, Chicago, shows Harper students achieving higher grade point averages than the average community college transfer student and in some cases higher than students who began their studies at those schools.

Guerin A. Fischer, vice president for student services, said that the latest information supplied by the five state schools is consistent with information regarding past performance by Harper students who transfer to four-year institutions.

LUCAS SAID HE recently received the following information:

As of this summer, 24 Harper alumni who transferred to Eastern had an average grade point of 3.03 on a 4 scale compared to a 2.90 average for all community college transfer students.

Harper alumni attending Illinois State last spring had an average grade point of 2.84 on a 4 scale compared to a 2.72 average for all community transfer students, a 2.88 average for students who transferred from other four-year colleges and a 2.78 average for students who began their higher education there.

The 45 to 50 Harper alumni at the University of Illinois, Champaign, had an average grade point of 3.71 on a 4 scale in 1975 compared to a 3.59 average for all community college transfer students, a 3.89 for students transferring from other four-year institutions and a 4.02 for students who began as freshmen at Illinois.

The 221 Harper alumni at Southern Illinois achieved a 2.72 average on a 4 scale for the 1975-76 school year compared to a 2.62 for all community college transfer students and a 2.32 for students who began at Southern.

Harper students at the University of Illinois Circle Campus ranked fourth as a group compared to all other community college transfer students, with an average of 3.77 on a 5 scale. That study also showed that 78 per cent of the Harper students who transfer there were still there one year later.

Lucas said that since each university uses a somewhat different format in reporting such data to Harper and since Northern Illinois, DeKalb, where the greatest number of Harper alumni are, is reluctant to release any such information, Harper also conducts studies of its own to see what happens to students after they finish their studies at Harper.

City considers tougher church day-care zoning law

Des Plaines is preparing an ordinance which would impose stricter zoning regulations on church day-care centers in residential areas despite objections by the city zoning board of appeals.

The city council ordered City Atty. Charles Hug to prepare the ordinance after it rejected a city zoning board recommendation Sept. 1 not to pass the stringent regulations.

Currently, day-care centers operating out of church buildings in residential areas are exempt from zoning laws governing other day-care centers. If the proposal is passed, new church day-care centers wishing to operate in residential areas would be required to obtain a special-use permit and meet the same standards imposed on commercial and nonprofit centers. Existing centers would not be affected.

DES PLAINE'S day-care laws, which are more stringent than state codes, regulate square footage, lot frontage, parking, play areas and hours of operation. The city's standards for day-care centers in residential areas are much more demanding than those governing commercial zones.

Day-care center operators have complained that the tough zoning laws make it impossible to successfully operate a day-care center in residential neighborhoods.

In ordering the ordinance to be drafted, aldermen said the proposal is not designed to discourage more day-care centers from opening in Des Plaines, but rather to require all day-care centers to meet the same standards.

"What this would do is apply equal standards to day-care centers located in single-family areas," said Ald. Gerald J. Meyers, 7th.

THE ZONING LAWS regulating day-care centers in residential areas were enacted two years ago to protect homeowners from large, commercial day-care centers opening in neighborhood facilities. However, some city officials believe this latest proposal is unnecessary.

Ald. Alan Abrams, 8th, an opponent of the proposal, said the ordinance would "address a problem which simply doesn't exist."

"It will place a hardship on churches to provide the kind of service which is needed by the working mothers of Des Plaines," he said. "I think we would be doing something wrong to pass this. I think we should follow the zoning board of appeals recommendation."

The move by the city council is counter to recommendations by both the zoning board and the city department of planning and zoning. Zoning commissioners said Des Plaines ordinances already are strict enough and further regulations would hinder development of the needed facilities.

A REPORT BY the department of planning and zoning released in August said the city's licensed, full-time day-care centers only are able to meet about half of the city's current day-care needs. The study recommends the city encourage development of more centers.

Michael Richardson, director of planning and zoning said the city should be careful that its zoning regulations "do not unduly burden the development of day-care centers."

The city has 11 licensed, full-time centers, six of them operating out of church buildings.

The controversy about day-care zoning regulations stems from the establishment of a center in a residential area in 1974. Lorraine Angell, owner of Angell Town Day Care Center, 2329 Birch St., has been fighting with the city about the zoning laws since then. She contends that the city's actions in amending zoning codes are aimed specifically at her.

City officials have denied those charges, but have filed suit to have Angell Town closed.

Ford, Carter ready lines for debate of their lives

PRESIDENT FORD

by United Press International President Ford rehearsed his lines all over the White House Wednesday and Jimmy Carter pored over briefing books against that moment Thursday when they meet on a Philadelphia theater stage, take seats that look like bur stools and begin the argument of their lives.

The first of three 1976 presidential campaign debates — direct descendant of the 1960 Nixon-Kennedy clashes — opens under stark television lights at 8:30 p.m. CDT on the stripped-bare stage of the old Walnut Theater.

There, for 90 minutes, three reporters will fire questions alternately at Ford and Carter before a television audience of scores of millions — including countless uncommitted voters — in a pressure-cooker ordeal likely to have a major, if not decisive, impact on the election.

Thursday's debate will be confined to domestic and economic issues. The Oct. 6 followup will cover foreign and defense policy and the Oct. 22 finale will be a free-for-all open to questions on any subject.

Barrington Sq. homeowner suit to net payments

Payments are to be mailed in about a month to 220 Barrington Square homeowners following court approval this week of a year-old settlement of their suit with the subdivision's developers.

Robert Nickel, a member of the Unit 3 board, said his group's objection concerned problems homeowners in that area say they have had with their homes.

Missing Glueckert girl seen in Texas

by DANN GIRE Barbara Glueckert, a 14-year-old Mount Prospect girl missing since Aug. 21, and fugitive Thomas Urlacher, 24, have been identified by a Chicago man as the persons who gave him a ride while hitchhiking in Texas.

Barbara Glueckert

Miss Glueckert replied "Mount Prospect." The blond man then turned around and told the girl to "shut up," Hallihan said.

"is probably most credible in relation to other stories of people seeing her." Glueckert said Wednesday he "hopes the story is correct. I don't really know. If it is a very credible story I would hope that it would be thoroughly investigated so that it would either be discounted or lead to the return of Barbara."

bulletin on Urlacher and Miss Glueckert is being issued today. Lubbock police so far have not been officially involved in the search for the pair, last seen Aug. 21 at a rock concert in Huntley, Ill.

Dist. 211 passes $40.3 million budget; reflects hikes

The High School Dist. 211 Board of Education Wednesday approved a $40.3 million budget for 1976-77 that reflects increased costs because of higher student enrollment, pay raises and maintenance for new construction.

The tax rate paid by district residents could go up or down, business manager James Slater said. Although the board approved a 6 cent tax levy increase, many factors affect the tax rate in Dist. 211, he said.

According to the formula used to determine state aid, the state gives Dist. 211 more state aid each year, but requires the district to roll back its local tax rate. Gov. Daniel Walker recently approved legislation eliminating the roll-back requirement but it may not go into effect until July, 1977.

IF THE ROLL back is eliminated taxes probably will go up, Slater said. If the roll back is not eliminated the district's tax rate will go down, he said.

"Nobody knows what will happen," he said. "Taxes could rise substantially or they could drop substantially."

The 6-cent increase approved by the board means district residents would pay $2.678 per $100 of assessed valuation in 1976-77. In 1975-76 the levy was $2.618. This means residents owning a home assessed at $10,000 would pay about $6 more in taxes in 1976-77.

The tax levy rose in the educational, liability insurance, and Illinois Municipal Retirement Fund. The levy decreased in bond, interest and transportation funds.

THE BUDGET lists $28.6 million in operating costs plus $11.7 million in construction costs. The 1975-76 expenses were $25 million for operation and $3.8 million for construction. The additional expenses for construction are for bills due on the new Palatine High School which will be completed this year.

The education fund which pays for salaries, educational supplies and administrative expenses will increase $18.7 million in 1976-77, up 16.2 per cent from last year's $16.1 million. The hike reflects increased costs and an average 7.6 per cent raise in faculty salaries and raises for other personnel.

The operations building and maintenance fund increased 12.8 per cent from $3.17 million in 1975-76 to $3.57 million.

Budgets for other funds include:
• Bond and interest fund, $4.68 million, up 12.2 per cent. This fund is used to purchase property and to construct new buildings and additions.

• Transportation fund $349,500, up 1.8 per cent. Money from this fund is used to pay for busing students.

• Retirement fund $498,000, up 17 per cent. This fund pays retirement benefits for nonteaching employees.

Panel to ask village OK of Plum Grove extension

Although funding remains a question, the Schaumburg Business Development Commission will ask the village board next week to endorse its plan to extend Plum Grove Road north about two miles.

Consultants say the new road is needed because of development in the northern end of the village. They estimate the cost at $4 million, nearly one-third of it to pay for an overpass at the Northwest Tollway.

The consultants, H. W. Lochner Co., also suggest three ways to raise the $4 million, but say they put no priority on any one:

- A 30-year bond issue that would be repaid with tolls collected from motorists using the road.
- A general obligation bond issue that would be repaid by the village.
- A special assessment to be paid over 10 years by the property owners, most of them business, along the new road.

The Plum Grove Road extension would open that street from Golf Road north to Algonquin Road. The consultants also recommend two new east-west arterials to connect Roselle Road to the existing and proposed Plum Grove roads on both sides of the tollway.

COMMISSION MEMBER Robert Brawley of Motorola said the consultants recommend that adjacent property owners pay for the east-west roads, but made no specific proposal for the Plum Grove job.

Brawley said commission members will appear at next Tuesday's village board meeting to ask the trustees to endorse the idea. But he emphasized the village is not being asked to vote on a specific financing plan.

"We suggested three possible methods of paying for the road, placing no priority on any suggestion. This is an area for much study by the business commission and the village officials," consultant Bernard Getner said Wednesday.

FINANCING FOR the Plum Grove extension is expected to be a problem for the village because the road is within Schaumburg's boundaries and because the project would not qualify for federal, state or county aid.

Brawley has been asked to present an analysis of possible funding methods at a meeting Oct. 11 of the business commission at 6 p.m. in the Sheraton-Walden Inn, 1725 E. Algonquin Rd.

Village Pres. Raymond Kessell has cautioned the group about the village's limited funding. He said $9 million has been budgeted for all services during the present fiscal year, which would rule out a $4 million road building project.

Kessell also has asked Motorola, Union Oil Corp. and other businesses in the area to seek a Cook County Highway Dept. review of projected traffic volume and to consider funding the proposed road.

TRUSTEE Edward G. Olsen, village finance chairman, said Wednesday, he believes the business commission and village officials must "sit back and take a long hard look" at all possible means of financing the road.

Olsen said he believes "more information is needed in order to make a decision," but he added "there is no question in anyone's mind about the impact on both the community and the business community the new road would have."

Strikers picket Osco drug stores

In a wage dispute with Osco Drug Stores, striking clerks Wednesday picketed the firm's distribution center, 2401 Lunt Ave., Elk Grove Village, and an Osco store at 1480 Lee St., Des Plaines.

A meeting Wednesday with federal mediators failed to end the three-day-old strike, said Ed Jablonski, vice president of communications for the United Retail Workers Union. The strike affects about 2,200 clerks, but not pharmacists, at the 77 Chicago-area Osco Drug Stores.

The dispute centers on wages, Sunday overtime pay, employee discounts and length of contract, Jablonski said. The strike vote was called after a five-hour meeting Sunday, with 70 per cent of those present voting to strike, he added.

Osco representative George Trumbull was unavailable for comment Wednesday.

JABLONSKI SAID picketing at the distribution center is aimed at stopping delivery of goods to the stores. "We have stopped almost all deliveries," he said.

Elk Grove Village police said they were called out Tuesday to clear a driveway so five trucks could leave the center. By law, picketers are not permitted to stop people or vehicles, police said.

Police responded to several calls of shoving incidents and alleged damage to vehicles.

The Des Plaines store was one of seven picketed Wednesday. Jablonski said more stores will be picketed each day as the strike progresses.

"WHEREVER WE'RE striking a store, we're passing out handbills and asking people not to shop at Osco until the strike is over," he said.

Jewel Food Stores, which often are housed with Osco Drug Stores, are not affected by the strike because their employees belong to a different union.

Asked how long the strike might last, Jablonski said, "It is very difficult to read how it's going to move. We're hopeful of a settlement." He said no new date has been set for negotiations.

Hoffman Estates to join Roselle Road project

Hoffman Estates moved Monday toward participating in a $6-million project to widen Roselle Road, and Schaumburg is expected to do the same next week.

Under the program, the two villages will share in only the preliminary costs of the project, according to John Hossack, director of public works in Hoffman Estates.

Total cost to the two villages should be between $36,000 and $48,000, he estimated, with Hoffman Estates paying about 20 per cent or $8,000.

Schaumburg, because it will have costs in securing right-of-way agreements, will pay more, Hossack said.

AFTER GETTING the financial news, the Hoffman Estates Village Board voted Monday to hire Barton-Aschman Associates as consultants for the preliminary work.

The Schaumburg Village Board is expected to pass a similar resolution Monday.

Construction work on the project is to begin in about 18 months. Roselle would be widened from Higgins Road to the county line.

Politicos' smoke at board parleys gone forever?

The days of the smoke-filled room of politicians is gone forever in Schaumburg. Or are they?

Village officials recently adopted a policy which empowers chairmen of municipal meetings to curtail smoking in certain situations.

Their action allows Village Pres. Raymond Kessell and other officials who preside at committee or commission meetings "to limit or curtail" smoking in sessions "where large amounts of smoke might be generated."

But Kessell, a nonsmoker, said "no" when asked if he planned to limit or prohibit smoking at village board meetings.

"I believe everyone has rights. The person who may be irritated or offended at someone sitting next to him smoking, certainly has the right to get up and move," Kessell said.

The policy was recommended by the village board of health and endorsed by the safety, health, recreation and environment committee.

Police hike auction nets $890 for village

About 100 persons flocked to Barrington Square Mall Saturday to bid for unclaimed bicycles recovered during the past year by the Hoffman Estates Police Dept.

They cleaned out the department's stock of 75 bikes, "even the ones that didn't have any wheels," village administrative assistant Jay Hedges said.

The bicycles sold for as little as $1 and as much as $50, Hedges said. The auction raised $890 for the village's youth commission.

Village officials are planning another auction next June.

Sunderlage farm cleanup scheduled

The Poplar Creek Historical Society is seeking volunteers to help clean up the site of Sunderlage farm.

The farm house, 1775 Vista Ln., Hoffman Estates, eventually will be remodeled to become a museum.

Jaycees and Boy Scouts will help from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday. Others interested in helping should phone Marilyn Lind, society president, at 894-9254.

Coffee and doughnuts will be served.

The society's new museum as well as the land adjacent to it was donated to the village by the Robin Construction Co.

The village is expected to lease the structure, the oldest in Schaumburg Township, to the society. Renovation work will begin next month.

'Harper alumni grades beat norm'

THE HERALD Thursday, September 23, 1976 Section 1 —7

by JOHN N. FRANK
Harper College students who have transferred to state schools are doing better academically than the average Illinois community college transfer student, Harper officials said.

John A. Lucas, Harper's director of planning and research, said that information supplied by Eastern Illinois University, Charleston; Illinois State, Normal; University of Illinois, Champaign; Southern Illinois, Carbondale; and the University of Illinois Circle Campus, Chicago, shows Harper students achieving higher grade point averages than the average community college transfer student and in some cases higher than students who began their studies at those schools.

Guerin A. Fischer, vice president for student services, said that the latest information supplied by the five state schools is consistent with information regarding past performance by Harper students who transfer to four-year institutions.

LUCAS SAID HE recently received the following information:

- As of this summer, 24 Harper alumni who transferred to Eastern had an average grade point of 3.05 on a 4 scale compared to a 2.90 average for all community college transfer students.
- Harper alumni attending Illinois State last spring had an average grade point of 2.84 on a 4 scale compared to a 2.72 average for all community transfer students, a 2.88 average for students who transferred from other four-year colleges and a 2.78 average for students who began their higher education there.

- The 45 to 50 Harper alumni at the University of Illinois, Champaign, had an average grade point of 3.71 on a 5 scale in 1975 compared to a 3.59 average for all community college transfer students, a 3.89 for students transferring from other four-year institutions and a 4.02 for students who began as freshmen at Illinois.
- The 221 Harper alumni at Southern Illinois achieved a 2.72 average on a 4 scale for the 1975-76 school year compared to a 2.62 for all community college transfer students and a 2.52 for students who began at Southern.
- Harper students at the University of Illinois Circle Campus ranked fourth as a group compared to all other community college transfer students, with an average of 3.77 on a 5 scale. That study also showed that 78 per cent of the Harper students who transfer there were still there one year later.

Lucas said that since each university uses a somewhat different format in reporting such data to Harper and since Northern Illinois, DeKalb, where the greatest number of Harper alumni are, is reluctant to release any such information, Harper also conducts studies of its own to see what happens to students after they finish their studies at Harper.

One such study conducted last year showed that "Harper alumni average .17 of a grade-point higher at their new institution than their grade point average at Harper."

Ford, Carter ready lines for debate of their lives

PRESIDENT FORD

by United Press International President Ford rehearsed his lines all over the White House Wednesday and Jimmy Carter pored over briefing books against that moment Thursday when they meet on a Philadelphia theater stage, take seats that look like bar stools and begin the argument of their lives.

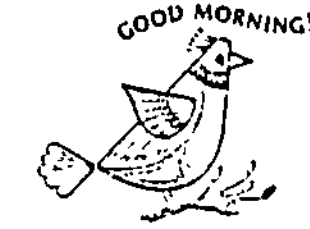

The first of three 1976 presidential campaign debates — direct descendant of the 1960 Nixon-Kennedy clashes — opens under stark television lights at 8:30 p.m. CDT on the stripped-bare stage of the old Walnut Theater.

There, for 90 minutes, three reporters will fire questions alternately at Ford and Carter before a television audience of scores of millions — including countless uncommitted voters — in a pressure-cooker ordeal likely to have a major, if not decisive, impact on the election.

Thursday's debate will be confined to domestic and economic issues. The Oct. 6 followup will cover foreign and defense policy and the Oct. 22 finale will be a free-for-all open to questions on any subject.

ELK GROVE VILLAGE and Schaumburg firefighters train their hoses on a refuse fire that broke out late Tuesday night at the site of the former Elk Grove Village Mobile Home Park, 941 W. Higgins Rd. The blaze broke out shortly after 11 p.m. in a pile of trash and shrubs, and took firemen two hours to extinguish. A hook-and-ladder truck, two pumpers and two ambulances responded. No injuries were reported. Cause is under investigation.

Zone unit nixes multi-family building plan

A proposed 25-unit multi-family development at Kirehoff Road and California Avenue was turned down Tuesday by a special zoning commission. The proposed development of nine buildings would not fit in with the surrounding single-family housing, said Abiathar White Jr., commission chairman.

In a unanimous vote, the commission recommended that the city council refuse to annex the 3.3-acre site under planned unit development zoning. "The area around it is predominantly single-family, and we believe it is best that this area also be developed as single-family," White said.

by DANN GIRE Barbara Glueckert, a 14-year-old Mount Prospect girl missing since Aug. 21, and fugitive Thomas Urlacher, 21, have been identified by a Chicago man as the persons who gave him a ride while hitchhiking in Texas.

Barbara Glueckert

Van Guy, 8830 Dobson St., told police Miss Glueckert, Urlacher and an unidentified man with blond hair, picked him up Aug. 28 in Lubbock, Tex. Guy told police he rode in a white 1968 Mustang with the trio about 10 hours before being dropped off in El Paso, about 400 miles west of Lubbock.

Miss Glueckert replied "Mount Prospect." The blond man then turned around and told the girl to "shut up." Hallihan said.

It is probably most credible in relation to other stories of people seeing her," Glueckert said Wednesday he "hopes the story is correct. I don't really know. If it is a very credible story I would hope that it would be thoroughly investigated so that it would either be discounted or lead to the return of Barbara."

bulletin on Urlacher and Miss Glueckert is being issued today. Lubbock police so far have not been officially involved in the search for the pair, last seen Aug. 21 at a rock concert in Huntley, Ill.

Criminal justice system doom predicted

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Every time a television cop says, "You have the right to remain silent . . ." Stanley J. Reiben says he feels sad, even though he played a role in making the famed "Miranda Warning" part of the nation's criminal justice scene.

Reiben, for a generation one of the top defense lawyers in the United States, says he feels sad because, to many Americans, the "Miranda Warning" signifies fairness in the judicial system — and that, he says, is just not so.

Rather than getting better, more

swift, sure and fair, Reiben says, "The criminal justice system is breaking down under the load."

"The poor have virtually no chance at all, it is getting harder for the middle class, and soon — unless there are changes — only the very rich will be able to get fair treatment in the criminal courts," Reiben says.

AS COUNSEL to the New York State Assembly Codes Committee, Reiben has come up with a proposal he says would help restore balance in the criminal court system, though he is quick to concede the idea does not answer all the problems.

In the simplest form, Reiben's proposal calls for creation of a "Grand Jury Counsel," who would present cases to a grand jury. If the grand jury returned an indictment, the case would then be prosecuted by the district attorney.

Under the current system, the district attorney presents the case to the grand jury and then, if an indictment is returned, prosecutes the defendant.

This leads, says Reiben, to a "scoreboard mentality" among district attorneys and forces them away from their basic trust which is "to protect the innocent and punish the guilty."

"IT STANDS to reason," he says, "if the district attorney presents the original case to the grand jury and gets an indictment then he is going to make every effort to secure a conviction, even if in so doing he ignores the basic tenets of justice."

"I accuse no district attorney of being evil simply because he is human. I have never met an in-office district attorney or assistant who admits he manipulates a grand jury. But I've met literally hundreds of former prosecutors who've regaled me with stories of how they handled grand juries."

He cited a case he was involved in at one time in which the prosecution withheld from the grand jury the fact that a key witness was actually an undercover police officer, not the convicted criminal he was portraying.

"That grand jury," he recalls with a slight smile, "thought it was hearing testimony from a real mobster and all they were actually hearing was a policeman who had been working on the case for a long time — don't you think he had a vested interest?"

AS THE PEOPLE'S representative, Reiben says, the district attorney

"should be speaking for a system of justice." But that often is not the case because the prosecutor eventually begins to believe he is "ordained as a protector of society and so he wraps all his actions in a cloak of sanctity."

"This has a snowball effect . . . Everybody must produce . . . It becomes a game of how many indictments, how many convictions? The temptation to achieve a score — a victory — is overwhelming."

Reiben, 61 years old and silver-haired with an elegant taste in clothing, has successfully defended 64 persons accused of murder in New York State. His part in the use of the "Miranda Warning" came when he was chief counsel for George Whitmore, a 19-year-old black accused in the 1963 slayings in Manhattan of Emily Hoffert and Janice Wylie, a niece of author Philip Wylie.

THE CASE, in which it was eventually established that Whitmore's confession was false, was cited by U.S. Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren as being a major cause of the Miranda rulings.

That ruling requires arresting officers to inform suspects of their rights to remain silent and have an attorney during all phases of the criminal justice process.

Another man, Richard Robles, eventually was convicted in the slayings.

Reiben says the grand jury counsel would have a built in check on the temptation to "run up a big score of indictments."

"The indictments would go to a district attorney who would not have a vested interest in gaining a conviction."

FREDDIE HATCH

Mackinac worker, 75, sweeps way to fame

MACKINAC ISLAND, Mich. (UPI) — There's no way to estimate how many tourists' shoes Freddie Hatch has saved in his career on this scenic island, but now someone else will have to sweep up where Hatch left off.

For 22 years the 75-year-old street sweeper has kept the pathways and streets clean in this popular vacation spot. His job is crucial because the island allows no cars and horses are the main form of transportation.

BUT HATCH is retiring from his 11-hour-a-day job Nov. 11 to allow a younger person to push the broom and shovel past the rustic businesses on this Lake Huron Island between Michigan's peninsulas. No successor has been found, but Hatch said there should be plenty of candidates from the amateurs who help him each year.

"I'm a product of the Roaring '20s," Hatch said. "I figure it's time for the late 20th-century generation to take over. Besides, somebody might find a way to mechanize me out of this job, even on Mackinac Island."

ISLAND BUSINESSMEN recently honored him with a retirement dinner and a check for $850. But he didn't stay for the festivities, saying he had to get up for work the next morning.

The Sugar Island native came to Mackinac in 1954 after trying careers as a lumberman and Great Lakes' sailor. Technology wiped out his jobs in both professions. He was given a position as street sweeper for $1.10 an hour, and decided to stay.

Although his main duty is sparing tourists the hazards of horse paths, he provides other services as well.

"He's a public relations man and guide rolled into one," said Jack Chambers, an island innkeeper.

"HE KNOWS MORE about island history than most of the natives and answers all sorts of questions asked by tourists. Actually, he's the most official looking person most visitors see."

Some tourists, however, consider Hatch more a butt of jokes than a source of information. Occasionally they borrow his tools and take snapshots of each other doing his job.

"Folks ridicule me sometimes," he said. "Seems sort of silly to me, but if they like it, that's their business. I just don't pay any attention."

Polls show Thompson lead

Charges fly in race for governor

by ROBERT KIECKHEFER

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The gubernatorial campaign between James R. Thompson and Michael J. Howlett already is starting to look like the mud-slinging, name-calling marathon Howlett and Gov. Daniel Walker staged last spring.

Charges of "gutter politics," political assassination and irresponsibility started flying in earnest last week as early polls indicated Thompson holds a strong lead over Howlett statewide.

The week got underway with Tony Kerner, adopted son of the late Gov. Otto Kerner, charging at a Democratic rally that Thompson rose to fame by walking a bloody path "strewn with victims." One of those victims, Kerner charged, was his father, whom Thompson successfully prosecuted on a racketeer stock bribery charge. Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley introduced Kerner. Howlett also attended the rally.

Thompson said Kerner's remarks represented a "sharp, dirty turn" in the campaign and responded with a few charges of his own.

"From the mayor on down, they've started to focus their personal attacks on me," Thompson said. "I think that's gutter politics. I think it's desperate politics."

THOMPSON HINTED he believes Daley was responsible for Kerner's statements. If that is true, he asked, "Then, Mister Howlett, what kind of governor will you be? And what kind of role will he (the mayor) play in your administration?"

Thompson also noted disapprovingly that Howlett has several times recently referred to him as a "Nixon Republican."

The war of words continued later in the week when Howlett pledged that he will not raise state taxes if he is elected. Howlett said Thompson won't make the same pledge because he is "soft on a tax increase."

That tactic is similar to the one Gov. Daniel Walker used to defeat Paul Simon in the 1972 Democratic gubernatorial primary. In that campaign Simon said he felt that if any tax were increased, it should be the income tax. Walker used a quick media campaign to convey the impression that Simon planned to raise taxes.

Thompson has carefully avoided the trap by simply refusing to answer what he calls "the Paul Simon question." Asked about Howlett's statement about him he said simply, "Irresponsible."

The Howlett-Walker primary clash featured charges of "racketeer politics" and vulgar epithets. Even Daley said he was surprised by the low level of the campaign and Thompson said shortly before the primary he felt the Democrats had "gone at it with such ferocity that they've damaged each other in the process."

THERE WERE SOME substantive proposals during the week's campaigning.

Howlett told a meeting of the Illinois Broadcasters Association here he can promise not to raise taxes because normal growth in the economy is enough to pay rising costs of government. He said state taxes have grown 9 per cent a year since the income tax was passed.

Thompson released his 10th lengthy position paper — a document about welfare abuses and problems — during a "flyaround." He said the state must take new approaches to the problem of welfare fraud and cheating and help recipients achieve the "pride and self-respect that only productive employment brings."

Howlett, in speeches in Chicago and Decatur, also urged greater utilization of Illinois coal in conjunction with nuclear power development. He suggested that the state Department of Conservation be reorganized to end political control of that office. During a Rotary Club speech in Batavia he repeated his call for a return to two-year state budgets.

In other campaign developments during the past week:

- Thompson aides released a poll showing their candidate 15 percentage points ahead of Howlett, 52 per cent to 37 per cent. An earlier Thompson poll showed a similar point difference, but with more undecided voters. Thompson's polls show him with less of a lead than one done for the Chicago

CHRISTENING CAMPAIGN airplane, Democratic vice presidential candidate Sen. Walter Mondale pours a bucket of champagne over side of plane. Christened the "Minnesota Fritz," the United Boeing 727 was baptized at Midway Airport where Mondale picked up the airplane for its first campaign flight to Springfield, Ill.

Tribune. The Tribune poll showed the GOP candidate ahead by 24 points.

- Democratic attorney general candidate Cecil Partee said in Quincy he will permit state agencies to run their own legal staffs if he is elected. Partee said his Republican opponent, Atty. Gen. William Scott "has stated he has the sole right to represent all agencies of government," but in cases involving more than one agency "has repeatedly maintained that it is his right to also decide which agency he will represent or if he will represent an agency at all."

- Republican campaign officials announced Vice President Nelson Rockefeller and GOP vice presidential candidate Sen. Robert Dole will attend an Illinois "Salute to the President" dinner in Chicago Oct. 7.

- Republican Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey said his Democratic opponent, Edward J. Egan, was ordered by Daley to give up his job as appeals court judge to run for state's attorney.

"The explanation is simple," Carey said. "What Daley giveth, he can taketh away." The state's attorney's office can be a sensitive one for the Daley organization, since an unfriendly incumbent can use it for embarrassing investigations.

- Leaders of the Political Honesty Initiative, after failing to get three proposed legislative ethics amendments on the November ballot, announced they will ask legislative candidates to endorse their goals and will work against those who refuse.

- The Chicago Tribune said Teamsters leader Louis Peick, whose union has endorsed Howlett, has donated $10,000 to Thompson's campaign.

- F. Joseph McCaffrey, the Libertarian party gubernatorial candidate, urged repeal of all drug abuse laws and said as governor he would pardon all drug offenders now in prison.

He said antidrug laws are simply another form of prohibition and cause more crime than they prevent.

Waterfront ruffians replaced by wealthy

URBAN DECAY almost robbed Pittsburgh of one of its most fashionable and historic neighborhoods, the Mexican War streets. But a restoration project is now well on its way to reclaiming the BOSTON (UPI) — Gone are the ragged wooden wharves, the jostling, sweating merchants, the smells and men and darkness that put the waterfront of this bustling harbor town off limits for decades.

Scarred, rotten docks that served wooden clipper ships and steel hulled luxury liners alike for two centuries have been repaired.

Government, private enterprise and $140 million have taken the waterfront from the past and given it to the future.

Nearby marketplaces where fresh produce has been sold for 250 years have been restored.

CHANGE FOR the 104-acre harbor-front, including 40 wharves and warehouses, began a decade ago. Most buildings were gutted and modernized from within, leaving red-brick exteriors untouched.

Many visitors to the area express astonishment as they wander through evidence of urban renewal at its best.

For investors, the long awaited harvest has just begun.

"I just don't believe this place," said Bostonian Ken Gurvin, gazing at greenhouse-style glass enclosing merchants' wheel-to-wheel push carts along the outside walls of 150-year-old Quincy Market.

"It's just incredible."

SHOPS AND CONFLICTING smells from adjacent cafe-style food counters crowd the 500-foot long interior of the granite market building, replacing the musty, cluttered butcher shops and wholesalers that packed the building for decades.

The city's second mayor, Josiah

Quincy, had the green copper domed market built in 1926 as an "improvement, unexampled in its general character and not to be paralleled for its public utility." Some called it the nation's first urban renewal project.

New construction may not have ignited higher prices for Bostonians then, but the $9.5 million renovation in 1976 has.

Gold plated price tags are common at the market and along the waterfront now that the 20th century and antique chic have arrived.

"I don't know if I'd shop here," said Gurvin, a young financial analyst, "but it's a great place to visit."

THE UNINHABITED warehouse district and the men in tee-shirts that worked it have been replaced by posh apartments housing well heeled men and women tailored collar to cuff.

A harbor view, two-bedroom condominium in a renovated warehouse with a yacht mooring below may cost $100,000 or more. A one bedroom walkup nearby may cost $450 a month.

Twin 40-story luxury apartment buildings tower over the renovated area.

The district's population, less than 1,000 six years ago, now numbers more than 3,400.

Low priced, after work cocktail hours at new waterfront restaurants draw customers from business districts blocks away. Many stay in the area for dinner, rather than hike to the center of town for less expensive meals.

A STEADY STREAM of interest in the district, evident over the past two years, has turned into a torrent in recent weeks.

On the first weekend the Quincy market was open in late August, thousands of city dwellers dodged thunderstorms to sample the results of years of careful planning. Whether they return remains uncertain.

"I can't afford any of this stuff," complained Marvin Carter, as he headed from the red-bricked sidewalks outside the new market to the familiar, crate cluttered Haymarket vegetable market across the street.

Contrast exists between the new market and the Haymarket, a crowded outdoor market that has served the area for decades.

"THEY CATER to different kinds of people as far as I can see," says Louis Jackson, a construction worker with six children who travels weekly from the Mattapan section to haggle at the outdoor market. "I think the two places complement each other well."

Prices and styles compete. Apples selling for 25 cents a pound at the Haymarket sell for 25 cents a piece across the street at the new Quincy market.

Food is the mainstay of Haymarket. Antiques, bric-a-brac and handicrafts fill the tables outside the renovated market.

The prices at Haymarket are shouted and haggled as they have been along the waterfront for centuries.

At the freshly sandblasted Quincy market nearby, prices are posted, not discussed.

Dist. 211 passes $40.3 million budget; reflects hikes

The High School Dist. 211 Board of Education Wednesday approved a $40.3 million budget for 1976-77 that reflects increased costs because of higher student enrollment, pay raises and maintenance for new construction.

The tax rate paid by district residents could go up or down, business manager James Slater said. Although the board approved a 6 cent tax levy increase, many factors affect the tax rate in Dist. 211, he said.

According to the formula used to determine state aid, the state gives Dist. 211 more state aid each year, but requires the district to roll back its local tax rate. Gov. Daniel Walker recently approved legislation eliminating the roll-back requirement but it may not go into effect until July, 1977.

IF THE ROLL back is eliminated taxes probably will go up, Slater said. If the roll back is not eliminated the district's tax rate will go down, he said.

"Nobody knows what will happen," he said. "Taxes could rise substantially or they could drop substantially."

The 6-cent increase approved by the board means district residents would pay $2.678 per $100 of assessed valuation in 1976-77. In 1975-76 the levy was $2.618. This means residents owning a home assessed at $10,000 would pay about $6 more in taxes in 1976-77.

The tax levy rose in the education, liability insurance, and Illinois Municipal Retirement Fund. The levy decreased in bond, interest and transportation funds.

THE BUDGET lists $28.6 million in operating costs plus $11.7 million in construction costs. The 1975-76 expenses were $25 million for operation and $3.8 million for construction. The additional expenses for construction are for bills due on the new Palatine High School which will be completed this year.

The education fund which pays for salaries, educational supplies and administrative expenses will increase $18.7 million in 1976-77, up 16.2 per cent from last year's $16.1 million. The hike reflects increased costs and an average 7.6 per cent raise in faculty salaries and raises for other personnel.

The operations building and maintenance fund increased 12.8 per cent from $3.17 million in 1975-76 to $3.57 million.

Budgets for other funds include:

- Bond and interest fund, $4.68 million, up 12.2 per cent. This fund is used to purchase property and to construct new buildings and additions.
- Transportation fund $949,500, up 1.8 per cent. Money from this fund is used to pay for busing students.

- Retirement fund $498,000, up 17 per cent. This fund pays retirement benefits for nonteaching employees.

- Rent fund $240,000, no change from last year. Dist. 211 pays rent on Schaumburg High School to the Capital Development Board, a state agency. The school was built in 1970 with state funds and the district agreed to pay rent on the building for 16 years after which the district will own the school.

'Harper alumni grades beat norm'

by JOHN N. FRANK

Harper College students who have transferred to state schools are doing better academically than the average Illinois community college transfer student, Harper officials said.

John A. Lucas, Harper's director of planning and research, said that information supplied by Eastern Illinois University, Charleston; Illinois State, Normal; University of Illinois, Champaign; Southern Illinois, Carbondale; and the University of Illinois Circle Campus, Chicago, shows Harper students achieving higher grade point averages than the average community college transfer student and in some cases higher than students who began their studies at those schools.

Guerin A. Fischer, vice president for student services, said that the latest information supplied by the five state schools is consistent with information regarding past performance by Harper students who transfer to four-year institutions.

LUCAS SAID HE recently received the following information:

- As of this summer, 24 Harper alumni who transferred to Eastern had an average grade point of 3.05 on a 4 scale compared to a 2.90 average for all community college transfer students.

- Harper alumni attending Illinois State last spring had an average grade point of 2.84 on a 4 scale compared to a 2.72 average for all community transfer students, a 2.88 average for students who transferred from other four-year colleges and a 2.78 average for students who began their higher education there.

- The 45 to 50 Harper alumni at the University of Illinois, Champaign, had an average grade point of 3.71 on a 5 scale in 1975 compared to a 3.59 average for all community college transfer students, a 3.89 for students transferring from other four-year institutions and a 4.02 for students who began as freshmen at Illinois.

- The 221 Harper alumni at Southern Illinois achieved a 2.72 average on a 4 scale for the 1975-76 school year compared to a 2.62 for all community college transfer students and a 2.52 for students who began at Southern.

- Harper students at the University of Illinois Circle Campus ranked fourth as a group compared to all other community college transfer students, with an average of 3.77 on a 5 scale. That study also showed that 78 per cent of the Harper students who transfer there were still there one year later.

Lucas said that since each university uses a somewhat different format in reporting such data to Harper and since Northern Illinois, DeKalb, where the greatest number of Harper alumni are, is reluctant to release any such information, Harper also conducts studies of its own to see what happens to students after they finish their studies at Harper.

One such study conducted last year showed that "Harper alumni average .17 of a grade-point higher at their new institution than their grade point average at Harper."

FISCHER SAID much of the credit for the high level of achievement by Harper alumni must go to area elementary and high schools which students attend before coming to Harper.

"We think our high schools and elementary schools are excellent," Fischer said.

Lucas said the studies regarding how Harper alumni do at other schools are used to review Harper's own curriculum and update or revise programs.

"Otherwise you go along and continue turning out a product and you don't know what you're turning out," Lucas said.

Butera buys National Tea store

The Butera Foods grocery store chain has bought out the Rolling Meadows National Tea store at Kirchoff Road and Meadow Drive.

National will close its doors Nov. 1, and the Butera store is expected to open shortly afterwards, possibly by the end of December, according to company spokesmen.

Although National Tea officials would not comment on the closing, the city water department has been notified to stop billing the company after Nov. 1.

THE STORE employs approximately 33 persons and recently was remodeled.

An employee who asked to remain anonymous said he thought the store "was doing real well after the remodeling and was getting over the hurt caused by Topp's closing."

"We were just told about the closing and feel real bad. Some of us don't know where we are going," he said.

The store's manager declined to discuss the matter.

Topp's occupied the store next to the National until it closed more than a year ago, and the facility has remained vacant since.

TERRACOM REALTY, owner of the center, is seeking a tenant for the vacant building.

Butera Foods spokesmen said they plan extensive remodeling of the old National store before its opening in December.

The food chain is opening another new store in Golf Mill Shopping Center in three weeks.

In addition to the Rolling Meadows store, the firm plans to open another facility in Buffalo Grove on Arlington Heights Road.

Butera operates three Chicago stores and has stores in Arlington Heights, Des Plaines, Schaumburg and Hanover Park.

Alternative school signup down slightly

Enrollment at Palatine Township's alternative school is down slightly this year, but the two-year-old program is continuing to offer the 12 youths who use it a chance to develop academic and social skills.

The Off-Campus Learning Resource Program, the alternative school's formal name, is designed to help students ages 14 through 17 who work better outside the regular classroom. Last year the school had an enrollment of from 17 to 23 students. It is funded by Palatine Township through The Bridge, Palatine's youth counseling service. Teachers are provided by High School Dist. 211.

"We're of the opinion that it has proved its worth," said Nan Sharp of The Bridge. "It's really helped people who had trouble adjusting to the regular school environment."

THE SCHOOL is located at The Bridge, 434½ E. Northwest Hwy. The alternative school was allocated $16,000 by the township board of auditors for 1976-77 last June, but not without some difficulty. Auditors questioned whether the program served enough people to be continued and whether it should be funded by the township or the school district.

Ms. Sharp said the purpose of the alternative school is not entirely academic and is aimed at helping students to develop a trade if he or she cannot be taught the regular curriculum.

John Utterback, director of the alternative school, said the school has access to the facilities of Dist. 211, including libraries and audio-visual equipment.

Auditor eyes chances at top post

by PAUL GORES

Charles M. Zimmerman won a seat on the Palatine Township Board of Auditors four years ago and today the outspoken Republican is assessing his chances of unseating fellow party member Howard Olsen as township supervisor, according to high-ranking township Republicans.

Zimmerman said it is "much too early to speculate," but that some "hard thinking has to be done after the general election" on who will run for township posts.

Several GOP officials have told The Herald that Zimmerman of Hoffman Estates will seek the support of GOP precinct captains for the supervisor post prior to a February caucus, when the Republican township slate will be selected.

Olsen has served as supervisor since 1965, winning three consecutive terms. He served as Palatine village president before being elected township supervisor and has been active in the Republican party for years.

OLSEN SAID HE was not aware of plans by Zimmerman to oppose him for the post. "That'd be an interesting thing," he said.

"As far as I'm concerned, I have every thought of running," Olsen added.

"There's been a lot of back and forth this year," Zimmerman said of his disagreements with Olsen during board meetings. But he would not say the differences of opinion have led him to oppose Olsen for the supervisor post.

"Those are both two guys with good credentials," Bernard E. Pedersen, Palatine Township Republican Committeeman, said. He said if there is more than one GOP candidate for township supervisor, the party's choice would be selected in an open caucus, probably in February.

THERE IS A CHANCE that as many as three men will be running for the post if Zimmerman decides to seek it.

"If Zimmerman runs there may well be others running, too," Township Auditor Liston Pennington said.

"I'm thinking very strongly of it."

But Pennington said he will support Olsen if he is unopposed for the township supervisor spot.

"Howard Olsen had done one hell of a swell job and deserves a lot of credit," Pennington said.

IT WAS OLSEN, running on the GOP ticket, who defeated Pennington for township supervisor in 1965. Pennington ran on a coalition ticket in 1965 but in recent township elections has run as a Republican.

immerman was elected township auditor in 1973. He is an attorney, and has lived in the township since 1970.

Ford, Carter ready lines for debate of their lives

PRESIDENT FORD

by United Press International

President Ford rehearsed his lines all over the White House Wednesday and Jimmy Carter pored over briefing books against that moment Thursday when they meet on a Philadelphia theater stage, take seats that look like bar stools and begin the argument of their lives.

The first of three 1976 presidential campaign debates — direct descendant of the 1960 Nixon-Kennedy clashes — opens under stark television lights at 8:30 p.m. CDT on the stripped-bare stage of the old Walnut Theater.

There, for 90 minutes, three reporters will fire questions alternately at Ford and Carter before a television audience of scores of millions — including countless uncommitted voters — in a pressure-cooker ordeal likely to have a major, if not decisive, impact on the election.

Thursday's debate will be confined to domestic and economic issues. The Oct. 6 followup will cover foreign and defense policy and the Oct. 22 finale will be a free-for-all open to questions on any subject.

In Washington, the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals denied independent candidate Eugene McCarthy's request that it block the debate until formal argument of his demand to be included. The ruling dashed McCarthy's hopes for getting a piece of the first debate action.

With the political stakes as high as they can be, the Republican and Democratic nominees rested and studied intently on the eve of Round One.

Beyond the standard campaign isues, this year's debates held great potential for personal bombshell questions hard to rehearse and already controversial: What about Carter's salty comments on adultery in that Playboy interview? What about reports Ford's congressional campaign finances are under investigation? Where would Carter, and Ford, set the level for increased income taxation?

White House spokesmen quit ducking questions about Ford's training schedule and told reporters he is rehearsing his answers to every conceivable question. He has been doing so for four or five days. He plans to do so even after he arrives in Philadelphia Thursday.

Press secretary Ron Nessen said Ford's aides, himself included, pop questions at Ford wherever the President may be — in the White House family theater, in the Oval Office, in his private inner office, in the family living quarters.

He confirmed speech consultant Don Penny, the man who prepped Ford for his Republican convention speech, is coaching him again, but denied knowledge of whether Ford is using a videotape camera to check the instant-replay of his rehearsals.

Nessen said Ford watched a re-run of the first debate between John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon in 1960 as part of his preparation.

In Plains, Ga., Carter's advisers declined to be so detailed on the preparations. They said he was boning up on the issues, which have been summarized for him in two, thick briefing books, and discussing the debate with

Charles M. Zimmerman won a seat on the Palatine Township Board of Auditors four years ago and today the outspoken Republican is assessing his chances of unseating fellow party member Howard Olsen as township supervisor, according to high-ranking township Republicans.

Missing Glueckert girl seen in Texas

by DANN GILIE

Barbara Glueckert, a 14-year-old Mount Prospect girl missing since Aug. 21, and fugitive Thomas Urlacher, 24, have been identified by a Chicago man as the persons who gave him a ride while hitchhiking in Texas.

Van Guy, 9850 Dobson St., told police Miss Glueckert, Urlacher and an unidentified man with blond hair, picked him up Aug. 28 in Lubbock, Tex. Guy told police he rode in a white 1969 Mustang with the trio about 10 hours before being dropped off in El Paso, about 400 miles west of Lubbock.

The Herald also learned the following developments in the case:

• Lubbock police today will issue a local bulletin on Miss Glueckert and Urlacher.

• A Barrington Hills man has told police Urlacher borrowed $1,000 from him two days after Miss Glueckert's disappearance.

• It is believed Miss Glueckert and her companion are headed for Flagstaff, Ariz., where Urlacher reportedly has friends.

MOUNT PROSPECT Det. Sgt. Patrick Hallihan said Wednesday that Guy had been traveling through Texas and was unaware police were seeking the girl and Urlacher until he returned to Chicago Sept. 3 and read local newspapers. "He came to us before the reward ($5,000) was announced," Hallihan said.

Guy told police he rode in the back seat of the car next to the teen-age girl he later identified as Miss Glueckert. The two men rode in the front seat, Guy said.

During conversation, Guy said he asked the girl where she was from.

Miss Glueckert replied "Mount Prospect." The blond man then turned around and told the girl to "shut up," Hallihan said.

Guy told police the blond man occasionally referred to the dark-haired man, (later identified as Urlacher) as "Tom."

After Guy was dropped off in El Paso, he reported the travelers told him they were headed toward Flagstaff, Ariz.

DET. JACK GNIOT said Guy's story of the car ride is officially classified as "unconfirmed."

But Robert Glueckert, Barbara's father, is optimistic that Guy's story,

"is probably most credible in relation to other stories of people seeing her."

Glueckert said Wednesday he "hopes the story is correct. I don't really know. If it is a very credible story I would hope that it would be thoroughly investigated so that it would either be discounted or lead to the return of Barbara."

"All I'm worried about at this time is getting her home," he said. "There may have been some sort of mental change in her, but we can't worry about that now. If she's safe and alive, that's important."

LUBBOCK POLICE Capt. William

bulletin on Urlacher and Miss Glueckert is being issued today.

Lubbock police so far have not been officially involved in the search for the pair, last seen Aug. 21 at a rock concert in Huntley, Ill.

In a related incident Wednesday, Mount Prospect police said a Barrington Hills man admitted he loaned Urlacher $1,000 just before Urlacher left the Chicago area.

David Reiter, 19, of Rte. 2 County Line Rd., told police he gave Urlacher the money Aug. 23 and is still waiting to be repaid.

Det. Richard Pascoe said Reiter has been in the habit of loaning Url-cher sums of money on a short term basis "with hundreds of dollars in interest." Until now, police said, Urlacher had always repaid the loans.

THE HERALD obtained a copy of a letter police said Reiter sent Urlacher Aug. 28. It is unknown if Urlacher read the letter.

"I know what kind of trouble that you're in. But that's no excuse for not calling me at all," the letter reads. "There is no way I can take that loss. No way."

The letter, signed by Reiter, stated that if Urlacher did not contact Reiter by Sept. 3, Reiter would go to the police.

Dist. 211 passes $40.3 million budget; reflects hikes

The High School Dist. 211 Board of Education Wednesday approved a $40.3 million budget for 1976-77 that reflects increased costs because of higher student enrollment, pay raises and maintenance for new construction.

The tax rate paid by district residents could go up or down, business manager James Slater said. Although the board approved a 6 cent tax levy increase, many factors affect the tax rate in Dist. 211, he said.

According to the formula used to determine state aid, the state gives Dist. 211 more state aid each year, but requires the district to roll back its local tax rate. Gov. Daniel Walker recently approved legislation eliminating the roll-back requirement but it may not go into effect until July, 1977.

If the roll back is eliminated taxes probably will go up, Slater said. If the roll back is not eliminated the district's tax rate will go down, he said.

"Nobody knows what will happen," he said. "Taxes could rise substantially or they could drop substantially."

The 6-cent increase approved by the board means district residents would pay $2.678 per $100 of assessed valuation in 1976-77. In 1975-76 the levy was $2.618. This means residents owning a home assessed at $10,000 would pay about $6 more in taxes in 1976-77.

The tax levy rose in the educational, liability insurance, and Illinois Municipal Retirement Fund. The levy decreased in bond, interest and transportation funds.

THE BUDGET lists $28.6 million in operating costs plus $11.7 million in construction costs. The 1975-76 expenses were $25 million for operation and $3.9 million for construction. The additional expenses for construction are for bills due on the new Palatine High School which will be completed this year.

The education fund which pays for salaries, educational supplies and administrative expenses will increase $18.7 million in 1976-77, up 18.2 per cent from last year's $16.1 million. The hike reflects increased costs and an average 7.6 per cent raise in faculty salaries and raises for other personnel.

The operations building and maintenance fund increased 12.8 per cent from $3.17 million in 1975-76 to $3.57 million.

Budgets for other funds include:
• Bond and interest fund, $4.68 million, up 12.2 per cent. This fund is used to purchase property and to construct new buildings and additions.

• Transportation fund, $949,500, up 1.8 per cent. Money from this fund is used to pay for busing students.

• Retirement fund $498,000, up 17 per cent. This fund pays retirement benefits for nonteaching employees.

• Rent fund $240,000, no change from last year. Dist. 211 pays rent on Schaumburg High School to the Capital Development Board, a state agency. The school was built in 1970 with state funds and the district agreed to pay rent on the building for 16 years after which the district will own the school.

'Harper alumni grades beat norm'

by JOHN N. FRANK

Harper College students who have transferred to state schools are doing better academically than the average Illinois community college transfer student, Harper officials said.

John A. Lucas, Harper's director of planning and research, said that information supplied by Eastern Illinois University, Charleston; Illinois State, Normal; University of Illinois, Champaign; Southern Illinois, Carbondale; and the University of Illinois Circle Campus, Chicago, shows Harper students achieving higher grade point averages than the average community college transfer student and in some cases higher than students who began their studies at those schools.

Guerin A. Fischer, vice president for student services, said that the latest information supplied by the five state schools is consistent with information regarding past performance by Harper students who transfer to four-year institutions.

LUCAS SAID HE recently received the following information:

• As of this summer, 24 Harper alumni who transferred to Eastern had an average grade point of 3.03 on a 4 scale compared to a 2.90 average for all community college transfer students.

• Harper alumni attending Illinois State last spring had an average grade point of 2.84 on a 4 scale compared to a 2.72 average for all community transfer students, a 2.88 average for students who transferred from other four-year colleges and a 2.78 average for students who began their higher education there.

• The 45 to 50 Harper alumni at the University of Illinois, Champaign, had an average grade point of 3.71 on a 5 scale in 1975 compared to a 3.59 average for all community college transfer students, a 3.89 for students transferring from other four-year institutions and a 4.02 for students who began as freshmen at Illinois.

• The 221 Harper alumni at Southern Illinois achieved a 2.72 average on a 4 scale for the 1975-76 school year compared to a 2.62 for all community college transfer students and a 2.52 for students who began at Southern.

• Harper students at the University of Illinois Circle Campus ranked fourth as a group compared to all other community college transfer students, with an average of 3.77 on a 5 scale. That study also showed that 79 per cent of the Harper students who transfer there were still there one year later.

Lucas said that since each university uses a somewhat different format in reporting such data to Harper and since Northern Illinois, DeKalb, where the greatest number of Harper alumni are, is reluctant to release any such information, Harper also conducts studies of its own to see what happens to students after they finish their studies at Harper.

One such study conducted last year showed that "Harper alumni average .17 of a grade-point higher at their new institution than their grade point average at Harper."

FISCHER SAID much of the credit for the high level of achievement by Harper alumni must go to area elementary and high schools which students attend before coming to Harper.

"We think our high schools and elementary schools are excellent," Fischer said.

Lucas said the studies regarding how Harper alumni do at other schools are used to review Harper's own curriculum and update or revise programs.

"Otherwise you go along and continue turning out a product and you don't know what you're turning out," Lucas said.

Flu-shot plan delayed indefinitely

Palatine's swine flu inoculation program, scheduled for Oct. 27-31 at Harper College, has been postponed indefinitely because of a delay in obtaining the flu vaccine.

Edwin Tazelaar, director of the Palatine Civil Defense Dept., and program coordinator, confirmed Wednesday that the earliest the flu vaccine will be available is in mid-November. The delay was announced last week by officials of the Cook County Health Dept.

Palatine's program, called Operation Security Blanket, was the earliest scheduled flu-shot effort in the Northwest suburbs. Tazelaar said the program cannot be rescheduled until definite information is received from the county on the availability of the vaccine.

Tazelaar also said it will be increasingly difficult to reschedule the program at Harper because the facility will be available only on weekends.

"It will be tougher and tougher to get three or more days together as we get closer to the holidays," he said.

HE ALSO SAID THE approach of winter, with less favorable weather conditions, will add to the delay in the program.

About 200 of 2,000 time slots which had been scheduled for volunteer workers during the four-day program have been filled, Tazelaar said. That number represented a good start toward the number of volunteers needed for the program, he said.

He also said phone calls to volunteers would be made as soon as more information is received. He said volunteers will be notified when new dates for the program are known.

50 trees marked for destruction

More than 50 diseased and damaged trees in Inverness have been marked for cutting by Village Forester Tom Brown.

Brown, who received a village contract in July to inspect trees in the village, said about two-thirds of the trees marked for cutting were infected with Dutch elm disease. He said the area with the most diseased elm trees is located south of Baldwin Road, north of Palatine Road and west of Roselle Road.

Dutch elm disease is spread by a beetle which carries a fungus that stops the sap flow through a tree, Brown said.

Homeowners are required by village ordinance to have marked trees on their property cut down. If an owner delays cutting a tree, the village may cut it down at the property owner's expense.

Brown said so far he has not run into anyone who has refused to cut down a diseased or damaged tree.

"They've cooperated pretty well," Brown said of the Inverness property owners.

Brown said so far he has not run into anyone who has refused to cut down a diseased or damaged tree.

"They've cooperated pretty well," Brown said of the Inverness property owners.

Brown was hired by the village board at $12 an hour to inspect village trees. He said the inspection will continue through mid-October.

Jones tells reelection plans Friday

Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones has scheduled a press conference for 4:15 p.m. Friday at the village hall to announce if he will seek reelection.

Jones said he plans to meet with village department heads before making the announcement to let them know his plans.

The GOP village president, 38, who was elected to his first term in 1973 after serving six years as a trustee, has given no indication as to what his decision is.

SOURCES CLOSE TO Jones have said he made a decision as early as this June not to seek reelection because of time pressures which keep him away from his family. Jones has refused to confirm or deny the speculation.

The village president's announcement is expected to officially begin the 1977 village campaign since several incumbent trustees have said they are awaiting Jones' announcement before revealing their own reelection plans.

Trustees Richard W. Fonte, Robert J. Guss and James L. Shaw, who ran with Jones on the 1973 Republican slate, have said they have not made a decision about the April election. Fonte and Shaw said they are in part awaiting Jones' announcement before they make a decision.

All three have said they are not considering running for village president

If Jones steps aside, THE VILLAGE RACE is expected to draw several candidates to challenge the incumbents.

Trustee Bryan P. Coughlin, who has had a falling out with his fellow Republicans on the village board, has said he hopes to convince the Republican Party leaders to consider backing several nonincumbents at the Dec. 4 local convention.

Coughlin has said he has talked to several persons from both within and outside the local organization about the 1977 race. He added, however, he plans to work within the party in whatever attempts he makes to bring in new faces to the organization.

Former Village Public Works Director James C. Bennett also has said he is considering forming an independent slate to run against the incumbents.

Bennett, 48, resigned from his village post in August 1974. Although he gave no reasons for his action at the time, indications were that Bennett was dissatisfied with the Republican administration elected in 1973.

Auditor judges chances to gain supervisor post

the differences of opinion have led him to oppose Olsen for the supervisor post.

"Those are both two guys with good credentials," Bernard E. Pedersen, Palatine Township Republican Committeeman, said. He said if there is more than one GOP candidate for township supervisor, the party's choice would be selected in an open caucus, probably in February.

THERE IS A CHANCE that as many as three men will be running for the post if Zimmerman decides to seek it.

"If Zimmerman runs there may well be others running, too," Township Auditor Liston Pennington said. "I'm thinking very strongly of it."

But Pennington said he will support Olsen if he is unopposed for the township supervisor spot.

"Howard Olsen had done one hell of a swell job and deserves a lot of credit," Pennington said.

IT WAS OLSEN, running on the GOP ticket, who defeated Pennington for township supervisor in 1965. Pennington ran on a coalition ticket in 1965 but in recent township elections has run as a Republican.

The other two township auditors, Don Bellm and John Serio, would not comment on the possibility of Zimmerman seeking the supervisor post. Zimmerman was elected township auditor in 1973. He is an attorney, and has lived in the township since 1970.

Alternative school signup down

Enrollment at Palatine Township's alternative school is down slightly this year, but the two-year-old program is continuing to offer the 12 youths who use it a chance to develop academic and social skills.

The Off-Campus Learning Resource Program, the alternative school's formal name, is designed to help students ages 14 through 17 who work better outside the regular classroom. Last year the school had an enrollment of from 17 to 23 students. It is funded by Palatine Township through The Bridge, Palatine's youth counseling service. Teachers are provided by High School Dist. 211.

"We're of the opinion that it has proved its worth," said Nan Sharp of The Bridge. "It's really helped people who had trouble adjusting to the regular school environment."

THE SCHOOL IS located at The Bridge, 434½ E. Northwest Hwy. The alternative school was allocated $18,000 by the township board of auditors for 1976-77 last June, but not without some difficulty. Auditors questioned whether the program served enough people to be continued and whether it should be funded by the township or the school district.

Ms. Sharp said the purpose of the alternative school is not entirely academic and is aimed at helping students to develop a trade if he or she cannot be taught the regular curriculum.

John Utterback, director of the alternative school, said the school has access to the facilities of Dist. 211, including libraries and audio-visual equipment.

Ford, Carter ready lines for debate of their lives

PRESIDENT FORD

by United Press International

President Ford rehearsed his lines all over the White House Wednesday and Jimmy Carter pored over briefing books against that moment Thursday when they meet on a Philadelphia theater stage, take seats that look like bar stools and begin the argument of their lives.

to have a major, if not decisive, impact on the election. Thursday's debate will be confined to domestic and economic issues. The Oct. 6 followup will cover foreign and defense policy and the Oct. 22 finale will be a free-for-all open to questions on any subject.

issues, this year's debates held great potential for personal bombshell questions hard to rehearse and already controversial: What about Carter's salty comments on adultery in that Playboy interview? What about reports Ford's congressional campaign finances are under investigation? Where would Carter, and Ford, set the level for increased income taxation?

dent may be — in the White House family theater, in the Oval Office, in his private inner office, in the family living quarters. He confirmed speech consultant Don Penny, the man who prepped Ford for his Republican convention speech, is coaching him again, but denied knowledge of whether Ford is using a videotape camera to check the instant-replay of his rehearsals.

Barbara Glueckert seen in Texas

by DANN GIRE

Barbara Glueckert, a 14-year-old Mount Prospect girl missing since Aug. 21, and fugitive Thomas Urlacher, 24, have been identified by a Chicago man as the persons who gave him a ride while hitchhiking in Texas.

Van Guy, 2830 Dobson St., told police Miss Glueckert, Urlacher and an unidentified man with blond hair, picked him up Aug. 20 in Lubbock, Tex. Guy told police he rode in a white 1969 Mustang with the trio about 10 hours before being dropped off in El Paso, about 400 miles west of Lubbock.

The Herald also learned the following developments in the case:

• Lubbock police today will issue a local bulletin on Miss Glueckert and Urlacher.

Barbara Glueckert

MOUNT PROSPECT Det. Sgt. Patrick Hallihan said Wednesday that Guy had been traveling through Texas and was unaware police were seeking the girl and Urlacher until he returned to Chicago Sept. 3 and read local newspapers. "He came to us before the reward ($5,000) was announced," Hallihan said.

Guy told police he rode in the back seat of the car next to the teen-age girl he later identified as Miss Glueckert. The two men rode in the front seat, Guy said.

During conversation, Guy said he asked the girl where she was from. Miss Glueckert replied "Mount Prospect." The blond man then turned around and told the girl to "shut up," Hallihan said.

Guy told police the blond man occasionally referred to the dark-haired man, (later identified as Urlacher) as "Tom."

After Guy was dropped off in El Paso, he reported the travelers told him they were headed toward Flagstaff, Ariz.

DET. JACK GNIOT said Guy's story of the car ride is officially classified as "unconfirmed."

But Robert Glueckert, Barbara's father, is optimistic that Guy's story, "is probably most credible in relation to other stories of people seeing her."

Glueckert said Wednesday he "hopes the story is correct. I don't really know. If it is a very credible story I would hope that it would be thoroughly investigated so that it would either be discounted or lead to the return of Barbara."

"All I'm worried about at this time is getting her home," he said. "There may have been some sort of mental change in her, but we can't worry about that now. If she's safe and alive, that's important."

LUBBOCK POLICE Capt. William Cox of juvenile division said a local bulletin on Urlacher and Miss Glueckert is being issued today.

Lubbock police so far have not been officially involved in the search for the pair, last seen Aug. 21 at a rock concert in Huntley, Ill.

In a related incident Wednesday, Mount Prospect police said a Barrington Hills man admitted he loaned Urlacher $1,000 just before Urlacher left the Chicago area.

David Reiter, 19, of Rte. 2 County Line Rd., told police he gave Urlacher the money Aug. 23 and is still waiting to be repaid.

Det. Richard Pascoe said Reiter has been in the habit of loaning Urlacher sums of money on a short term basis "with hundreds of dollars in interest." Until now, police said, Urlacher had always repaid the loans.

THE HERALD obtained a copy of a letter police said Reiter sent Urlacher Aug. 28. It is unknown if Urlacher read the letter.

"I know what kind of trouble that you're in. But that's no excuse for not calling me at all," the letter reads. "There is no way I can take that loss. No way."

The letter, signed by Reiter, stated that if Urlacher did not contact Reiter by Sept. 3, Reiter would go to the police.

THERE'S NO stopping Phil Kenol, 12, as he speeds through a corn field in Palatine Township. With the first day of autumn

Wednesday and the cold weather that is sure to follow, Phil and millions of other kids soon will be packing away their bicycles and bringing out their ice skates.

Large water consumers to have bills recalculated

Large water consumers, who since April 1 have been paying the highest village rate, will have their bills recalculated as a result of a revised interpretation of Mount Prospect's current water rate schedule.

Village officials earlier this week offered a new interpretation of the existing water rate ordinance in an attempt to clear up its ambiguities, particularly those emerging in billing large water consumers including condominium apartment owners, apartment owners, laundromats, and car washes.

Meanwhile, the village board authorized Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley to hire an outside engineering firm to study Mount Prospect's water distribution system and recommend a rate schedule which, in the future, might be more equitable for village water users.

THE STUDY, conducted by Fletcher Engineering Co., Des Plaines, is expected to be completed within 45 days, at which time the village board will adopt a new rate schedule. The firm is working on a similar water study in the City of Rolling Meadows.

Eppley said once an acceptable rate is agreed upon — whether it be a flat rate or a scaled rate — credit will be given to large consumers who have paid bills exceeding the new calculations.

Quarterly water bills will be recalculated on the following basis:

- 90 cents per 1,000 gallons for the first 50,000 gallons used.
- $1 per 1,000 gallons for the next 50,001 to 99,999 gallons.
- $1.10 per 1,000 for the next 100,000 to 299,999 gallons.
- $1.20 per 1,000 gallons for the next 300,000 to 499,999 gallons.
- $1.30 per 1,000 gallons for the next 500,000 or more.

Trustee Edward B. Rhea Jr., who suggested the study be made to arrive at a fair rate, said recalculating the bills is an "interim solution."

"It is a short-term answer to the problem pending the outcome of the rate study by an outside agency or our own administration," said Trustee Michael H. Minton.

Under the water schedule in effect since April 1, larger consumers — particularly condominium apartment owners whose housing complexes are billed on one common meter used collectively by several residents — had been charged the highest rate. Village officials have said the concept behind the sliding schedule was to conserve water by charging users on "the more you use, the more you pay" basis. Before April 1, all village water users were charged a flat rate of 75 cents per 1,000 gallons.

Inquest dates set into deaths of two

An inquest into the Aug. 5 shooting death of 16-year-old Diana Melendez, 1822 Hopi St., is scheduled at noon Monday in the Cook County Morgue in Chicago.

An inquest into the death of 37-year-old John Drag, 1412 Loma Ln., has been scheduled by Cook County Sheriff's Police at 9:30 a.m. Oct. 4 in the morgue.

Drag's decomposed body was found Aug. 19 in a secluded area of Potawatomi Woods in Wheeling Township after his wife on July 19 reported him missing.

Dental records were used to confirm the identity of Drag.

Criminal justice system doom predicted

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Every time a television cop says, "You have the right to remain silent . . ." Stanley J. Reiben says he feels sad, even though he played a role in making the famed "Miranda Warning" part of the nation's criminal justice scene.

Reiben, for a generation one of the top defense lawyers in the United States, says he feels sad because, to many Americans, the "Miranda Warning" signifies fairness in the judicial system — and that, he says, is just not so.

Rather than getting better, more

swift, sure and fair, Reiben says, "The criminal justice system is breaking down under the load."

"The poor have virtually no chance at all, it is getting harder for the middle class, and soon — unless there are changes — only the very rich will be able to get fair treatment in the criminal courts," Reiben says.

AS COUNSEL to the New York State Assembly Codes Committee, Reiben has come up with a proposal he says would help restore balance in the criminal court system, though he is quick to concede the idea does not answer all the problems.

In the simplest form, Reiben's proposal calls for creation of a "Grand Jury Counsel," who would present cases to a grand jury. If the grand jury returned an indictment, the case would then be prosecuted by the district attorney.

Under the current system, the district attorney presents the case to the grand jury and then, if an indictment is returned, prosecutes the defendant.

This leads, says Reiben, to a "scoreboard mentality" among district attorneys and forces them away from their basic trust which is "to protect the innocent and punish the guilty."

"IT STANDS to reason," he says. "If the district attorney presents the original case to the grand jury and gets an indictment then he is going to make every effort to secure a conviction, even if in so doing he ignores the basic tenets of justice."

"I accuse no district attorney of being evil simply because he is human. I have never met an in-office district attorney or assistant who admits he manipulates a grand jury. But I've met literally hundreds of former prosecutors who've regaled me with stories of how they handled grand juries."

He cited a case he was involved in at one time in which the prosecution withheld from the grand jury the fact that a key witness was actually an undercover police officer, not the convicted criminal he was portraying.

"That grand jury," he recalls with a slight smile, "thought it was hearing testimony from a real mobster and all they were actually hearing was a policeman who had been working on the case for a long time — don't you think he had a vested interest?"

AS THE PEOPLE'S representative, Reiben says, the district attorney

"should be speaking for a system of justice." But that often is not the case because the prosecutor eventually begins to believe he is "ordained as a protector of society and so he wraps all his actions in a cloak of sanctity."

"This has a snowball effect . . . Everybody must produce . . . It becomes a game of how many indictments, how many convictions? The temptation to achieve a score — a victory — is overwhelming."

Reiben, 61 years old and silver-haired with an elegant taste in clothing, has successfully defended 64 persons accused of murder in New York State. His part in the use of the "Miranda Warning" came when he was chief counsel for George Whitmore, a 19-year-old black accused in the 1963 slayings in Manhattan of Emily Hoffert and Janice Wylie, a niece of author Philip Wylie.

THE CASE, in which it was eventually established that Whitmore's confession was false, was cited by U.S. Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren as being a major cause of the Miranda rulings.

That ruling requires arresting officers to inform suspects of their rights to remain silent and have an attorney during all phases of the criminal justice process.

Another man, Richard Robles, eventually was convicted in the slayings.

Reiben says the grand jury counsel would have a built in check on the temptation to "run up a big score of indictments."

"The indictments would go to a district attorney who would not have a vested interest in gaining a conviction."

FREDDIE HATCH

Mackinac worker, 75, sweeps way to fame

MACKINAC ISLAND, Mich. (UPI) — There's no way to estimate how many tourists' shoes Freddie Hatch has saved in his career on this scenic island, but now someone else will have to sweep up where Hatch left off.

For 22 years the 75-year-old street sweeper has kept the pathways and streets clean in this popular vacation spot. His job is crucial because the island allows no cars and horses are the main form of transportation.

BUT HATCH is retiring from his 11-hour-a-day job Nov. 11 to allow a younger person to push the broom and shovel past the rustic businesses on this Lake Huron Island between Michigan's peninsulas. No successor has been found, but Hatch said there should be plenty of candidates from the amateurs who help him each year.

"I'm a product of the Roaring '20s," Hatch said. "I figure it's time for the late 20th-century generation to take over. Besides, somebody might find a way to mechanize me out of this job, even on Mackinac Island."

ISLAND BUSINESSMEN recently honored him with a retirement dinner and a check for $850. But he didn't stay for the festivities, saying he had to get up for work the next morning.

The Sugar Island native came to Mackinac in 1954 after trying careers as a lumberman and Great Lakes' sailor. Technology wiped out his jobs in both professions. He was given a position as street sweeper for $1.10 an hour, and decided to stay.

Although his main duty is sparing tourists the hazards of horse paths, he provides other services as well.

"He's a public relations man and guide rolled into one," said Jack Chambers, an island innkeeper.

"HE KNOWS MORE about island history than most of the natives and answers all sorts of questions asked by tourists. Actually, he's the most official looking person most visitors see."

Some tourists, however, consider Hatch more a butt of jokes than a source of information. Occasionally they borrow his tools and take snapshots of each other doing his job.

"Folks ridicule me sometimes," he said. "Seems sort of silly to me, but if they like it, that's their business. I just don't pay any attention."

Polls show Thompson lead

Charges fly in race for governor

by ROBERT KIECKHEFER

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The gubernatorial campaign between James R. Thompson and Michael J. Howlett already is starting to look like the mud-slinging, name-calling marathon Howlett and Gov. Daniel Walker staged last spring.

Charges of "gutter politics," political assassination and irresponsibility started flying in earnest last week as early polls indicated Thompson holds a strong lead over Howlett statewide.

The week got underway with Tony Kerner, adopted son of the late Gov. Otto Kerner, charging at a Democratic rally that Thompson rose to fame by walking a bloody path "strewn with victims." One of those victims, Kerner charged, was his father, whom Thompson successfully prosecuted on a racketeer stock-bribery charge. Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley introduced Kerner. Howlett also attended the rally.

Thompson said Kerner's remarks represented a "sharp, dirty turn" in the campaign and responded with a few charges of his own.

"From the mayor on down, they've started to focus their personal attacks on me," Thompson said. "I think that's gutter politics. I think it's desperate politics."

THOMPSON HINTED he believes Daley was responsible for Kerner's statements. If that is true, he asked, "Then, Mister Howlett, what kind of governor will you be? And what kind of role will he (the mayor) play in your administration?"

Thompson also noted disapprovingly that Howlett has several times recently referred to him as a "Nixon Republican."

The war of words continued later in the week when Howlett pledged that he will not raise state taxes if he is elected. Howlett said Thompson won't make the same pledge because he is "soft on a tax increase."

That tactic is similar to the one Gov. Daniel Walker used to defeat Paul Simon in the 1972 Democratic gubernatorial primary. In that campaign Simon said he felt that if any tax were increased, it should be the income tax. Walker used a quick media campaign to convey the impression that Simon planned to raise taxes.

Thompson has carefully avoided the trap by simply refusing to answer what he calls "the Paul Simon question." Asked about Howlett's statement about him he said simply, "Irresponsible."

The Howlett-Walker primary clash featured charges of "racetrack politics" and vulgar epithets. Even Daley said he was surprised by the low level of the campaign and Thompson said shortly before the primary he felt the Democrats had "gone at it with such ferocity that they've damaged each other in the process."

THERE WERE SOME substantive proposals during the week's campaigning.

Howlett told a meeting of the Illinois Broadcasters Association here he can promise not to raise taxes because normal growth in the economy is enough to pay rising costs of government. He said state taxes have grown 9 per cent a year since the income tax was passed.

Thompson released his 10th lengthy position paper — a document about welfare abuses and problems — during a "flyaround." He said the state must take new approaches to the problem of welfare fraud and cheating and help recipients achieve the "pride and self-respect that only productive employment brings."

Howlett, in speeches in Chicago and Decatur, also urged greater utilization of Illinois coal in conjunction with nuclear power development. He suggested that the state Department of Conservation be reorganized to end political control of that office. During a Rotary Club speech in Batavia he repeated his call for a return to two-year state budgets.

In other campaign developments during the past week:

• Thompson aides released a poll showing their candidate 15 percentage points ahead of Howlett, 52 per cent to 37 per cent. An earlier Thompson poll showed a similar point difference, but with more undecided voters. Thompson's polls show him with less of a lead than one done for the Chicago

CHRISTENING CAMPAIGN airplane, Democratic vice presidential candidate Sen. Walter Mondale pours a bucket of champagne over side of plane. Christened the "Minnesota Fritz," the United Boeing 727 was baptized at Midway Airport where Mondale picked up the airplane for its first campaign flight to Springfield, Ill.

Tribune. The Tribune poll showed the GOP candidate ahead by 24 points.

• Democratic attorney general candidate Cecil Pardee said in Quincy he will permit state agencies to run their own legal staffs if he is elected. Pardee said his Republican opponent, Atty. Gen. William Scott "has stated he has the sole right to represent all agencies of government," but in cases involving more than one agency "has repeatedly maintained that it is his right to also decide which agency he will represent or if he will represent an agency at all."

• Republican campaign officials announced Vice President Nelson Rockefeller and GOP vice presidential candidate Sen. Robert Dole will attend an Illinois "Salute to the President" dinner in Chicago Oct. 7.

• Republican Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey said his Democratic opponent, Edward J. Egan, was ordered by Daley to give up his job as appeals court judge to run for state's attorney.

"The explanation is simple," Carey said. "What Daley gives, he can take away." The state's attorney's office can be a sensitive one for the Daley organization, since an unfriendly incumbent can use it for embarrassing investigations.

• Leaders of the Political Honesty Initiative, after failing to get three proposed legislative ethics amendments on the November ballot, announced they will ask legislative candidates to endorse their goals and will work against those who refuse.

• The Chicago Tribune said Teamsters leader Louis Peick, whose union has endorsed Howlett, has donated $10,000 to Thompson's campaign.

• F. Joseph McCaffrey, the Libertarian party gubernatorial candidate, urged repeal of all drug abuse laws and said as governor he would pardon all drug offenders now in prison.

He said antidrug laws are simply another form of prohibition and cause more crime than they prevent.

Waterfront ruffians replaced by wealthy

URBAN DECAY almost robbed Pittsburgh of one of its most fashionable and historic neighborhoods, the Mexican War streets. But a restoration project is now well on its way to reclaiming the BOSTON (UPI) — Gone are the ragged wooden wharves, the jostling, sweating merchants, the smells and men and darkness that put the waterfront of this bustling harbor town off limits for decades.

Scarred, rotten docks that served wooden clipper ships and steel hulled luxury liners alike for two centuries have been repaired.

Government, private enterprise and $140 million have taken the waterfront from the past and given it to the future.

Nearby marketplaces where fresh produce has been sold for 250 years have been restored.

CHANGE FOR the 104-acre harborfront, including 40 wharves and warehouses, began a decade ago. Most buildings were gutted and modernized from within, leaving red-brick exteriors untouched.

Many visitors to the area express astonishment as they wander through evidence of urban renewal at its best.

For investors, the long awaited harvest has just begun.

"I just don't believe 'this place,'" said Bostonian Ken Gurvin, glancing at greenhouse-style glass enclosing merchants' wheel-to-wheel push carts along the outside walls of 150-year-old Quincy Market.

"It's just incredible." SHOPS AND CONFLICTING smells from adjacent cafe-style food counters crowd the 500-foot long interior of the granite market building, replacing the musty, cluttered butcher shops and wholesalers that packed the building for decades.

The city's second mayor, Josiah

Quincy, had the green copper domed market built in 1926 as an "improvement, unexampled in its general character and not to be paralleled for its public utility." Some called it the nation's first urban renewal project.

New construction may not have ignited higher prices for Bostonians then, but the $9.5 million renovation in 1976 has.

Gold plated price tags are common at the market and along the waterfront now that the 20th century and antique chic have arrived.

"I don't know if I'd shop here," said Gurvin, a young financial analyst, "but it's a great place to visit."

THE UNINHABITED warehouse district and the men in tee-shirts that worked it have been replaced by posh apartments housing well-heeled men and women tailored collar to cuff.

A harbor view, two-bedroom condominium in a renovated warehouse with a yacht mooring below may cost $100,000 or more. A one bedroom walkup nearby may cost $450 a month.

Twin 40-story luxury apartment buildings tower over the renovated area.

The district's population, less than 1,000 six years ago, now numbers more than 3,400.

Low priced, after work cocktail hours at new waterfront restaurants draw customers from business districts blocks away. Many stay in the area for dinner, rather than hike to the center of town for less expensive meals.

A STEADY STREAM of interest in the district, evident over the past two years, has turned into a torrent in recent weeks.

On the first weekend the Quincy market was open in late August, thousands of city dwellers dodged thunderstorms to sample the results of years of careful planning. Whether they return remains uncertain.

"I can't afford any of this stuff," complained Marvin Carter, as he headed from the red-bricked sidewalks outside the new market to the familiar, crate cluttered Haymarket vegetable market across the street.

Contrast exists between the new market and the Haymarket, a crowded outdoor market that has served the area for decades.

"THEY CATER to different kinds of people as far as I can see," says Louis Jackson, a construction worker with six children who travels weekly from the Mattapan section to haggle at the outdoor market. "I think the two places complement each other well."

Prices and styles compete. Apples selling for 25 cents a pound at the Haymarket sell for 25 cents a piece across the street at the new Quincy market.

Food is the mainstay of Haymarket. Antiques, bric-a-brac and handicrafts fill the tables outside the renovated market.

The prices at Haymarket are shouted and haggled as they have been along the waterfront for centuries.

At the freshly sandblasted Quincy market nearby, prices are posted, not discussed.

Dist. 59 OKs $17 million budget

by JUDY JOHNSON
A $17 million budget for the 1976-77 school year, which reflects a 4-1 per cent increase from last year's $16.3 million budget, has been approved by the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education.

The board Monday adopted the budget, which increased 3.67 per cent from the $16.4 million tentative budget put on public display in August. The adopted budget includes salary increases approved for all staff members since the tentative budget was reviewed.

The district estimates that the 1976 tax rate will drop by about 6 cents per $100 equalized assessed valuation from the 1975 rate. The 1975 tax rate was $2.50 per $100 assessed valuation. The district is projecting that the 1976 rate will be $2.53 per $100.

THE TAX RATE dropped because of a decline in the rates set for the bond and interest fund and the transportation fund. The bond and interest fund rate dropped by about 4 cents per $100 assessed valuation because the district's outstanding bonded indebtedness has declined.

The budget sets expenditures in the education fund at $12.2 million, a 4.97 per cent increase from last year's $11.6 million budget and a 7.22 per cent increase from the tentative $11.4 million budget.

Teachers' salaries, the largest item in the education fund, were increased by 8.2 per cent in the contract approved earlier this month. Administrators' salary increases averaged 6 per cent.

The district anticipates receiving $15.3 million in revenue from state aid, property taxes and other sources for the 1976-77 school year. Although a $1.67 million deficit is anticipated this year, the district plans to borrow $7 million from the working cash fund for the education fund and $1 million from tax anticipation warrants for the building fund.

In addition to the expenditures in the budget, the district must repay $4.65 million to the working cash fund this year that was borrowed for the education fund last year. The district also must pay back $455,000 borrowed in tax anticipation warrants for the building fund last year.

EXPENDITURES in the transportation fund also dropped by 1.28 per cent from $737,818 last year to $728,375 this year. The district expects the tax rate to drop by about 2 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

Expenditures in other funds are:

- Building fund, $1.24 million, down from $1.36 million last year.
- Insurance fund, up 42 per cent from $41,683 last year to $59,189 this year.
- Bond and interest fund, up 9.76 per cent from $2.26 million last year to $2.48 million this year.
- Retirement fund, down 2.62 per cent from $276,250 last year to $269,000 this year.

Deficit hits Dist. 26 after budget OK

by HOLLY HANSEN
A larger-than-expected deficit for 1976-77 will occur in River Trails Dist. 26 following approval of the district's $4.24 million budget by the board of education.

Board member Sylvia Lurie, chairman of the board finance committee, said the expected deficit has increased $27,000, from $145,000 in the tentative budget approved in August to $172,000 in the final budget approved Tuesday.

trict's declining enrollment will severely decrease the amount of state aid it can receive. (State aid is figured on a per-child basis.) The only solution, he said, is to pass a referendum for 1978-79.

The tax rate is expected to rise from $2.70 to $2.74 per $100 of equalized assessed valuation, Beaudoin said. This means about $4 will be added to the tax bill of a resident with a home assessed at $10,000.

cent, from $3.38 million spent in 1975-76 to $3.1 million budgeted for 1976-77.

ALTHOUGH TEACHERS' salaries were increased more than the district budgeted in August, "the deficit was not made significantly worse by the teachers' salary contract. We budgeted at (a) 5 per cent (increase) and settled at 7 per cent," Mrs. Lurie said.

The operations, building and maintenance fund rose 2.4 per cent. Its 1975-76 expenditures were $443,927 and $454,526 is budgeted for 1976-77.

The transportation fund showed a 20 per cent increase, from $137,444 spent in 1975-76 to $165,135 budgeted for 1976-77. Higher busing costs and more trips needed to bus Park View children to their new schools caused this increase, Beaudoin said.

THE TAX RATE will rise 5 cents in the life safety fund because of new life safety improvements, he said. There will be a decrease of less than 1 cent in the bond and interest fund levy, he said.

The board finance committee has recommended that a citizens committee be formed to study the district's financial options, which include increased borrowing, decreased educational programming and higher taxes.

Contracts for 1976-77 have been settled with the teachers and maintenance personnel since the tentative budget was approved. The tentative budget contained only estimates of what the salary settlements would be.

MRS. LURIE said at the board's meeting Tuesday that the deficit will be covered by transferring money from the district's working cash fund, a type of internal bank account built up over a number of years. Money can be borrowed by other budget funds but eventually must be repaid.

Mrs. Lurie said the district's working cash fund, which contains $241,750, will be depleted to about $70,000 once the funds are transferred.

Expenditures have exceeded revenue in Dist. 26 since 1974-75, said Ralph Beaudoin, business manager. The deficit is expected to be about $250,000 for 1977-78, and the district will have to borrow from "the outside" to cover it, he said.

In 1978-79, "the revenue line goes to hell," he said. At that time, the dis-
